Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY GETS HOME

Having been so kindly warned by his friend, Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear gentleman, about the danger of the snowslide on his road home, Uncle Wiggily was driving his automobile along the back way.

The rabbit gentleman was feeling kind and happy, as he nearly always did, and his pink nose was twinkling fast to keep it from freezing. Also Uncle Wiggily had a good feeling inside him as he thought of how happy he had made Widow Jack Rabbit and her little bunnies by bringing them carrots.

"Poor old Jack Rabbit," thought Uncle Wiggily as he drove along and remembered how his friend had been shot by hunters last season, leaving his wife a widow and the little bunnies half orphans. Of course, being a half orphan rabbit isn't as sad as being a whole one, like Baby Bunty.

"Jack was a good old scout," mused Mr. Longears. "Many a fine run we had together. He was champion carrot eater of the Orange Ice Mountains. Well, I suppose the hunters will get me some day."

Then Uncle Wiggily began to whistle merrily, which shows that he had a light heart. He was driving his funny automobile along quite fast when he happened to think he had better go a bit slower.

Dangerous Places

"There may be a dangerous place along this back way," said the rabbit gentleman to himself. "Thanks to Mr. Whitewash I didn't run into the snow slide on the main road. But there may be one here. I'll go slower." So he sprinkled salt on the bologna sausage tires of his auto and that brought down the speed.

Meanwhile, as you may remember from the story last night, the Police Dog, with Buster and Custer, two of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit boys, had put a barberry bush, with gleaming red berries at the edge of the snow slide hole on the main road.

They knew the lights of Uncle Wiggily's auto would gleam on the red berries and be a danger signal to him. Thus he wouldn't run off the road into the deep hole caused by the slide, or avalanche, as they are called in Switzerland, where the Swiss cheese lives.

Just as he was going to drive back to the bungalow, with Buster and Custer in his radio car the Police Dog said:

"Boys, I just happen to think your daddy might come home by the back road. He sometimes does. We'd better see if that is safe."

"Hurray," cried Buster and Custer. Not because they wanted their Daddy to run into danger, but because they were happy they could ride farther in the radio car with the Police Dog.

Quickly the Police Dog called over his radio transmitter a message to headquarters that he was going to put a danger signal on the back road if one was needed.

"O. K. Car 37"

"O. K. Car 37, O. K. Car 37," answered the Sergeant Dog.

It was a good thing the Police Dog thought of this. For a big rock had fallen off a hill down in the middle of the back road and Uncle Wiggily might crash into it as he came along.

Just as the signal bush was in place along came driving Uncle Wiggily. His auto's headlights gleamed on the red berries. Quickly Mr. Longears stopped. Then the Police Dog told him what had happened. He guided the bunny safely around the danger rock. Buster and Custer hopped into their daddy's auto and soon they were all safely home.

"A most jolly adventure," chuckled Mr. Longears. "It will make a good bedtime story, I hope." Well, did it? Anyhow, if the pickle fork doesn't scratch the leg of the table I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's cold ears.

CITY COUNCIL NAMES HEADS OF COMMITTEES

Only Two Changes Made In Personnel Of Chairmen At First Meeting

ALD. GORDON WELCOMED

Reorganization Of Board Of Works Is Urged By Mayor Macdonald

Only two changes from last year's personnel of chairmen were made at the inaugural meeting of the city council this morning.

Alderman A. McIntyre succeeds ex-Alderman F. T. Tuggey as chairman of the Property Committee, and Alderman R. M. Glover takes the place of Ald. McIntyre as chairman of the manufacturers Committee.

Reorganization of the Board of Works department, of which Alderman M. R. Sloan is again chairman, was suggested briefly by Mayor Macdonald and Alderman Stocker, and enlarged upon by Alderman Dutton who said he intended to "harass that hard" as an improvement in economy and efficiency this year.

Alderman G. N. Gordon, K.C., returned to the council after an absence of sixteen years, taking the seat formerly occupied by ex-Alderman Tuggey. Otherwise the membership was the same as in 1936.

Mayor Macdonald's inaugural address, outlining some of the problems which the council would probably have to deal with, was preceded by invocation of God's blessing and guidance on the council by Rev. J. D. Paterson, president of the Ministerial Association of Peterborough, who read verses from the third chapter of St. Luke's gospel. Rev. Mr. Paterson also prayed for divine help in behalf of His Majesty King George VI.

Invitation Appreciated

After reciting the Lord's Prayer, concluding the little ceremony of solemn appeal, Rev. Mr. Paterson said that the invitation of the Mayor and Council was greatly appreciated by himself and the members of the Ministerial Association. Continuing he said that for a long time there had been a deep desire to build the city of God. In that hope the verses from St. Luke suggested three fundamental principles, brotherhood, honesty and justice, and it was in our own day that these principles were being emphasized in their reverse order.

In the days of the Great Charter the people petitioned the King for justice. In a later day the principle of honesty was given prominence, and now in our own generation there was a deeper spirit of brotherhood as the ruling spirit of our time. In looking over the records of the past it was found that these were the three ruling principles of the nation for a very long period. The source of all true wisdom, Rev. Mr. Paterson said, and of honesty and justice and brotherhood between man and man was from above, and "so we open the new administration of the city with prayer." He also suggested that there was no reason why every session of the council should not be opened by pausing for a few minutes in prayer, asking Divine guidance.

"I throw out that suggestion and I am sure that every minister in the city would give his fullest co-operation," Rev. Mr. Paterson said.

The thanks of the council were expressed to Mr. Paterson by Mayor Macdonald who expressed approval of the idea of prayer at the opening of all the meetings.

10 Montreal Night Club, Cabaret Owners Nabbed For Ignoring deadline.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11 (CP)—Ten Montreal night club and cabaret owners will be brought into court this week on charges of disregarding the city's 2 a.m. "curfew law," police said last night.

Police claim the 10 persisted in permitting dancing and vaudeville in their places after the deadline despite repeated warnings. Proprietors assert they were willing to obey the edict on slack business nights during the week but refused to do so on Saturday nights, when patronage is at its best.

Canada May Bar Enlistment In Spanish War

Action Backing Britain Likely To See New Act Drafted For Occasion

Present Law Applies Only To International Strife, Not Touching Civil Conflict

NO VOLUNTEERS KNOWN

Members Begin Arriving For Opening Thursday—J. W. Farris New Senator

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—(CP).— The Cabinet will meet to-day for the second last scheduled council before Parliament opens Thursday and reports were current a new and unsuspected piece of legislation arising from the Spanish Civil War might be placed before members.

The government, it was said, might find it desirable to strengthen the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1871 barring Canadians from taking part in conflicts against nations friendly to this country.

Following the United Kingdom's action, announced last night, of invoking its Foreign Enlistment Act to prevent its nationals fighting for either side in the Spanish conflict, it was learned Canada's Enlistment Act applies only to International warfare and does not cover Civil War.

Legal observers here said it would be necessary to amend the Act or pass new legislation before Canadians could be barred by law from participation in the Spanish conflict.

However, a check of well-informed persons in military circles showed none knew of any Canadians going to Spain.

New B.C. Senator.

The government last night announced its choice of John Wallace DeB. Farris, former Attorney General and Labor Minister of British Columbia, to fill the Senate seat left vacant last summer by the death of Hon. Charles McDonald, who had held it less than a year.

Announcement that the distinguished British Columbia, Dominion Vice-President of the Canadian Bar Association and President of the Bar Association of his own province, had been called to the Senate reduced to two the number of official vacancies in that chamber. The other vacancies, both in Quebec, are expected to be filled before the start of the session.

Meanwhile members of both Houses arrived in great numbers over the week-end and moved into their winter quarters. Those who have not already done so will have to take the oath of allegiance to King George. They took the oath last year to former King Edward.

OTTAWA TO SLASH ITS RELIEF GRANTS TO THE PROVINCES

Rogers Believes Reductions Justified By Extension Of Business Recovery

FORESEES CONTINUATION

TORONTO, Jan. 11 (CP)—Relief grants-in-aid to the provinces will be substantially reduced in 1937, Labor Minister Norman Rogers told the Canadian Club here today in what he called an "interim report" of the Dominion Government's progress in dealing with unemployment and relief last year.

"I believe these reductions will be fully justified by the extension of business recovery, by the marked improvement in municipal tax collections and by the improved financial position of most of the provinces," the minister said.

All governments—Dominion, Provincial and municipal—must accept their full responsibility to reduce relief costs during the present year."

Mr. Rogers said, however, a "supreme effort is still needed before we can remove unemployment and relief from the agenda of unfinished public business." He was unable to subscribe to "some of the more ex-

Empire Prime Ministers King's Coronation Guests

May Establish Precedent By Being Housed In Buckingham Palace

ATTEND ROYAL DRIVES

LONDON, Jan. 11—(C.P. Cable)—For a few days immediately before and after the Coronation, the Canadian and other Dominion Prime Ministers will be the personal guests of the Crown. Where they will stay has yet to be determined, but it is possible a new precedent will be established in housing the Prime Ministers at Buckingham Palace.

In any event for these few days they will have Guardsmen on sentry duty beneath their windows daily and nightly, betokening the receipt of royal hospitality. The Premiers probably will participate in Their Majesties' two drives around the metropolis the same week and also will attend the post-Coronation Thanksgiving service at St. Paul's.

Thereafter, for the duration of their stay when they will be engaged in Imperial Conference deliberations, they will occupy less august quarters as distinguished guests of the British Government.

First Royal Levee February 9

The King will hold his first levee February 9 at St. James's Palace and investitures on February 24 and 25. The first two of the season's courts probably will be held May 5 and 6.

The long stretches of the roy parks facing the Coronation rou already are presenting a stark appearance, with gaunt ribs of tubular metal erected as foundations for spectators' stands. To protests that the spring beauty of the parks hitherto one of London's chief glories, has thus been spoilt, it is officially stated that no flower beds were planted this year, but that the flowering capabilities of future years is unaffected.

FARM RESIDENCE IS PREY TO FIRE

Home Of Joseph Keller Near Campbellford Is Completely Destroyed

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 11.—Fire of undetermined origin, completely destroyed the farm home of Joseph Keller, a mile and a half southwest of Campbellford between 8 and 9 o'clock this morning. Mr. Keller has his hands and face painfully burned in an effort to save some of his furniture. The loss is estimated as around $2,000, partially covered by insurance.

There was no one in the house when the fire broke out. Mr. Keller and his boys had been working at the barn and when he returned to the residence and opened the door he found the interior ablaze. Only a few articles of furniture were saved.

ABANDON MADRID IS FINAL COMMAND GIVEN POPULATION

Men 20-45 Only Exception—11,000 Casualties Reported Both Sides In Week

DEFENCES HOLDING

By Jean Decros
(Copyright, 1936, Havas News Agency)

MADRID, Jan. 11 (CP-Havas)—Compulsory evacuation of Madrid's civil population was underway today as the city's defenders steeled themselves for further insurgent assaults.

The evacuation of civilians—excepting men between the ages of 20 and 45—was proclaimed obligatory in a decree published by the Madrid defence Junta, headed by General Jose Miaja. Those who disobey the orders will be considered dissidents and be judged by emergency tribunals, the decree warned.

At the same time the Leftist command claimed wave after wave of "German shock troops" and other insurgent contingents had broken futilely against the government lines west and northwest of the capital after a week of intense fighting.

Although a lull in the fighting prevailed over the week-end this was not taken as an indication that the insurgent offensive had been definitely checked. On the contrary, Leftist military leaders were fully prepared for new onslaughts.

NEW ULTRA-VIOLET LIGHT KILLS FLU

May Be Set Up In Hospital Operating Rooms, Babies' Wards

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 11.—(AP).— A new ultra-violet floodlight which promises to curb flu, the common colds of winter indoors and more dangerous airborn diseases was set up to-day for "field" tests on human beings.

The light was developed at the Harvard School of Public Health by William F. and M. W. Wells. It kills flu virus and other disease bacteria.

It was ready to-day to be switched on for the first time, setting up a "barrier" of invisible light across the middle of a hospital corridor. The barrier divides the infectious diseases in one wing of the hospital from those in the other. Nurses can walk through it, but infections can't float through.

The flood lights have been installed also in surgical operating rooms in two large eastern cities. They fill the upper portion of the room, above the surgeons heads, with the germ killing rays.

In a third eastern city, the lights soon will be placed in a hospital babies' room. They will fill the air above the infants' cribs and the nurses without touching the occupants with the dark beams.

VIOLENT DEATH TAKES TOLL OF 8 OVER PROVINCE

Icy Waters Claim Three, Cars Two And Fall Under Train One

TWO FOUND SHOT

Stratford Girl 12, Drowns In Fall Through Ice—Barrie Youth Similar Victim

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—(CP).— Icy waters, train and auto accidents took their toll in Ontario during the week-end as eight violent deaths were recorded. Two persons drowned when treacherous ice plunged them into the water; one person was killed in a fall under a train; two lost their lives in auto mishaps, two were found shot to death and one body was taken from a canal where it had been for several days.

Ann Duffus, 12-year-old Stratford girl, died in Avon river's cold waters yesterday after falling through the ice while her father, J. S. Duffus, clung, unconscious to her body and her mother collapsed amid the throng on shore. Two young companions, Edith Mercer, 12, and Christine Sayers, 14, were snatched from the frigid river by rescuers, two of whom suffered ill effects from the cold.

Rescuer Goes Delirious.

Norbert King, who rescued one of the girls, became delirious at his home from the effects of the chill water and William "Sky" Easson, former Ontario Hockey Association president, was placed under medical care.

Mr. Duffus, manager of the McLagan Furniture Company, plunged into the water after his daughter, clung to her even as she sank and was dragged to the surface by rescuers, the girl's body still in his grasp.

Mr. Duffus, unconscious when brought ashore, recovered at his home where his wife was in a nervous state after witnessing her daughter's death. The Sayer girl told her parents they had made the trip on the ice "just for fun"—a lark that brought half a dozen men plunging through the ice, fighting up to their necks in the cold water in a vain atempt to save Ann Duffus.

Skating Tragedy at Barrie.

A skating party ended in tragedy at Barrie when Richard James Hepplestone, 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Hepplestone of Barrie, plunged through Kempenfeldt Bay's thin ice. His body was found in 25 feet of water by Barrie Fire Department members, and Coroner Dr. W. G. Little decided an inquest unnecessary.

The youth was skating about 400 yards from shore with Miss Violet Coe, 19, of Barrie, as scores of revellers skimmed over the ice nearby. A hockey stick handled expertly by daring Fred G. Skinner, 25, saved Miss Coe from death. Skinner shoved the stick into her hands, as she struggled in the water and despite the cracking ice dragged her to safety, suffering from shock, but otherwise unhurt.

Miss Coe said the drowned youth worked himself into exhaustion trying to push her out of the water where they had fallen when the ice gave way beneath them.

Lad 17 Found Shot.

William Reid Siesser's body was found in a barn on his father's farm in Kincardine township, Bruce county, a bullet wound in the head and a rifle nearby. The

GOERING TO VISIT DUCE

Ten More German Subs Arrive At Ceuta—Berlin Press Attacks France

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—(CP-Havas).—A pledge to respect the present status of Spanish Morocco was given France to-day by Chancellor Hitler.

After a speech before the diplomatic corps at his delayed New Years' reception, Hitler assured French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet that Germany does not intend ever to question the integrity of Spanish possessions.

In turn, the French Ambassador assured Hitler that France also is firmly determined to respect the territorial integrity of Spain and Spanish Morocco as provided by existing agreements.

FRANCO TO INTERVENE.

PARIS, Jan. 11 (A.P.). — Authoritative French sources said to-day they considered that Spanish Moroccan officials had made a tacit promise to get Germans out of the Northern African zone and to prevent "new" German troops from landing.

Reading between the lines of Tetuan denial that any "regular" German soldiers were in Spanish Morocco or were "expected," these sources said the Spanish Moroccan insurgent commissioner could hardly admit the presence of Germans in violation of treaties.

It now is up to General Francisco Franco as to whether he will carry out what they consider to be a promise to end a reported German incursion in Morocco, French officials said. They added they were willing to give him "a few days" to act.

But, with the general staff reported considering the contingency of "necessary" French armed occupation of Spanish Morocco, Foreign Office authorities made it plain they would stand firm for ejection of the Germans, whom they contend have gone to the zone for both military and commercial purposes.

France Ready to Act

PARIS, Jan. 11—(A.P.).—Drafting a second and stronger warning while the General Staff laid plans for the emergency of a French occupation of Spanish Morocco, officials said France's next move depended entirely on reports from Northern Africa.

France, they declared, will act promptly if these reports indicate German troops are landing anew in Morocco while the Germans already there remain.

A source close to the Foreign Office said a new note was ready for delivery to the Spanish insurgent high commissioner at Tetuan, Spanish Morocco, declaring explicitly that landing of large bodies of German troops would be the signal for French invasion of the Spanish zone.

(Officials in Berlin denied knowledge of the reported German infiltration, and the press countercharger in big headlines: "Secret intention of French General Staff annexation of Spanish Morocco planned!").

While the international atmosphere already troubled by the Spanish civil war, was clouded further by sensational German press attacks on France, cabinet ministers cut short their vacations and returned to the capital.

10 Nazi Subs at Ceuta

PARIS, Jan. 11.—(C.P.-Havas)—Ten German submarines have arrived at Ceuta, Fascist controlled port of Spanish Morocco, it was reported here to-day. The presence of The Reich undersea craft was reported by the Tangier correspondent of the newspaper Paris-Soir.

The correspondent said that three French naval units manoeuvred along the Atlantic seaboard of Spanish Morocco yesterday. A British seaplane from Gibraltar flew over these waters while the exercises were in progress, he said.

Goering To See Duce

BERLIN, Jan. 11—(A.P.).—General Hermann Goering, highest Nazi official next to Chancellor Hitler, will leave for Rome to-morrow on what diplomatic circles believe is an "important mission" in connection with the Spanish crisis.

An official announcement by the German News Bureau described Goering's prospective stay in the Fascist capital as a "vacation."

60 BARELY ESCAPE AS FLAMES SWEEP HOTEL IN SUDBURY

$250,000 DAMAGE

SUDBURY, Ont., Jan. 11—(CP)—Attempts at determining their exact losses were made today by owners of seven Sudbury business establishments that had been wiped out by fire. While firemen still poured water on the ruins last night cost of the destruction was set at approximately $250,000.

Principal loss was that of J. P. Coulson of Ottawa, owner of the New American Hotel in which all the other business places—five stores and a restaurant—were situated. Coulson, who thought value of the hotel would be $150,000, planned today to rebuild.

Starting early yesterday, the blaze drove 60 guests and employees to the street in panic. Many of them were clad in night attire. Fire Chief William Andrews was overcome by smoke and Fireman George Noble was slightly injured in fighting the flames. Police Chief David Louden suffered several cracked ribs when struck by falling bricks as a wall collapsed.

Clerk Saves Many Lives.

Hero of the fire was James Davey, night clerk at the hotel, who rushed through the corridors awakening guests as the flames spread. When his shouts of alarm were not answered he kicked in doors, sometimes dragging guests from their beds.

Racketeers Start Fireworks On Shaking Dempsey Down

14 ALREADY INDICTED

NEW YORK, Jan. 11—(C.P.). — Jack Dempsey, the old Manassa Mauler of the prize ring, has been "shaken down" for $285 in protection fees for his fashionable Eighth Avenue restaurant by racketeers, it became known during the week-end. He has lined up with Special Prosecutor Dewey in what he termed "a fight to the finish" against the mobsters.

He was somewhat sheepish when he admitted having paid out the $285 to a representative of the racketeers who are said to have taken $2,000,000 from Manhattan's restaurant operators in the last year.

"But I hope that's the last dollar anybody must pay to racketeers infesting a legitimate business," he said.

"When Special Prosecutor Dewey sounds the gong in Supreme Court next Monday with Justice McCook the referee, we restaurant men will fight back, round by round, until the racket is buried beyond recall."

Fourteen men have already been indicted as members of the restaurant racket, and will appear before Justice McCook January 18.

Duce Visits Theatre On Workman's Ticket

Rome, Jan. 11 (A.P.).

PREMIER Mussolini, in ordinary street clothes, bought a workman's ticket to the Argentina Theatre, Saturday, entered quietly and seated himself between two women laborers. He received an ovation when recognized after some moments.

The occasion was the first "Theatre Saturday" designed by the Government to provide opera, plays and musical comedies at low prices—10 cent top and 2 cent minimum.

Genuine Stage Bath Scene Gives Broadway A Thrill

MANY SUSPECT TRICKERY

Long before the opening in Philadelphia it was known the script called for an actress to take a dip in the tub. Broadway refused to believe the scene would remain in the comedy beyond the opening night, and, truth to tell, though the conservative Quaker City playgoers were properly stunned to see a fair daughter of Venus soap herself before their very eyes, they enjoyed the experience along with the censor, who found nothing scandalous about this stage adventure.

Blase New York took the scene pretty much in stride, though obviously enjoying the novelty.

Many suspected scenic trickery. Others suggested the beauteous Miss Lawford was clothed for the bath. Both were wrong, for the actress actually makes full use of the tub.

However, instead of being immersed in water she lies in a sea of soap bubbles, pumped into the tub by an electric blower through a tube. Thus down front or in the balcony, the audience sees the shoulders, head, arms and one dainty, waving limb—along with a great mass of bubbles.

Propertyman Frank Hughes, responsible for the contraption, is certain the electric pump will not break down. What would happen if it did, and the supply of bubbles be cut off, he said "Would be too frightful to contemplate."

BRITAIN TAKES ACTION

Forbids All Foreign Enlistment —Sends New Pleas To Powers

LONDON, Jan. 11 (A.P.) — Four high ranking admirals of the Royal Navy have been called to Gibraltar, it was learned to-day, in advance of the spring manoeuvres of the Home and Mediterranean Fleets around the Spanish and Moroccan danger zones.

Adding to the significance of the conference was the reported presence of Lieut.-General Sir Charles Bonham-Carter, Governor of Malta, Britain's great Mediterranean naval base.

While London coupled the meeting of the Admirals with the return to London of Prime Minister Baldwin to meet his Cabinet, Great Britain again took the lead in a desperate attempt to keep Spain's Civil War within the peninsula.

Japs Assisting Rebels

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 11 (CP-Havas)—Lieut. General Sir Charles Bonham-Carter, Governor of Malta, arrived here today as reports that Japanese are pouring into insurgent-held Spanish territory added to the international aspects of the civil war.

Some reports said 3,000 Japanese are expected shortly at Cadiz and Jerez De La Frontera in southwestern Spain.

Reuters News Agency dispatches said insurgent authorities were reported taking all necessary steps to receive 5,000 Japanese volunteers expected to arrive this week at Cadiz and Jerez.

Both Cadiz and Jerez are about 70 miles northwest of Gibraltar.

Foreign Enlistment Taboo

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Britain placed an absolute ban on enlistment of her citizens on either side and dispatched a new note to the five principal powers involved, asking them to do likewise.

The British note, sent to its ambassadors at Berlin, Rome, Moscow, Paris and Lisbon, sought to plug the stream of volunteers to Spain without waiting for the slow-moving efforts of the non-intervention committee.

In effect, Britain demanded that interested powers stop intervention at once, if they are sincere in their professed desires to do so.

Officials were optimistic there would be no flat turn downs, but it was regarded as unlikely Chancellor Hitler would be favorably inclined to the new gesture. He set out definite conditions for his participation in any non-intervention scheme in answering a previous demand.

Italy Shying Off

Rome was expected to act in close harmony with Berlin, but here the complicated picture took a new turn when the important political Review Il Merlo emphasized Italy was not favorably inclined to having Germany established as a power in the Mediterranean through Moroccan influence.

France, Government sources said, already had agreed to the ban on volunteers and was devoting her attention to the reported influx of Germans into Morocco. Her Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets were steaming to the troubled waters near Gibraltar.

Messenger's One Yell Routs Two Robbers

Ottawa, Jan. 11 (CP)

POLICE today are searching for two unidentified youths who attempted to hold up an 18-year-old messenger Saturday evening and fled when the messenger proved intractable.

William Hamelin, the messenger, seized one of the hold-up men, who threatened him with what he thought was a revolver, and shouted lustily. Both hold-up men fled and Hamelin rushed into a near-by house to telephone police.

WEEK OF PRAYER CLOSES AT MADOC

Attendance Very Badly Affected By Icy Condition Of Sidewalks

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, January 11.—The meetings of the Week of Prayer ended on Thursday evening and owing to the poor condition of the sidewalks, which have been heavily coated with ice, the attendance was much poorer than anticipated. Tuesday evening was at St. Peter's church, Wednesday at Trinity and Thursday evening at the Church of St. John the Baptist, all the ministers taking part.

Two New Faces

At the inaugural meeting of the village council of Madoc two new faces will be seen at the meeting on Monday, January 11th.

Robert F. Bristol will take his place as Reeve, being elected by 29 of a majority, and Jack Henderson, Jr., takes his place as a new councillor. D. Barry and G. West were last year's councillors and C. M. Wallbridge was Reeve for the past 3 years.

The non-commissioned officers and men of B Company of Hastings and Prince Edward Company Regiment held a very successful dance on New Year's night at the Armouries in Madoc. The music furnished by Denmark's Aces was thoroughly enjoyed, and a specially large crowd was in attendance.

Bob McCoy, one of the twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Carl McCoy, has returned from Belleville General Hospital, and is recovering splendidly after an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whycock, of Niagara Falls, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. James Whycock.

WESTERN STORM TOLL RUNS OVER 19

30 P.C. Young Lambs Killed, Citrus Crops Hit Hard, Scores Of People Marooned

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 11.—(AP). — Snow - marooned scores were brought food by plane and ground parties and the wintry storm toll in the west counted at 19 or more as defenders of Southern California's $100,000,000 citrus crop were cheered by forecasts of rising temperatures.

The death list included seven in California, four in Arizona, three in Utah, and five in Texas.

Sixteen thousand frost-fighting orchardists relaxed after three consecutive nights of smudging and counted losses from sub-freezing weather, unofficially estimated at 15 per cent of the orange crop and even more of the lemons.

In the unusually mild Sacramento Valley, far to the north, blizzards left highways blocked and caused a heavy loss in lambs. Sheep raisers said the storm, striking during the lambing season, claimed probably 30 per cent. of their young stock.

Elsewhere in Southern California mountains, rescue parties brought supplies to scores marooned by deep drifts. Flying National Guardsmen dropped foodstuffs for 35 men at an Inyo county sulphur mine. Four families in the Greenhorn Range also received food from the air.

Nine Missing At Mine.

A second flight on Sunday failed to locate nine persons at a mine in the Gold Range area 150 miles north of Las Vegas, Nevada.

Two deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning by gas heaters were reported as chilled Los Angeles residents tried to keep warm. Six persons were rescued by inhalator squads. Two were fatally burned when their clothing was set fire by open gas heaters.

In Imperial Valley, rich producer of winter vegetables, a temperature of 21.5 degrees broke all cold records for the 23 year history of the weather bureau.

Northern California reported two storm deaths Saturday. In Arizona where two persons previously were found frozen to death, search and hope were abandoned for two lost Indian girls.

RESPECT FOR LAW CANADA'S BULWARK

Chief Justice Holds It Is Foundation Of Our Domestic Peace And Security

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 11 (C.P.). — The foundation of domestic peace and security in Canada is built on respect for the law and for the courts which administer it, is the opinion of Hon. Newton Rowell, Chief Justice of Ontario.

Speaking at a dinner in his honor here on Saturday night, Chief Justice Rowell said it was the duty of those who loved liberty and believed in enforcement of the law as opposed to arbitrary power to support Canadian institutions and maintain respect for the courts.

The dinner for the Chief Justice completed the one-day annual mid-winter meeting of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association. About 400 jurists and lawyers from all parts of the province with numerous other prominent figures in the judicial and political life of Canada paid tribute to Mr. Rowell.

Comparing the "rule of law" as now developed in the British legal system with that prevailing in Europe and some communities in the United States, Mr. Rowell said it was easy to appreciate "the blessings" enjoyed by Canadians.

"Another important protection of the individual against arbitrary action lines is the independence of the judges in the exercise of their judicial functions which makes possible the safeguarding of the life, liberty and property of our citizens against arbitrary and unlawful action."

THE BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By Walter S. Masterman

CHAPTER 35

"We must stop Graham from using his bloodhounds to track down Sylvia and the children," Reid said. "Selden, I rely on you—it would be fatal."

"Leave that to me," Selden said. "You are not in a condition to worry about things."

"Didn't you say that you had been in the village ever since the murder, or did I imagine that?"

Selden smiled. "It was just as well that I was. I came to see you last night and waited here for you. I didn't know you were moving to the Abbey, but I did know that you were dining with Colonel Graham."

"If you hadn't come, I shouldn't be talking with you now," Reid said grimly.

"I am going to call on our friend, Colonel Graham—I rather want to see his staff and that curious room you told me about."

"You've got some idea on this whole affair—you must have!" Reid cried restlessly. His head ached horribly, and he felt that fever was coming on again.

"You want a good rest."

"I can't sleep with this thing constantly in my mind. You can trust me—what do you think is the meaning of it all?"

Selden remained silent for a few minutes, smoking furiously.

"Well," he said at last, "we are in this thing together. I will only point out these curious facts, then you must sleep.

"First, let me call your attention that when Sir Henry's father died the estate was absolutely impoverished—I have found out all about that. Then Henry Severinge returns in time for his father's death, and has a very large fortune. Where did he get it from? It may have been quite straightforward, but, if so, why does no one know anything about it?"

"I follow you there," Reid said intently.

"Now see what happens. At the start everything in the garden is lovely—Henry brings James here, who had been with him all his grownup life, and establishes him really as manager and confidant. Don't interrupt—I've found out all that. Now James has got something like 130,000 pounds in the will."

Reid half rose. "What—are you sure?"

"Quite," Selden laughed. "Large sum, isn't it?"

"But why should he leave it all to him?"

"Friendship, perhaps; but there is another possibility. Soon after Henry Severinge returns, Colonel Graham, his old friend, also throws up his commission and settles down at Paynton Manor."

"You think there is a connection?"

"Wait; let's get on with the facts as we know them. I said Henry started off well—he married a pretty young girl with no money, and takes her all over the place—abroad, and also has a house in London and entertains. Then he throws up everything and becomes a sort of hermit."

"But surely there was a reason for that?" Reid said gravely.

"You mean Colindale and Sir Henry's wife. I don't think so. What would a man like Severinge do? You know the breed—wouldn't he either kick Colindale out of the house, or, more likely, leave them to it with a scornful gesture, and go off again on his wanderings?"

"It's possible."

"It is more. Don't you think he made that an excuse? When there was an attempt on his life in the garden, he took to the house—and it was then that Colonel Graham started keeping bloodhounds."

"Good heaven, what are you hinting at?"

"I may be all wrong—I am clearing my own mind by talking to you. Doesn't it look as though he drew himself into the house and caused people to think that he was almost an invalid, possibly to deceive someone—remember, he had large funds with which he could have gone away, or"—he sunk his voice—"paid off a blackmailer?"

"Selden," Reid exclaimed excitedly. "I believe you've hit on something. Perhaps he had arranged to meet the blackmailer when he went to his death!"

The detective smiled. "Not so fast. There are very big objections. Would he have gone unarmed and in his pajamas and alone?"

"And there is the question of how the murderer got into the house?" Reid muttered.

"I'm not going to talk any more or do any speculating." Selden said with a laugh. "I've only given you facts, but I'll give you one more. Those bloodhounds would hardly leave the study—a very private room, remember—and were sniffing all over the place. It may mean nothing, but it may be that there was a meeting there, and it took some time."

"Then James was there," Reid said quickly.

"James was undoubtedly there; when he returned Mrs. Thornton, the late housekeeper, met him coming back, if her word is to be believed."

"And while the conference, or whatever it was, was going on an attempt was made to abduct the children." Reid slipped it out before he thought, off his guard.

"You know that?"

"Sylvia told me," he said.

"We must have another talk, then, when you are better," Selden said, regarding Reid with a curious glance.

"Sir den, don't think I am keeping things from you. When I'm feeling strong I'll tell you all I know." He hesitated. "A thought has just come to me—a wild idea. You know that cross on the altar—I believe it is very valuable."

"So much so that the late baronet had pawned it, and this one got it out."

"Do you think it possible that Sir Henry went to the chapel to fetch that, as the only actual valuable possession in the house with which to buy silence?"

"Ingenious—I must consider it. One other matter and I have finished. Either the will of Sir Henry was unknown to, let us call them the assassins, or they imagined there was some kind of entail, or how can one account for these attempts to get hold of the twins?"

"Blackmail, perhaps?"

"But they had killed the goose that laid the golden eggs. No, it's no use conjecturing, and I feel that although we have a glimmer of light, there are very dark patches and we haven't got at the truth by any means."

Selden's departure plunged Reid into a fit of despair. James could not come and there was no one to help, and the haunting fear of those terrible bloodhounds tracking down Sylvia and the children. He would have got up, but had sense enough to know that he would be useless in his present state and that the sooner he recovered the better. He drifted off at last into an uneasy sleep.

Selden was ushered in at Colonel Graham's house by the Indian servant, Ramdas, and conducted to a comfortable though barbaric study. The color scheme was dreadful—flaming reds and greens — and trophies of fearsome-looking weapons crowded the walls. The bright green carpet and red walls suggested a battlefield, and the red and yellow chairs might have been dead men if seen in a dim light.

Selden was staring at the place with an unpleasant feeling of being in the house of a savage, when a voice behind him spoke. He turned quickly and saw the lean, cadaverous face of the old soldier, who had entered by another door, silently and furtively.

"Good afternoon, Colonel," he said abruptly, hardly caring for this stealthy method of approach.

"So you have come back at last," the Colonel said. "Hutchins told me that you had been sent for."

"I came at once; this latest development is serious—it looks like an attempt to get hold of the children."

"It certainly does look rather like that," the Colonel said with a thinly veiled sneer.

"Well, it may not be a bad thing," Selden said, watching the other keenly. "Perhaps the finding out about this may lead us to the discovery of the murderer."

"Extremely likely—but I am forgetting my manners." He clapped his hands, and Ramdas entered as though pulled by a string. The Colonel made some remark in Hindustani, and the servant salaamed and went out. Selden hid a smile at these obvious tricks, and gazed out of the window as though admiring the garden, but his eye was on the shutters—massive and iron clamped and deeply set into the stone walls.

"I hear," he said, still with his back to the Colonel, "that you had rather a nasty experience last night with young Reid."

Graham laughed a little harshly. "Deuced unpleasant for me. Silly young devil got the window up and tried to run away in the storm for no earthly reason. He got hurt in falling over the trunk of a tree."

"He's badly scared and has learnt his lesson. What in the world made him try to get out of your house at all?" Selden was watching the other through half-closed eyes.

"Goodness knows—he says he found that the door handle wouldn't turn, or some such nonsense," Graham said scornfully.

JANUARY WEATHER RECORD IN TWEED

Temperatures Range Up To 51 Degrees—Moira River Open

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Jan. 11.—The first nine days of January have presented one of the rainiest and mildest periods on record. In this period a total precipitation of 1.64 has been recorded of which 1.17 inches fell on the seventh and eighth. Only three inches of snow has fallen during the present spell, and this was recorded on the 2nd. Rain or snow have been recorded on six days while only one day has been classified as clear.

Temperatures have been high, with the highest to date being 51 degrees recorded on the 8th, while the lowest of three degrees above was recorded on the 6th.

The Moira River is clear of all ice in the village limits, and as a result of the mild weather has taken a considerable rise. Although the ice is soft onshore on Stoco Lake, good skating is being enjoyed on the outer stretches of the lake. Practically no snow and only a few patches of ice are visible in this district.

ly-won government positions on Mt. Naranco, overlooking the city of Oviedo from the northwest, had been crushed with heavy losses to the assailants.

The government advance in the Pola De Gordon sector, about 18 miles north of Leon, capital of the northern province of the same name., is continuing, it was said.

"You must abandon Madrid, you must seek refuge in the interior where the danger is less," Major Lister, head of one of the military sectors of Madrid, declared in a broadcast yesterday regarding evacuation.

This address coincided with a proclamation to the defending forces by General Miaja in which he declared the insurgents had not counted on such stubborn resistance as that which met them.

"In addition, they are aided by Germany, Italy and Portugal," he said. "Therefore, we must continue to resist."

11,000 Casualties

General Miaja announced casualties in the heavy fighting of the past week probably would reach 4,000. He said the ranks of German troops fighting with the insurgents had been thinned considerably because of their tactics of charging in close formation.

(Insurgent officers estimated Socialist losses on the Madrid front in the same period at nearly 8,000 men, including 1,300 killed.)

RED CROSS MARKS FAITHFUL SERVICE

Mrs. W. Lean Presented With Silver Tray By Apsley Branch

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, Jan. 11.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Red Cross Society, Mrs. T. H. Lean, the president, on behalf of the members of the Board, presented Mrs. his foot so severely that the big toe tary, with a silver bread tray engraved with the following inscription:

"Presented to Mrs. Wellington Lean in appreciation of ten years' faithful service as secretary of the Apsley Red Cross 1926-36."

Mrs. Lean, in acknowledging the gift, said it had been a pleasure to give her services to the board, and assured the members that she would continue to do everything in her power to further the interests of the Outpost.

Cut His Foot Badly.

Hugh McColl met with a severe and painful accident while chopping wood. The axe slipped and cut W. Lean, former honorary secretary was almost completely severed. He was rushed to the nearest doctor (at Lakefield) in a state of collapse from loss of blood, and will remain for several days for treatment.

Doctor is Needed.

Efforts are being made by the Red Cross Society to have a doctor take up residence in Apsley. Since Dr. Manning's departure in the fall, this district within a radius of thirty miles has been without the services of a medical man, and the society recognizes the seriousness of the situation.

Strike Mediator

Known at the best mediator in the United States labor department, James F. Dewey (ABOVE) has tackled the automobile deadlock by an attempt to get leaders of opposing forces to talk things over. To this end he had obtained the promise of union leaders to meet with William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president of General Motors. U.S. mediation is now seen as the only hope of averting a tie-up of General Motors' 60 plants.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 11.—(CP).—Oysters "grow" on trees in the Everglades National Park near Miami, Ernest F. At this time the infant oysters take hold of the roots and branches of the Mangrove and cling. When the tide is out they are left high and dry, many clusters suspended several feet from the water."

Use For Christmas Cards.

A use for Christmas cards that means their interest and beauty need not be wasted, but can help to brighten drab lives in other districts, has been found by Mrs. Williams of 609 Sherbourne street, Toronto, who makes scrap-books of them and Sunday School lessons too, using parts of old and torn prayer-books for the reading matter beside the picture on the card. She has illustrated the whole Gospel story in this way many times and these books and story-books go to the prairies, where, according to those who have visited the drought-ridden sections of Western Canada, many of the women rely on friends in the East for the only glimpses of brightness or color in their lives. A Peterborough woman who has a brother living in Saskatchewan, a professional man whose funds are insufficient to allow him even the cost of subscribing to a newspaper, saved carefully all the accounts of the King Edward Eighth abdication and its prelude, knowing that he would be glad to get the news of a world event which would be old stuff to most of us in the East. This writer can also remember, when visiting some years ago at Gore's Landing, meeting there a woman who was snowed in in her isolated homestead, for most of the winter, and found a great deal of diversion out of the Eaton and Simpson catalogues which she scanned again and again through the long, cold months.

So the pretty Christmas cards which are shovelled, with a touch of regret, into the furnace, after the Yuletide season has passed, may be used to brighten dull and lonely lives with their beauty and charm, either in Ontario itself or in the Great West, where the Sunday School By Post will distribute them.

Fashion Service

It is just as much at home on the golf course, and the tennis courts as it is on the beach. Furthermore, it may go to town for luncheon or shopping.

It's suitable for mature figures as well as very young.

It's princess, very flared and nipped in at the waist. It buttons right up to the shirt collar. The shoulders are neatly squared off with the inset cuffed sleeves. The accompanying shorts are side-closing.

There is much enthusiasm for the peasant cottons for the beach and for sports for this type of costume.

This princess dress is also surprisingly warm for cold winter days in sheer wool. In aqua, gold or bright green, it can be worn right through the spring.

Style No. 3251 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches bust. Size 36 requires 4¾ yards of 39-inch material for the entire outfit.

Contrast Is Tops for Skiing Suits

Left—Gold wool twill jacket, brown buttons and belt, brown plus fours, hand-knit mittens. Right—Navy wool gabardine ski suit, fur mittens and skull cap.

WHO STARTED all this great big outdoor stuff, anyhow? How many of your mothers, you grown-up girls, could skate? They probably never heard of skis when they were girls. Coasting they did with many shrieks and giggles, and roller skating was a genteel sport.

And now, everyone rushes out in the open and sports with skates and skis, dressed in garb that would have scandalized grandma. It's great stuff, and confirms one's confidence in the younger generation.

tweed, sometimes twill, or again, weatherproof cotton. This contrast is shown in the figure at the left of the picture. The jacket in this case is gold wood twill with brown buttons and belt, which harmonize with the brown plus fours. Plus fours, by the way, have returned for winter northern sports and for southern resorts, too. This model wears hand-knitted Norwegian mittens.

The second suit is of navy wool gabardine, and it's a classic. The contrasting jacket is the latest in ski clothes. Sometimes it is jacket, slightly fitted at the waist, buttons high, and the trousers are of Norwegian type. A skull cap and fur mittens complete the outfit.

The fur-trimmed suit is also smart for the intrepid skier. One suit we saw was a parka of weatherproofed cotton gabardine with hood and pockets edged with wolf.

CENTENARIAN HAD AN EVENTFUL LIFE

BRANTFORD, Ont., Jan. 11.—(CP)—Mrs. Janet Van Sickle who as 15-year-old Janet Woods left Scotland 85 years ago to make her home in Canada today completed the first century of her life by being "at home" to her friends.

Mrs. Van Sickle said she has had her full share of adventure during her lifetime. The ship on which she came to Canada nearly foundered during its eight weeks' voyage and the passengers were called upon to man the pumps. Small pox broke out during the trip and the ship was quarantined on arrival at Quebec.

Later in life, as a settler's wife in Onondaga Township, Brant County, she returned home from a shopping trip to find her house in smoking ruins.

Her faculties still keen and an avid reader of newspapers, Mrs. Van Sickle closely followed the recent constitutional crisis in Great Britain. She said she had every sympathy for the Duke of Windsor in his self-imposed exile.

Mrs. Van Sickle lived in Toronto for 20 years and at present has one daughter, Mrs. W. J. Davies, residing there. In addition to Mrs. Davies three other daughters, Mrs. A. E. Adams, with whom she lives, Mrs. J. J. Burke and Mrs. P. E. McIntyre, all of Brantford, were present for the birthday reception.

POET HAD TWO SUITS

LOS ANGELES, Calif—(C.P.).—William Thomas, 82, who was a butler in Robert Browning's London home, recalls the poet had but two suits, a "little gray one" and his evening attire. Browning permitted callers one day in seven, he says.

For a nourishing and warming drink before bedtime, add a stick of ground cinnamon and sugar to taste to a glass of milk and bring to boiling point. Remove cinnamon and serve warm.

Scare, Thrill For Debutantes At Their First 'Drawing Room'

Over 60 Young Canadian Women Make Bow To Society Friday Night

NONE DURING 1936

OTTAWA, Jan. 11 (CP)—Sixty or more young women today look forward to making their initial bow to society and to Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir at the official "drawing room" to be held next Friday night in the senate chamber. The event for them will be a great occasion and a considerable ordeal.

The debutantes, given their first opportunity in two years of appearing at the drawing room, will find the event scaring and thrilling, the most brilliant affair of its kind in this country. It was not held last year because official Ottawa was in mourning for King George V.

"You get down there (the Parliament Buildings) about 8:30 in the evening. You see all the people you know, looking very gorgeous in flowing white, complete with feathers, hair beautifully waved and faces 'on' perfectly.

"But now comes the struggle. There are long corridors to be traversed and everybody is eager to get there. You try desperately to protect your feathers, your train and your makeup, all seemingly to no avail.

"Men are trying to smoke and the smoke gets in your eyes. People tread heavily on your train and jostle your feathers.

"Then, quite suddenly, you are in the drawing room. The strong light beams down on you and you begin to feel excited and forget that you are sure your eyes are red and your feathers drooping.

The Critical Moment

"Two attentive guards arrange your train and you advance between two lines of guards. You try to look dignified and suddenly are in front of the dais.

"There is one last desperate thought: 'Which foot goes behind, the right or the left?' (It is the right.) Then you find, miraculously, that after all those hours of waiting, you are actually there, have executed your two curtsies, first to the Governor General and then to his lady, without mishap.

"Now you can retire to a little platform behind the guards where you can watch and admire the curtsying and bowing with an easy mind. Now, too, you can really see the representative of the Crown and his wife. You couldn't before because you were curtsying and didn't dare raise your eyes.

"I enjoyed it ever so much, but I wouldn't want to be presented every year. The strain would be too much."

Weddings

CROSBIE—DAVIDSON.

MARMORA, Jan. 11. — The following wedding report is the substance of the account given in the Peace River Record of the marriage of a former Marmora girl, and will be of interest to many readers of this paper:

"The wedding took place at the home of J. H. Davidson, Bluesky, on Tuesday, December 22, of theli second oldest daughter, Lillie May, and Myron Everett Crosbie of Fairview, Alberta. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Thomson of Fairview United Church.

"The bride was becomingly attired in white crepe back satin with silk net veil, and carried a bouquet of lily of the valley and lilacs. She was attended by her sister Doris, who was prettily gowned in peach crepe back satin. Mr Joseph Lutz of Bluesky was best man.

"Following the ceremony, the wedding luncheon was served to immediate relatives and friends at the home of the bride's parents, and later in the evening a reception was held in the Community Hall, Bluesky, when the young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome leather purse to the bridesmaid a gold compact and to the best man an initialled leather belt. Mr. and Mrs. Crosbie will leave Bluesky early in January for their new home at Banff, Alberta.

BANCROFT

ARE HONORED AT FAREWELL PARTY

Police Constable And Mrs. Morris Feted By Bancroft Friends

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BANCROFT, Jan. 11.—A large gathering of Bancroft and district citizens assembled on Wednesday evening to bid farewell to Provincial Constable Morris and family before their departure to a new field of labor at Bowmanville.

The farewell party was arranged by George H. Brown, Miss K. Joynt and Mrs. Harry McCaw. The hall was becomingly decorated with balloons and red and green streamers stretching from the walls to the central electric ceiling bulb.

Taken completely by surprise, the guests of honor were escorted to the Community Hall, where a large crowd of friends were indulging in bridge and euchre. On their appearance in the hall, the orchestra played "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here," with the assembly present singing the chorus, followed by "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

The prizes for bridge were carried off by Mrs. E. McColl and Dr. O. W. Anderson, while the euchre prizes were won by Mrs. William Davy and Mr. Reg. Wiggins.

Following a dainty plate lunch, Dr. Lumb, reeve of Bancroft, called the large assembly to order and read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Morris and presented them with a beautiful Westminster chimes clock. Master Donald Jones made the presentation of a purse and little Betty Brown presented Mrs. Morris with a beautiful bouquet of red roses. Round and square dancing followed to the strains of music from both Grant Gordon's orchestra and the Vagabond Troubadors. At 2.30 the playing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King" brought to a close the very happy event.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris, who have made a large number of friends in the business and social circles during their sojourn of seven years in Bancroft, will be greatly missed. All wish Mr. and Mrs. Morris and family health and success in their new environment.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

IF I could choose the greatest joy,
That life can give,
I'd ask that I may be some use to others while I live.
I'd ask that somebody might feel
Their need of me,
That mine might be a heart to show,
True sympathy.
I want no greater joy than that someone should be Gladder to live, and stronger too,
Because of me.
—Mary Eversley.

Dear Friends:

This is a letter of thanks for all the kind messages and gifts which my unknown, unseen friends sent to me at Christmas time. You will never know how much it warmed my heart, to feel that I was in your thoughts at that time, enough so that you sent me so many things which I could enjoy, and all your dear wishes for me.

And for those of you who sent me letters of appreciation throughout the year, my thanks wing out to you also. Believe me when I say that if I have been of help to you, you have been of great help and encouragement to me.

To, "M.D." and "Ruth" I send special thanks. How you have found my home address I do not know, but it is alright anyway. But I will go on encouraged all through the year, knowing I am enshrined in your hearts as you tell me I am.

The old year is dead, with all its troubles and trials, all its sadness and disappointed hopes. Let it die. We are not alone in having had sorrow. All over the world I am sure there are people who will say like me, that it was one of their worst years. But what of it?

We have the assurance that at last we re turning that "corner" we have all heard so much about, so let us be alert and ready for the good that is coming to us in '37.

And so, instead of writing more (for my heart would fain be in my ain country with my own folk this day) I will give you this:

"We yet can triumph. We have tried and failed
And tried again and fail'd again and tried,
Many a time I've wish'd that I had died
Before I saw the light. But though I quail'd,
Yet have I stubbornly my fate assailed
With dazed determination, dignified
With prayer and gratitude, and always cried
Thy will be done, O God! And God prevailed.
We cannot always choose; it were not best:
God knows; and if we trust, all will be well.
I pray it with shut eyes and open mind.
I want, be it with all my soul attest,
Nothing that will not ultimately tell
To the eternal good of all mankind."
—Paul Shivell.

At this time of the year I crave more than ever to see my own people even for a little while, but so far it has been impossible, and so I yearn in fancy towards them, and picture what they will be doing, and know that they shall talk of me, who are so far away.

So, I will wish you a happy new Year. A year full of fine things, of hopes fulfilled, of dreams come true. I hope that God will bless you and prosper you, and that is no empty wish. With Moore I wish for you:

"As half in shade, and half in sun
This world along its path advances,
May that bright side the sun's upon
Be all that e'er shall meet thy glances."

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

ROBERTA'S MAIL

Dear Roberta:

Just a short letter of thanks for all the help you have given me. I am a mother, and many of the things my children would resent if I said them, they now read in your column, and you will never know how much good you are doing. My husband likes the editorials and laughs heartily at some of the doings on the Tenth Concession, yet I see him often reading your column also. Altho' I do not know you, yet I feel you are a friend, and I thank you and Mr. Kennedy whom I do know for all the help and comfort I have received from your writings.

From "Mum."

Dear "Mum",

So glad that I have been of help to you and your children. Now that you have written, I hope you will do so again. Why not let the editor know his friends appreciate him? Or maybe you have done so already. Thank you, and do write again. The article you asked for, will appear soon. —ROBERTA.

Dear Roberta:

I am a woman away off in an isolated part of the country. Like you, I used to travel, and I get so much pleasure from your daily articles especially those on travel. I feel so defrauded when they leave your column out, as it means so much to me, and to many like me. Whenever a few of us meet, we always talk about Roberta, and you have many friends in this part of the country, but never having written to a newspaper, they hesitate to do so. But whether they write or no, they all appreciate your work, and wonder that one small brain can contain so much.

Very Sincerely,
"Almond Blossom."

Dear "Almond Blossom,"

Thank you indeed for your lovely letter. Yes I know what it is to live in isolated places, and shall write on these things at an early date. I am so glad I have pleased and interested you, and shall write more travel talks soon. Do write again, and if you enclose stamped addressed envelope, I shall reply personally. Hoping you have a glad New Year.
ROBERTA.

Dear Roberta:

I am writing for a group of girls in an office, and we all wish to say how we enjoy all you write. If every mother would keep herself as up to date as you do, there would be less friction among them and their daughters. You can see our view-point as well as your own, and altho' you may be older outside, you are still young inside. Thank you for all the help you have given us, and long may you be spared to write for the Peterborough Examiner. We all miss them when they are left out, and after all we women are entitled to one column we like. But maybe you are ill and that is why we do not see them? Please write an article on England, as my mother comes from there.

From "Violetta" and her friends.

Dear "Violetta,"

What a nice compliment you have paid me. I had just been telling one of my friends that I would never let myself grow old inside, and along comes your letter. No, my dear, if you wrote before I never got your letter, else I would have answered it. Thank all your girl friends and tell them it just seems like yesterday since I worked in an office too. Am glad if I have been of help to you, and do write again.—ROBERTA.

Dear Roberta:

I have a suspicion that you are Scotch from the way you write of it. At any rate you must love it as we do, and how we all appreciate your articles each day. (That is when they are not left out) Whereever you go, you hear people talking about Roberta and the good she does. Please write on.....and accept thanks for all the help we have received from you.—"Scotch Plaid."

Dear "Scotch Plaid,"

As I have Scotch, English, Welsh, and Irish blood in me, as well as living for a quarter century in Canada, I feel I am like the Union Jack as far as nationality is concerned. I could not print all you wrote, but will write on what you ask, so look for it soon. It is good to get letters like yours. Thank you, and do write again.—ROBERTA.

Teachers Elected to Council

At the municipal election in St. Catharines two school teachers were elected as members of the city council, and the claim is now made they are not eligible for the office because they have contracts with the municipality. There was no question raised regarding their right to run at the time of nomination, nor were they questioned afterward. Not until their election was announced was the question raised. We gather that the final decision in St. Catharines will depend upon the view of the County Judge and legal opinion seems to be that one of two things could be done (1) the teachers could be sustained, or (2) they could be counted out as aldermen and the next two candidates in order of standing declared elected.

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review brings in the case of a school janitor whose nomination for council was at first refused, but afterward he was allowed to run. In the election he was defeated, but his defeat does not in any way affect the issue or settle the question of his eligibility for office. In another city of Western Ontario the point was raised several years ago as to whether a person receiving relief from a municipality was eligible for candidature to the city council. Those opposed held that at all intents and purposes such an individual had a contract with the municipality; he had signed statements showing his inability to earn a living and the municipality as the other contracting party had agreed to supply his wants. On that was based the claim that such an understanding constituted a contract. The argument on the other side was that the relief recipient was selling nothing to the municipality, and that his misfortune did not constitute a valid reason why he should be asked to forfeit his rights of citizenship, and the latter point was the one finally accepted.

The St. Catharines Standard believes there is not sufficient clarity in the present rulings on the matter, and there is point in such contention. The Standard has apparently found a difference of opinion among legal men on the standing of the two teachers who were elected as members of the city council. Where such uncertainty exists it is evidence that revision or more clarity should be written into existing regulations.

Where There Are Two Laws

A man from Clinton, in Huron county, appeared before Magistrate J. A. Makins in court at Goderich charged under the L.C.A. with unlawfully keeping liquor in other than the place in which he resides. Counsel for the accused raised an objection based on the plea that the charge had been laid under the Liquor Control Act, whereas the Privy Council had given a decision that Huron county is under the Canada Temperance Act. The ruling of the magistrate was that the charge had been properly laid and his wording was: "I will have to find that the Liquor Control Act is in force in Huron County."

If there were to be a conviction such procedure would have to be followed, as the L.C.A. is the one enactment which at the moment has behind it all the necessary implements of enforcement. Apart from that the situation is just another reminder of the fact that two laws cannot operate well in one community. It puts the magistrates in the position of having to set aside the ruling of the Privy Council in order to secure proper action where there has been an infraction of the law.

Alone at the End

An unidentified man of about 70 years died in St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto. A writer on the Globe and Mail says hundreds of people called to try and identify him, and there were queries coming from outside the province from points as far removed as Kirkland Lake, Kingston and Windsor. It was suspected the dead man might be a father, brother, husband or friend. One woman called and said her husband, who was in the 70 class, had been threatening to go off on a spree and she had not heard of him for five days. Many old men came saying they had missed a "buddy" at some of their familiar haunts. But none was able to identify the man.

The number of inquiries about this man of 70 years made it certain there must be many men of that age with no fixed abode. They are wandering. Their relatives are aware of it, otherwise there would not have been the number of inquiries regarding the man of 70 who had died. One explanation given is that since the coming of the Old Age pension there are those who prefer to go and live alone rather than stay with their children or other relatives. Prior to receiving a pension they may have felt they were not welcome, and when the financial security of a pension came their way they were able to pull out and live their own lives.

But even with that explanation there is something sad and unnatural about so many folk of 70 being alone. It does not fit into the picture of things as they ought to be. If there are sons and daughters then it means they have not lived up to old and honorable standards of family life; they may be hard pressed themselves, but there probably were days when their parents in the same position sacrificed much for them. There is a good share of veiled tragedy in reading of a man of 70 dying in a hospital and after all manner of inquiry failure has settled upon the effort to identify him.

One May Explain the Other

The speed with which strikes are making their way across United States is not pleasant. The automobile business is hard hit; there are strikes in shipping which have been on for over two months; loggers and bushmen are quitting and many of the cotton mills are tied up. At the end of the week it was stated 150,000 employees were out of work and the number is growing.

There has been considerable said and printed about the presence of agitators in industrial centres, but that explanation is hardly sufficient. We take it the average worker in United States is at least sensible. He is not going to quit work merely because some outsider comes along and suggests that he should follow that course.

It is only a few days ago that a list was released from Washington showing the salaries of many of the leaders in United States industry, and the figures were enormous. Many of them were more than any man could possibly use wisely or well. Whether there is any connection between these huge executive salaries and the number of strikes in United States today is something which would be difficult to prove, but it is also something which cannot be laid aside as having nothing to do with the situation.

Lunched at the Imperial

Report from Vienna says two ex-kings, Edward of Britain and Alfonso of Spain lunched together at the Imperial Hotel in that city. They would not be the first of the reigning class or those who had ceased to reign who had gathered at the Imperial. Proud old place it is, and the local standing is that it was regarded as the down-town rendezvous of the last of the Hapsburgs.

There are a number of Canadian newspaper people who will recall with interest and enjoyment the hospitality which was extended to them during their stay in Vienna several years ago and an official dinner at the Imperial was one of the events not readily forgotten. There were cups and saucers used in the lounge at the Imperial after dinner which were exquisite, and the information was given that they could never be replaced. On that occasion the cutlery on the table, including the many knives, forks and spoons used on such an occasion was of gold. It seemed to be the one place in that great city where evidence of the glory of the days when Vienna was the centre of Austria-Hungary still remained. It was the Vienna correspondent of the London Daily Mail who informed us that one who knew Europe well could remain in the rotunda of the Imperial for a while and see more of the great and past-great men of Europe than at any other place of which he had heard.

The former kings, Edward and Alfonso, are rather fortunate that they can afford to lunch and chat at the Imperial in Vienna, for that city has within it a great company of gay folk who used to do such things prior to the war but they can do them no more.

Financing a University

Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the University of Toronto, gives warning that the present high standing cannot be maintained unless funds are increased. Last year there were 7,987 students enrolled.

Toronto as a city does nothing toward financing the University which bears its name, and yet Toronto receives a tremendous advantage from having the university in its midst. It is much less expense for a family in Toronto to send its children to university than for families living elsewhere. Toronto receives a great deal of revenue in a good many ways by reason of it being the seat of the provincial university.

The city of London, where the University of Western Ontario is situated, has done a great deal for the university there. It was made possible in the first place by generous grants from private citizens, and for a good many years the city council passed an annual grant for the financing of the school. But Toronto as such does nothing for the university in its midst, although the feeling is quite general that it should have done so long ago.

All Had a Swell Time

In the Huntsville Forester there is some news from Martin Siding, and explanation is offered that it should have appeared last week. But it is good enough for this week. Here it is:

The annual Christmas entertainment was given by Miss Myra Johnson and her pupils in Silverdale Hall on Monday evening, the 21st. The following program was delightfully rendered. Rev. A. Laycock occupied the chair, and all went merry as a marriage bell. The play, "Hidden Treasure," was excellent, and applause greeted each act. There appeared in one scene an old Indian chief and several ferocious looking pirates, with Captain Blackbeard at their head; he was in characteristic costume, his head-dress bearing the usual skull and crossbones. Consulting several charts a hidden treasure was unearthed in an old lady's orchard. Treasure consisted of bags of gold coins and jewels. The old lady was about to lose her home on account of a debt she was unable to pay, when presto, she was fabulously rich! The scheming lawyer acting for the bank to whom the debt was due, was sent about his business in a hurry.

We read too that all present had a swell time and a lunch. And we say "Good for the people at Martin Siding who can gather together in Silverdale Hall and provide their own entertainment." We would like to congratulate the pirates, the hero, the wicked lawyer and the old lady who was saved from miserable poverty in old age.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A speaker says that the traffic laws are for everybody. That's all right then for nearly everybody is breaking them.

Toronto Chinese has been arrested for running a lottery. The police apparently think that operating such things is a prerogative of the native-born alone.

A FINE PLACE

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My friend from Thistleville was in, I always like to chat with him, he lives upon a hill; he talks of Thistleville each time, where his affections seem to twine, and he has some to spill.

¶ There's no relief in Thistleville, that nestles sideways on a hill, all have enough to eat; and all have clothes enough to wear, to shield them from the winter air, good shoes upon their feet.

¶ They have no unpaid taxes there, which struck me as a strange affair, they pay them in the fall; my friend explained the reason why, the taxes never went up high, in fact they're very small.

¶ No bailiff comes to Thistleville, no goods are seized upon the hill, they've pleasure there and ease; my friend explained that all to me, he said as plain as it could be, there's nothing much to seize.

¶ There's no police in Thistleville, no robbers come out there to drill, they haven't done so yet; they have no guns all primed and trained, and that was easily explained, there isn't much to get.

¶ The world of grief has had its fill, it has not bothered Thistleville, they live remote from scares; they do not lock their doors at night, nor move along the streets in fright—they mind their own affairs.

Enforcing Laws Might Help Some

(From the Brockville Recorder and Times)

OFFICIALS of the London, Ont., Motor Club, commenting upon the wave of reckless driving, often with fatal consequences, that has made its appearance, express the opinion that "the only apparently effective way to curb such motorists is to take away permanently their right to drive. Their cars might as well be confiscated and sold for the benefit of public charity."

While such a step may be considered by some people too drastic a remedy for the situation that has arisen, it is all too apparent that the authorities must deal more rigorously with those convicted of glaring evasion of the traffic laws if they wish to see the roads made safer and the accident toll decline. Those responsible for the enforcement of the traffic laws and the courts dealing with offences under them have been pussyfooting on this question for a considerable space of time and it is very doubtful if many of those allowed to go with trivial sentences for what are in reality serious offences have been taught the lessons that they deserve. It is by no means uncommon to have charges for serious traffic offences reduced lest the feelings of someone be hurt. Individuals found by the police to be intoxicated when in charge of motor vehicles are charged with reckless driving so that they will escape with a fine instead of having to go to jail. People apprehended when driving in a particularly reckless and dangerous manner are charged with some trivial offence involving payment of only a few dollars on their part. And quite frequently cars are impounded or licenses suspended for only a few days when they ought to be surrendered for months if not for life.

By permitting such practices, the Crown authorities cannot escape culpability for the situation that has arisen, and they are, moreover, distinctly discouraging to officers who are doing their best to enforce the law as they have been sworn to enforce it. Writing down charges does not, moreover, assist very materially in ridding the roads of the reckless daredevils infesting them. The drunken driver who escapes with a reckless driving sentence probably thinks that he will get off just as lightly the next time he is caught and he continues to take the wheel when intoxicated as long as he can get away with it, when a week or month in jail, whatever his social standing, would bring him to his senses and humiliate him as little else could.

The truth is that the authorities, sometimes with the connivance of the courts, are themselves to blame in large part for the added dangers to highway travel in Ontario. They are today reaping the harvest of light sentences and reduced charges and unless they change their ways, there is little possibility of the situation being improved. What is needed more than anything else in dealing with the minority that persists in conducting itself without regard to the safety of others on the road is not further education, because that has been tried and found wanting, but fearless enforcement of the laws that are already embodied in the highway code and an end of all the evasions that have been practised by the Crown authorities and the courts. Once a drunken driver knows for a certainty that he is to be charged with drunken driving and sent to jail for it, instead of escaping with a fine and a warning, drunken driving will lose its popularity, and once a reckless driver knows of an equal certainty that the Crown and the courts will make him pay very handsomely and take away his permit when he appears before the magistrate, reckless drivers will also have a tendency to decline in numbers. Administering the laws without fear or favor, making those who commit serious traffic offences realize that they are guilty of crimes which cannot be overlooked by society for its own protection, will help more than anything to make the roads safer. And it will also encourage the police to do their duty.

A HAPPPY PEOPLE.

(L'Evenement, Quebec)

IT IS yet too soon to pass judgement on the year which has just closed. It seems, however, that if peace has been in danger the world is lifting itself out of the crisis which paralyzed it since 1929. Here particularly progress is certain. Material progress is not happiness, but it is the first condition of it. That is why we salute with a gay heart the coming year. European conflicts may be disquieting to us, but they do not alarm us. More and more Canada stands out as a free country. Our willingness to work, our courage, our resignation in the face of inevitable trouble, our very situation permits us to look forward to the future with optimism, and to let others do the same. This is not egotism. It is wisdom.

CHANCE FOR SOME ONE.

(Belleville Intelligencer)

FIRST BABY born in Belleville this year is nameless yet. How would some of our readers like to have the babe named for them and endow it with something tangible to give it a start in life. The parents can not give the 1937 Babe very much, on account of lack of employment, and there is a great chance for a Godfather or Godmother here to pile up treasures in Heaven and blessings upon earth by just helping to give this Boy Baby a good start—this brave lad who arrived at 5.20 in the morning of New Year's Day. Who knows, he may be Premier of Canada some day, a great lawyer, a great preacher —a great Canadian of some sort and some one to be proud of. Let's give this boy baby a good start,—he arrived naked and needs everything. Let's hear from you—join the new Boy Baby Club and contribute something, if only a safety pin. Let's help this Belleville Boy Baby to be the Biggest Event of this year and each year to come. One of the first things necessary, apart from the wants of the Babe is a job for the father, a young man, a good mechanic, active, honest and industrious. He could be a very valuable employee for someone.

NEW USES FOR WOOD.

(Victoria Colonist)

SO MUCH is heard about substitutes for wood that there is a general belief that the daily use of it is decreasing. This is not the case, says the forestry branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The proportion of wood used in the modern building has already reached its minimum and is now tending to increase. More wood is used in the manufacture of automobiles than was ever used in making carriages and waggons. New uses for wood are being developed daily. Artificial silk, linoleum, explosives and many other products, to say nothing of the enormous annual increase in the use of paper made of wood, all tend to make this material more important.

To Avoid The Flu.

(From the Chatham Daily News.)

UNSEASONABLY mild weather has caused an epidemic of colds, influenza and pneumonia, especially in England and the United States, which is developing into dangerous proportions. In Greater London, England, it is said that every fourth person is suffering from the flu, and while the type of disease now raging is not as serious as that which prevailed twenty years ago, a large number of deaths have been recorded—enough to cause people to think seriously about measures of prevention. Over a thousand policemen in London, England, are off duty with colds, and thousands of other persons in the cities of the United States are being put to considerable pain, worry and inconvenience.

In Detroit where the disease has caused many deaths, Health Commissioner Vaughan issued some timely common-sense tips which should be useful and valuable to those who are susceptible to colds, and others who are anxious to avoid the epidemic, should it reach this city.

Here are the rules that Mr. Vaughan lays down to guard against the flu:

Avoid unadjusted exposure to the weather and over-fatigue. At a time like this, get more sleep than you do normally.

Eat normally of a moderate diet. Drink plenty of water, as much as six glasses a day. Avoid all excesses. Conserve your vital resources.

Avoid getting or giving infection. Wash your hands frequently.

If you have a cough or cold avoid uncovered acts of coughing, sneezing or spitting.

Don't blow your breath in other people's faces.

Much more advice could be given on this subject, but the person who follows the rules above set forth should have a fair chance to avoid contagion.

Live and let live, is an appropriate motto. Those who are unfortunate enough to catch the flu should protect others by showing every personal care. Those who wish to avoid the disease should take extra precautions to guard their own general health.

An Old Custom in Peril.

(From the Kitchener Record.)

IT WOULD be a disturbing thought to learn that the age-old custom of having a Christmas tree in the home would have to be discontinued. Yet we are told on good authority that the cutting of thousands of Christmas trees each year is playing its part in the creation of a menace which indirectly affects all of us, by causing drought in certain parts of the province.

Those who have studied the situation state that drought conditions are caused largely by the deforestation process which has been going on for many years. Large areas of swamp lands have been cleared for agricultural needs, and timber has been slashed down for commercial purposes.

This would appear quite the thing to do, but those who have given extensive study to the question say it is the very thing that is more and more causing drought in our agricultural areas. They cite specific areas suffering drought in 1936 to prove their point. The swamps and forests, they say, provide the duff, or ground covering of leaves, needles, etc., which holds the moisture supplied by rains and snowfall, assuring ample moisture during the growing season.

When an area is denuded or stripped of forest growth, there remains nothing but the soil itself to retain and hold the excess water for future needs. It simply runs off the land into the streams or rivers and is lost to the area.

Photographic proof of what happens to lands in such areas as a result of this wholesale land clearing are in possession of the department of forestry. This shows all too clearly what happens when trees are permitted to be felled without thought of the future.

The tens of thousands of Christmas trees cut each year in Western Ontario merely add to the menace of drought, and some day the practice may have to be drastically curtailed, or possibly abandoned altogether. The majority of these Christmas trees are from three to seven years old, and just attaining a size when their usefulness in retaining moisture is paramount.

One Western Ontario city had an over supply of 4,000 Christmas trees this season. This represents a slaughter of young trees, whose value, sentimental or commercial, was entirely lost. Multiply this loss throughout the province, and it becomes easier to believe that some day the age-old custom of the Christmas tree may have to be curtailed drastically.

Meanwhile the government encourages and practises reforestation on a large scale, supplying many thousands of young trees free each year to farmers for planting on waste land, cut-over areas and woodlots, in an effort to replenish the annual cut of grown timber. But even this effort is too slow to offset immediately the tremendous toll of trees which occurs every year.

Selling Our Farm Products.

(From the Windsor Star.)

ANY salesman in order to make a success of his business must be acquainted with his customers, know their likes and dislikes and be able to supply them with what they really require. The same applies to the trade carried on by Canada. This country is engaged in a large export business in agricultural products and it is vital that we be thoroughly acquainted with the foreign markets if we are to make the best of this business.

For this reason alone, announcement by the Hon. James G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture of a new marketing policy should be most welcome. Mr. Gardiner will shortly name several outstanding men whose duties will be to give intelligent direction to the export trade in many lines of agricultural produce. Mr. Gardiner hit the nail on the head when he stated:

"It is not sufficient to conclude mutually advantageous trade treaties. Widened markets resulting from such pacts are of little value without intelligent and continuous supervision of the flow of goods to those markets."

Canada, for instance, has fared well under the reciprocal trade pact with the United States. Our exports to that country have increased considerably, but there is ample evidence we have not taken best advantage of the concessions granted us under the treaty. Mistakes made in connection with export of cattle are cited as an example. Early last fall the quota on cattle weighing 700 pounds or more was exhausted, but a number of them should never have been shipped because they were of inferior quality. Had our exporters waited until condition of the stock improved, the whole transaction would have been more profitable.

With this new marketing policy, Mr. Gardiner is reported as being not much concerned about the decision of the Privy Council as to legality of the Marketing Act. Reports are that the Act is to be "junked," no matter what happens.

Mr. Gardiner should give this matter serious thought before making any definite decision. It is not denied that there are certain objectionable features about the Act, but, on the other hand, there is much to recommend it and it will be a matter of regret in many quarters if the good qualities of the legislation are not retained in some form or other.

TABLOID FOODS.

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

EATING is not only necessary but a social and pleasurable ceremony. Yet there are times when busy individuals or people going touring or staying at a remote lake resort might wish they could have their food in compact and easily manageable form, the ultimate minimum, perhaps, being a meal in a pill.

Experiments have recently been carried out in England with dehydrated foods, which, as successfully achieved, and for the manufacture of which a company has been formed, are the invention of a master mariner, P. C. Lavender, who, it is somewhat gruesome to note, derived the idea by seeing the mummies in the British Museum. He felt, so the St. Thomas Times-Journal says, that if human bodies could be preserved for thousands of years why could not food be preserved for weeks, months or years.

On display in a London office at the present time are three small bottles, each containing two ounces of powdered substance. One represents a pound of steak, and the others forty heads of lettuce and forty heads of spinach, respectively. There are strawberries shriveled and weighing almost nothing, which when placed in liquid resume their normal weight, taste and consistency. A black currant, dried for nearly two years, becomes tender and full-flavored when placed in the mouth.

As for the powdered foods, all the essential nutriment remains, and they can be used in many ways, say scientists. One method is to add water to make a paste for spreading between bread or biscuits.

The Lavender process has been applied most successfully to cattle foods. It has been found that cows fed on dehydrated foods give even more milk than those on pasture.

GOING TO A FIRE.

(Vancouver Province)

JUDGEMENT in costs has been given against the city on acount of a recent traffic accident, by which one person was killed and another injured by a fire truck going to a fire. Mayor McGeer suggests that the city charter should be amended, "to protect the city in future," and the city solicitor has been instructed by the council to prepare an amendment in that sense for submission to the Legislature.

Two members of the council opposed the instruction. They suggest that the proposed amendment would increase the hazards incident to the response of the fire department to the call of duty. They suggest, very simply, that "it is better to be late at a fire than to kill people."

And that surely is the simple statement of common sense and good judgment in this matter. The saving of life in preventable traffic accident is every bit as necessary and important as the saving of life in preventable fire. There is no need to suppose that the two preventions are incompatible with each other.

OUR INDIANS.

(Edmonton Journal)

THE FEDERAL efforts to better the position of the Indians have had good results in the Dominion as well as in the United States. But it is felt that much more could be accomplished for them and an enlarged program was announced at Ottawa the other day. The department will devote particular attention to improving their skill as trappers and to helping them to take better care of furs before these are marketed.

There are many other ways in which they can be given assistance that will enable them to reach a higher economic plane. The working out of the plans will be followed with keen interest, as the national responsibility for the welfare of the Indian population is widely recognized.

OTTAWA TO SLASH ITS RELIEF GRANTS TO THE PROVINCES

travagant" business forecasts made at the start of 1937.

Must Watch Extremes

"There is nothing more remarkable in political and business life than the swift changes in sentiment which sweep over the entire country," he said. "These alternate phases of extreme depression and extreme optimism have to be reckoned with in the conduct of government. . . .

"During the last six months particularly, we have experienced in Canada a remarkable return of confidence which has had its reflection in a substantial revival of industry and trade. On the whole we are justified in believing that this upward trend will be continued through the coming year.

"But the exciting glamor of returning prosperity must not blind us to the harsh realities of unemployment and relief or lessen our appreciation of the measure of the task that is still before us in dealing with this question. Extravagant optimism is as unreliable and dangerous to-day as extreme depression was unreliable and dangerous three years ago."

During 1936 the government made an interim increase of 75 per cent in grants-in-aid to provinces for the winter months, but Mr. Rogers said the government rejected a proposal for exclusive Dominion responsibility "on the long-established principle that provision of relief is primarily a municipal and provincial responsibility, and only becomes a Dominion responsibility to the extent that municipality and province are unable to cope with it."

gan carried his nine-months-old son from the flames. Then Flanagan, with A. H. Raby, Lessee of the hotel, stood guard to prevent guests from returning for their belongings.

Some of those who were driven out into the cold air lost all their belongings. They were being cared for today in a hotel a block away and in other buildings.

The fire broke out, supposedly in the kitchen, at 5.30 in the morning. It was discovered by Davey, who turned in the alarm and hastened to awaken everyone in the building.

It was the third time the hotel had fallen prey to flames since 1900. Business places which were destroyed were a women's wear shop, a men's clothing store, a hardware store, a barber shop and a drug store.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 11. — Trade estimates Italy would be short 112,000,000 bushels of wheat this year coincided on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange on Saturday with a vigorous upward push in future prices. Net gains of 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents a bushel were boarded. As local values reacted to broad gains in outside markets, export sales of 300,000 bushels of wheat and the bullish Italian reports.

Italy announced expansion of her winter wheat acreage to 1,317,500 acres had no bearish effect on the market. Most traders stressed the Italian acute shortage of wheat this year would lead to heavy importations.

Buying by United States milling interests enabled the market to absorb without difficulty fairly heavy selling that entered the pit near the close. The finish was strongly, only fractionally under the best prices of the day.

Coal Miners Stage Realistic Gas Rescue Drill

Realism was brought to the nth degree when mine rescue squads underwent this drill at a coal mine near Pittsburg, Pa. Wearing gas masks and respirators, the men are leaving the mine entrance after they had penetrated a section which was actually filled with poison gas after a coal dust explosion. This is the first time a rescue squad has worked actually in the presence of gas. The drill was to perfect rescue methods in the event of real disasters.

their oaths of office and of allegiance. Mayor Macdonald addressed the council, surveying some of the projects that are likely to receive attention as the year progresses. He congratulated the new members on their election and expressed regret that Fred T. Tuggey was not returned.

"We all appreciate very much the splendid work accomplished by Mr. Tuggey during the years he was an alderman," Mayor Macdonald said. "In everything he understook we always felt confident that it would be well done. We did not always see eye to eye with him, but we did feel that we could always depend on him in carrying out the duties which were assigned to him. Mr. Tuggey was never absent from a meeting of the council or of his committees, and that is a record for any alderman to set up.

We have in Alderman Gordon a man who has given real service to the city in the past. He has come back into the fold again and it is a pleasure to welcome him as a member of this council. With his extensive experience I am sure that he will give us good advice. I need not say that our accomplishments will depend to a great extent on working together in harmony and co-operation. Every member is entitled to express his own views and opinions, and at the same time I feel that each of us will respect the opinions of others. When it comes to a vote and decision I hope that we will always feel that everyone has received a square deal and that everything has been aboveboard.

I am looking forward to a successful year for 1937. Employment increased considerably in 1936, and we closed the year by keeping within our appropriation for relief. The relief committee has become our most important spending body, and we will have to give it our careful attention again. While conditions have improved we must not expect that all the people on relief are going to find employment this year. I sincerely wish they could, but it is a question whether the manufacturers will be able to take on as many men this year as they did in 1936. So, when we are thinking of work to be done and of the Board of Works program we will have to take into account our unemployed if we wish to provide work for them. I feel that they would all rather be employed and that they are looking for work. In this connection it seems to me that we might consider our unemployed in regard to their ages and place them in different categories. For men up to fifty there is a certain class of work which they are able to do. Then there are those between fifty and sixty probably as another class, and those over sixty are something of a problem which we have to face. Then there is another class of men who have been striving to keep off relief, but who are so close to it that we often wonder how they are able to keep from applying for relief. They certainly deserve our consideration also.

Extensive Repairs.

We did not do as much work on our roads last year as we should have done, and we know that extensive repairs will be needed this year. I have been thinking that some special attention will have to be given for example to some of the hills such as Aylmer street north, Bethune street and others that need attention. And for greater economy and efficiency we need some new equipment. The council has been trying to get along without purchasing new equipment, but we have felt that this year we might be able to buy a new flusher and a new oiler for the streets. It might be possible to get a machine that would combine both these services.

Another thing to think of is drainage. In that respect we must give more attention to the Auburn district this year. The residents of that section have been paying taxes for the last twenty-five years without getting much work done in their neighborhood. City Engineer Parsons has laid out some improvements in that section which I hope we will be able to do. A drain is also needed on Park street north of Park Hill road, and there is also Gilchrist street to London street that needs attention. I think we should put up a fence around the Board of Works yard. We struck that expense off our appropriations last year, but we have a lot of material down there that needs to be looked after, and we could have a system of issuing this material only on written orders.

Committee Neglected.

In regard to the Manufacturers committee we have rather neglected it for several years largely because of the depression. The improved conditions are creating more confidence in industry, and we should consider this year spending a little extra money in an effort to get new industries. We are proud of the industries we have. They are one of the main causes for Peterborough weathering depression as well as we have. The committee spent money on advertising last year, and we all felt that this work was well done. Possibly this committee might give a little more attention to our tourist business. This would be independent of the program of the Chamber of Commerce who have a larger scope than we would consider. It has been suggested that the city should have a real tourist camp somewhere uptown. Since the Lansdowne street pavement has been completed this becomes more important as a means of attracting tourists into the centre of the city. We have a splendid site along the river as Hunter street. It would make an ideal camp."

Mayor Macdonald also mentioned the health of the city. He said that possibly Peterborough's expenditure in this service had not been sufficient for all requirements. The cost of tubercular patients in various hospitals averaged around $30 a day, and it would seem much better if more money were spent in preventive measures as a means of avoiding as much as possible of hospital costs.

"These are a few things I have thought of as we start the new year." His Worship concluded. "I trust we will all work together, because we can accomplish most by harmony? I know you all desire that."

The minutes of the last council meeting in 1936 were taken as read on Alderman McIntyre's motion, seconded by Alderman Gordon; and the inaugural meeting was adjourned on Alderman Cotton's motion seconded by Alderman Sloan.

Committee of the Whole, Committee of the Whole.

In the retirement of the council to go into committee of the whole for the selection of the standing committees for 1937 Alderman Gordon suggested that the members remain in the council chamber instead of going down stairs to the committee room.

Mayor Macdonald agreed, remarking that the stationery for the members which had been placed on the table down stairs according to custom could be brought upstairs.

SLIM ATTENDANCE.

Only thirteen men were present in the public gallery when Mayor Macdonald called the members to order. One of the citizens was Alex. Murray, a former alderman.

Alderman Dutton was retained as chairman of the Relief Committee. In proposing him for the onerous job another year, Alderman Cotton said that the committee had been most efficiently conducted by Ald. Dutton, who was especially qualified for the duties.

Alderman McIntyre remarked that it didn't seem fair to ask Alderman Dutton to take the committee for another year, but he had performed the work so well that all the other members would be pleased if he would continue in the position.

Alderman Glover suggested that a vice-chairman might be appointed to relieve Ad. Dutton somewhat in order that he would not have to divert so much time from his own business as in the past. Closer contact between this committee and the Board of Works was also mentioned by Ald. Glover, and his idea was left for later consideration.

Reduction of the committees to five members was advised by Alderman Gordon, and the Council returned to that number after gradually drifting away from the smaller form of committee during recent years. The exceptions are Board of Works, Finance and Relief, of which all the aldermen are members. Mayor Macdonald is ex-officio a member of each committee.

Board of Works Meeting.

Alderman Sloan requested all the members to attend a meeing of the Board of Works on Tuesday, January 19, at which projects to come before the Department could be drafted as early as possible, giving City Engineer Parsons ample time to estimate costs, thereby preparing a definite program for budget appropriations.

STORES IN FLINT DO LITTLE TRADE AS STRIKE HOLDS

Largest Auto Producing Centre In U.S. Sees 26,000 Employees Involved In Tie-up

DISCIPLINE EXCELLENT

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 11—(C.P.).— In this strike-afflicted city, which normally is the largest automobile-producing community in the United States, there were crowds on the sidewalks to-day and automobiles in the streets, but the stores seemed empty.

Flint is affected perhaps more than any other city by the strike of the United Automobile Workers of America against the General Motors Corporation. About 45,000 of the 160,000 residents here are employed in one of the General Motors plants. More than 26,000 are out of work as a result of the strike.

Perhaps the most active spot in this city was the Fisher Body Plant No. 1, where for the last 11 days "sit-in" strikers have stopped production.

The north wing of the plant, which is occupied by the strikers, is conducted like a military camp. Orders, once issued, are final, and the iron discipline is all the more rigid because it is self-imposed.

Inside the Plant

The only means of entering the plant is through a ground-floor window and with special permission of the strikers' committee. A group of newspapermen sought and gained entry.

The shop was surprisingly clean, considering that several hundred persons had occupied it for more than a week.

Along the conveyor line were automobile bodies in various stages of production from the bare frame to the finished body, exactly as on the day when the plant closed. At one end of the line were the electric motors which regulate the speed of the conveying system. At the other end of the line was the paint, and in between are stations where men tighten bolts, rivet parts, fasten and check all parts of the body.

It is these lines that are one of the major causes of the dispute, for the union contends the speed of the belt makes it almost impossible for a man to keep up.

A husky man, who came from "some place in the South," said, "You want to know what I hate about this place?" He nodded towards the conveyer line.

"Why they tear your guts out. After following that for eight hours you go home and you are too tired to eat. When you're 40 you are a wreck, and you get laid off. And then—well, if you're lucky you get a tin cup. That's why I'm on strike. I make about 30 bucks a week. Some guys don't, but what's bothern' me is the speedup."

MOUNT PLEASANT

INSTITUTE PLANS TO ARRANGE PLAY

Mount Pleasant Women Appoint Committee To Take Care Of Details

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Jan. 11. — The annual meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Lowes on Wednesday afternoon with a fair attendance of members and some visitors. Owing to the absence of the vice-president, Mrs. Ira Lowe conducted the meeting.

The roll call topic "A humorous story" was answered by a number of the members. Some of the quilt blocks for the knitted coverlet, which is being made for relief were displayed and the remainder of the blocks will, it is hoped, soon be ready for the completion of the quilt.

Miss Dorothy Morden gave a very complete outline of the work as local leader of the W.I. of the project, "Refinishing Old Furniture," and regarding classes being planned for the local leader to take charge of discussions and teach lessons in this particular field which this district has chosen to emphasize for this year. This discussion was left over for a meeting later in the year.

Several good plays were discussed and recommended to the committee, Mrs. G. Shield, Mrs. Ira Lowe and Mrs. M. Handley, who were asked to arrange for a play in the near future.

The programs, which are renewed every two years, and filled in once a year with committees in charge, together with place of meeting were voted to be continued, and a committee composed of Mrs. Ira Lowe, Mrs. Garnet Shield and Mrs. H. Gardiner were asked to make out the new plan of program for the year ready for the printer.

The program of the meeting was dispensed with and a social time enjoyed while the hostess served dainty refreshments.

Mrs. Rutherford very kindly invited the members to hold the February meeting at her home and the following committees were appointed in charge: program — Mrs. G. Shield and Mrs. M. Handley; lunch —Mrs. Rutherford and Mrs. C. Morden.

MADOC FARMER GIVEN TEN DAYS

Remanded For Resisting Arrest —Latter Effort Costs Black Eye To Start

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 11.—(CP). — Harry Harrington, Madoc township farmer, pleaded guilty to intoxication in police court to-day before Magistrate Butler and was given 10 days "on the hill." On a second count of resisting arrest he was remanded one week. Harrington appeared in court exhibiting a black eye, that Constable Hayes admitted administering, when the man resisted arrest. It was stated he using loud and profane language in a Madoc restaurant Saturday.

For allowing gambling on his premises through a slot machine, Mike Maraskas pleaded guilty and was remanded a week for judgment and sentence and Charles A. Payne, his counsel, asked that the machine be not confiscated until that time by the police.

The Magistrate so ruled.

ALASKA NOT SO BAD

Explorer Finds Colder 15 Below and Bears Fine if Left Alone.

DETROIT, Jan. 11.—(CP).—"Before I visited Alaska, I pictured it as an ice-ridden country, with bears chasing Eskimos all over the place," Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, geologist and explorer, said in a lecture here last night. Father Hubbard has just returned from a six-month exploration trip to Devil's Paw Mountain in British Columbia.

"Coldest temperature in Alaska last year was 15 below zero," Father Hubbard, known as the "Glacier Priest," said. "There are bears, yes, but they won't bother you—if you don't bother them. They're terribly inquisitive fellows, though, and you can't leave your camp unguarded."

LONDON TO STAGE BIG ICE BATTLES

Hockey And Figure Skating Contests Carded For February

LONDON Jan. 11.—(CP)—This hockey-mad metropolis, with its eight artificial ice rinks, is preparing for perhaps the greatest spectacle the sport has known when British and European hockey and figure-skating contenders shoot for world championships. The title fights on skates start Feb. 3 and finish in March.

Increase In Canadian Imports And Exports Figures For 1936

EXPORT MORE GOODS

And Canada Is Importing More Raw Materials For Manufacture

By JAMES MONTAGNES

OTTAWA, Jan. 6—Improved world conditions are reflected in Canada's import and export trade figures which, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, have nearly reached 1930 levels during the past year. Factories here and abroad are humming more consistently, mines are disgorging record metal tonnages, and surplus farm crops which a few years ago were a drug on the market, are now fast disappearing.

During 1936 Canada exported nearly twice as much as she imported, with figures for the first eleven months showing $929,000,000 in exports and $582,000,000 in imports. Larger quantities of wheat, pulpwood, newsprint, aluminum, timber, asbestos, nickel, furs, cattle, butter, electric power, unmanufactured leather and other products have been shipped out of the Dominion. More steel and iron, raw cotton, raw rubber, automobile parts, petroleum, coal, sugar, wool, yarn, raw furs and raw hides, came into the Dominion for manufacturing and re-export and for domestic use.

Trade Treaties Signed

Trade with the British Empire has increased, as well as with the United States and South American countries. Trade outside the Empire which fell off sharply with the depression and the building of tariff walls, has shown decided increases as new favorable trade treaties have been signed during the past year. The small republic of Uruguay is an example. In 1928 it did a record trade with Canada. Then trade fell off till it was reckoned in thousands of dollars instead of millions of dollars. Recently a favorable trade treaty was concluded between the two countries, and the trade which had shown a few signs of reviving has already gone into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Canadian rubber boots and shoes, whiskey, silk stockings, razors, aluminium manufactured articles, machinery, newsprint, electrical apparatus, farm implements, rubber tires and tubes, are included in the items going to Uruguay, while canned meats, agricultural and vegetable products are coming to Canada.

United States Is Best Customer

While electric power exports to the United States has nearly reached all-time records with 1,449,925 kilowatt hours for the first eleven months of 1936 (more than the 1932 export total), automobile exports this past year have dropped. Canadian turkeys are more in demand in the United Kingdom since the first shipment four years ago. This year a million pounds of gobbler went to Great Britain in pre-cooled refrigerator cars and ships for the Christmas trade alone. While Canada still imports toys valued at over a million dollars, exports of Canadian-made toys are going up, being today valued at about one-fifth of the imports.

With export trade within the British Empire up some 25 per cent., trade with individual dominions increased as much as 95 per cent. during some months. The United States still remained Canada's best customer, with the United Kingdom second. France, Belgium and Holland were among the countries which took a large increase of Canadian products this past year.

The drive for more trade goes on, and a new campaign to make Englishmen Canadian-canned-salmon conscious has recently started, following success with an apple campaign, and a bacon campaign which has increased Canada's exports of bacon and ham to the English breakfast table.

Spanish Civil War Rages Also In Morocco

High up in the mountains in Spanish Morocco a handful of loyalist troops are staving off assaults of the Spanish Fascists, who control most of the colony. A group of the defenders at Valdenoro-Pinto are shown in a trench on the edge of the mountainside, a most difficult position to storm. Recent dispatches from this sector tell of native uprisings against the Fascists.

SURVEY SERVICES CHART COURSE IN CANADA'S GROWTH

Four Branches Of Department Merged Under Hon. T. A. Crerar

OTTAWA, Jan. 11 (CP)—Canada has marshalled its survey services under one head. The big four—geologic, hydrographic, topographic and geodetic—have been brought within the folds of the new department of mines and resources of which Hon. T. A. Crerar is the head.

This big new country with its 3,466,793 square miles takes a lot of surveying. Its immense coast lines, its lakes and rivers and hundreds of harbors have been charted. These have to be rechecked continuously. Now one department will look after it all. The national defence department will do some surveying to qualify its officers for their duties in case of war, but otherwise the department of mines and resources will undertake the full responsibility of the making of all original maps.

Canada has won the reputation of providing its prospectors and mining companies with more up-to-date data than any other country in the world and the reorganization of the surveying activities, bringing them into one department as mines and geology should increase this efficiency.

Henceforth surveying and geology will march side by side in the great task of searching for the mineral resources of Canada. This reorganization has been one of the most important developments of the year in the government services of this country.

Maps In Demand

The topographical survey has been the one most closely in touch with the Canadian public because it makes the maps most urgently in demand, maps of the topography of the country, its rivers, its streams, its contours. These maps are made partly by survey parties actually running lines, but more particularly now from thousands of photographs taken from airplanes.

Under the new set-up the part of this survey pertaining to mining maps including the aerial surveys will be in the mines and geology division of which John McLeish is head. It will be in the bureau of geology and topography headed by F. C. C. Lynch. Along side of it will be the geological surveys. The department of national defence will continue to supply the planes for the aerial photography.

The section which provides legal maps will be under the surveys and engineering division of which J. M. Wardle is head. In the provinces the legal mapping is done by provincial surveyers. These maps are registered and become the basis of real estate conveyancing. In the territories and the Yukon, the Dominion performs this service. It also makes electoral maps, air navigation maps and tourist maps.

The Geological Survey has been placed under the direction of Dr. G. A. Young. He will direct all geological studies including the survey parties which are sent out each summer to obtain data as to rock formations to help the prospectors by telling them where it is useless to search.

The geodetic survey with N. J. Ogilvie as head, will also be under surveys and engineering division. This service does not prepare maps but fixes accurate points of triangulations through the country for other private and public surveys. It has a staff of about 60 and the survey parties next year plan surveys centring on Halifax, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Until the reorganization took place the hydrographic service which charts the beds of rivers, lakes, harbors and coastlines, was under the department of marine. It has been placed in the surveys and engineering branch headed by J. M. Wardle and has a staff of about 70.

Then there is the survey of the skies, the results of which are not so tangible but absorbingly interesting. Canada has two observatories, at Ottawa and Victoria, to contribute to the extension of world knowledge of the universe. Dr. Meldrum Stewart continues as head of this branch.

POISON FISH OFF TO RESTOCK LAKES

Nova Scotia Forced To Experiment After Desirable Varieties Fished Out

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—(CP)—Three lakes in Yarmouth county, N.S., formerly noted for their trout fishing, were recently cleared of all remaining fish life by poisoning and are now being successfully restocked with desirable varieties, the Biological Board of Canada reported Saturday.

This step was taken by the board, on the authority of the fish culture branch of the fisheries department, to correct the balance between fish desired by sportsmen and the predacious or otherwise undesirable varieties. Various other measures had been first tried, such as trapping the predacious fish, as is being done at Cultus Lake, B.C., but there was such a preponderance of undesirable fish in the Nova Scotia lakes the department decided on the more wholesale course.

The proportion of trout in these lakes had been steadily reduced by selective fishing. The planting of trout fry had not helped materially since they were generally eliminated by the mass of white and yellow perch remaining.

father, Robert Slesser, said the 17-year-old Kincardine High school pupil had been worrying about going to school, and had apparently left the house unnoticed with the rifle. His body was found by a younger brother. No inquest will be held.

The body of Thomas McKague, 27, prominent Stratford resident, was found in a bush near his home city yesterday, a shotgun wound in the head. He had been in ill health and Coroner Dr. M. J. Fraser decided an inquest unnecessary.

Searchers found the body of William Steed, 55, of Thorold, in the old Welland ship canal at Merriton. He had been missing since last Wednesday. No inquest will be held. Steed, a partial cripple, leaves a widow.

Falls Under Train.

Hamilton recorded two violent deaths. Leonard "Bud" Giles, 19, died in hospital Saturday night, a few hours after he had suffered the loss of both legs when he fell beneath the wheels of a passenger train on which he had been riding the rods with Bruce Haydon, 21, Hamilton. Returning from a vain attempt to obtain work at Smithville, the youths jumped from the train at the station here. Giles missed his footing and slipped under the grinding wheels.

Mrs. Charles Hibbard, 47, Hamilton, was killed in that city when struck by a motor truck. Harold Harris, driver, swerved his machine, but the side of the truck struck the woman, matron at the Juvenile Detention Home, causing instant death through a fractured skull.

Walter Labelle, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Labelle of Trenton, was crushed to death Saturday when a truck driven by Mrs. Mary Thompson jammed him against a gate at the Labelle home in Trenton. An inquest will be held.

IMPROVED ANGLING HOPED TO RESULT FROM EXPERIMENT

Habitat Improvement Experiment Is New Development In Fish Culture

MAINTAIN STOCK OF FISH

FREDERICTON, N.B., Jan. 11.—(CP).—An experiment underway at Burpee Brook, 15 miles from here, may improve materially the results of fish culture for angling in New Brunswick, observers believe.

At this brook on Dominion government land, through the courtesy of the forestry branch, department of fisheries officials are demonstrating a policy of improving the habitat of the speckled trout as a complementary service to be maintained in conjunction with the routine production and distribution of new stock from the hatcheries.

After a survey of Burpee Brook last August a plan was devised for the construction of dams, each forming two pools—one long and shallow above the dam and one short and deep immediately below it, created by the overflow.

"With regard to inland waters there seems to be a mistaken idea throughout Canada in confusing the requirements of commercial fishing with those of angling," commented James Catt, district supervisor of fish culture for the Maritimes.

Maintain Present Stock.

"Angling has a commercial value insofar as it may attract tourists. Therefore from an angling point of view the objective is not necessarily to increase stocks of fish in our lakes and streams but to maintain or increase the stocks of catchable fish. A river may be full of salmon and yet have no angling value for reasons such as low water. The famous salmon rivers of Newfoundland often afford no angling for this reason.

"On the other hand, given a succession of freshets or suitable water conditions, a river containing a relatively small run of salmon will afford good angling.

"While conditions that assure good angling for speckled trout are somewhat different from those essential to salmon angling, it may be possible to improve streams and lakes as to create an environment under which speckled trout may be taken by the angler more or less consistently.

"With regard to salmon angling, for more than 30 years in Scotland artificial freshets have been created in some streams whereby the angling was improved. The method is simple. It is the utilization of storage dams, letting out an artificial freshet or spate at intervals when the river becomes low.

"For some undetermined reason salmon are chary of taking an angler's lure fly or spoon bait when the water is low. Following a spate or freshet the reverse is the case, particularly as the water commences to drop back."

INDIAN DISUNITY MAKES NIGHTMARE OF GANDHI DREAM

Independence Without Nationalism Make Empire Ring Competing States

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP)—The renewed drive for independence of India by the Indian National Congress, and the report that the great spiritual and political figure, Mahatma Gandhi, may assume the leadership, not only creates another delicate situation for the British government but presents a pretty problem to the nationalists themselves — that of uniting the divers elements of the population.

The ascetic little Mahatma, whom millions of Indians worship as a divine being, has for years been teaching nationalism, as he went about preaching like a prophet of old, clad only in his loin-cloth and living on goat's milk. Without nationalism, independence would result in a dismemberment of the Indian Empire and the creation of innumerable independent states.

The achievement of nationalism in India will be as difficult as it would to unite the countries of Europe. Here is the way the thing looks:

The Indian Empire is larger in area than all Europe, excluding Russia, and has a population of about 330,000,000, or close to a fifth of all the people in the world. It is divided into two sections—British India, which is directly under the administration of the government of India; and native India, which comprises the many states over which the princes and chiefs rule.

British India, with which the nationalists are immediately concerned, is much the larger, having an area of 1,093,000 square miles and a population of more than 250,000,000. The native states contain 700,000 square miles and their population exceeds 75,000,000.

British India is divided into provinces, each with a local administration. The native states are under some degree of control by the British government, through the government of India, the nature of the supervision varying in different states.

Broadly speaking, the princes are allowed to manage their internal affairs without much interference, but all external relations are dealt with by the supreme government. It is important to note that the princes are extremely jealous of their rights and resent any intrusion on their affairs by other princes.

There are numerous races in the Empire, and some 222 vernacular languages, of great variety, are spoken. There are numerous religions, including the predominant Mohammedan and Hindu — whose adherents will have little or nothing to do with each other—Buddhist, Christian, Jain, Sikh and Parsi.

The caste system, which has several thousand divisions, prevails throughout India. Differences of religion and caste and race make well-nigh impossible at present in many instances, any sort of co-operation—social, educational or political.

This then is the setup which Gandhi and the nationalists are facing. About the only thing which would produce widespread unity at this time would be a holy war against unbelievers — Europeans. Gandhi and the other great leaders would fight against such a dread eventuality to the last ditch if they followed the principles they have been teaching thus far.

During an extensive tour of India, I was told by many Indian personalities that a disappearance of the British government would precipitate chaos. For one thing, the native princes, many of whom maintain standing armies, would be at each other's throats to determine who would be supreme ruler.

REV. DR. POGUE IS GUEST PREACHER ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Former Minister Conducts Communion Service In Packed Auditorium

"CONSIDER JESUS"

Rev. Dr. Robert Pogue, who for seventeen years occupied the pulpit at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, was welcomed back on Sunday morning by a congregation which filled every available seat in the church. It was the quarterly Communion service, and many old friends and former members of the congregation were invited by the minister and Session to unite with the congregation in the solemn feast.

Dr. Pogue presided at the Communion service, and close to 1,000 took part. The former minister took his text from Hebrews 11, verse 1, "Wherefore, Holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus," and his subject was "Consider Jesus." It was a most applicable topic for the Communion season, and Dr. Pogue urged upon his hearers to think more of Jesus Christ in their everyday life.

It was Christ who instituted the Communion service with His own words, "This do ye in remembrance of me," hence it was imperative in all Christian living that He be remembered frequently, and then Dr. Pogue was sure that He would be an inspiration to better living.

Then there was the exhortation or people's duty to consider Christ. Thoughts of Christ should not be just passing ones, but they should be given much concentration.

"After all these years of preaching, I know no way except by concentration," Dr. Pogue declared.

REV. DR. J. E. MOORE RETIRED MINISTER PASSES IN CITY

BORN NEAR UXBRIDGE

"He that winneth souls is wise."

Leaving behind him the request that this inscription be placed on his tombstone, Rev. Dr. James Edward Moore, at one time pastor of Mark Street United Church, passed on in St. Joseph's Hospital, Sunday, after a brief illness. He was 86 years of age.

Second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Moore, pioneers in Ontario County of United Empire Loyalist stock, Dr. Moore was born in Scott township, Ontario County. He received his primary education at the Sandford school. At an early age he gave evidence that he possessed ability as a public speaker and, when 16 years of age, was authorized to preach. When 21 years of age, he was called by Rev. Walter Reid to supply as the third preacher on a circuit of eleven churches. During that period he passed the preliminary examination prescribed by the Primitive Methodist Church, and entered the ministry.

Serving at several different stations while he continued his studies, he passed successfully through his four years of probation and was ordained on May 31, 1876, in the Carlton Street Church, Toronto. A long procession of pastorates then followed including Mitchell, Caradoc, London East, Mount Brydges, Malahide, Dorchester, Thameaville and Dutton. Exchanging with the Rev. W. C. Beer, he came to Mark Street Methodist Church in Peterborough following his service at Dutton. During his three years here, his wife was instrumental in forming the first ladies' aid organization here.

42 Years Active Minister

After Peterborough, service at Newburgh, Pickering, Little Britain, Marmora and Wilfred followed. At the age of 64 years, he then requested superannuation after 42 years and eight months in the ministry. His own written comments on his career contain many references to success he enjoyed in evangelical work. "During my ministry I saw 3,000 weeping their way to Calvary through my instrumentality and the help of Christ, my Lord," he wrote.

Dr. Moore received a Doctor of Philosophy degree at the Chicago Seminary, and a Doctor of Divinity degree from Oskaloosa University, Iowa. The Rambling REPORTERS

"THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES.

On Saturday night, at ten o'clock, a number of cars were parked along Charlotte Street, and one, stopped about six feet from the curb, constituted a real barrier to the passage of westbound traffic. In it sat a young woman at the wheel, with a man beside her, with whom she talked, composedly. There were two other people in the back seat. Loud and unavailing motor horn protests from the cars behind failed to budge the young woman, who talked on. A man behind grew very angry and tooted again and again. The 'bus, trying to make its way, was stalled also. Finally, in desperation, the traffic routed itself out to the left of the roadway and managed to get by and escape eastward-bound cars. The young woman apparently paid no attention, but, as the man who had tooted angrily passed her far to the left, she turned and, placing her fingers to her nose, wiggled them in the most ancient gesture of contempt known to man—or woman. A group of spectators, interested in this outstanding example of the road-hog, took the number of the car.—C.L.M.

RT. REV. DR. BRYCE GUEST PREACHER TRINITY CHURCH

Moderator Of United Church Of Canada Conducts Anniversary Services

MESSAGE OF HOPE

"Has the church a message?" was the subject of a thoughtful sermon preached by the Right Reverend Peter Bryce, D.D., Moderator of the United Church of Canada who addressed a large congregation at Trinity United Church on Sunday morning on the occasion of anniversary services.

The moderator who received a warm welcome on benalf of the congregation from the Rev. G. S. Easton, pastor in answer to his own question declared most emphatically that the church has a very vital message for every individual.

To reveal the love of God and of His truth and justice, the right reverend speaker declared, was the most essential mission of the church. "He that loveth God must love his fellow men," Dr. Bryce said in urging that it was a Christian duty to be unselfish, considerate, kindly and tolerant in personal dealings.

Another message of the church, he said was the message of faith. "Trust in God. Be not afraid." It was fear he said that held people back. Life to be successful must be faced with a determined faith in God, faith in one's fellow men, and faith in oneself.

Message of Sin

Another important message of the church, Dr. Bryce declared was the message of sin and the consequences of sin. "Let me say this to the young people, that the wages of sin is death. He that soweth in the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption. I like the young people of today. I believe in them. But I would urge them to not be easily led astray into the paths that lead to destruction because sin demands its own penance," he urged.

If sin did overcome, Dr. Bryce said the church has a message of hope and salvation for the penitent. "Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

"The message of God to the sinner is the way of the Cross. Yes, my friends, there is forgiveness for any man who believes in Christ, and when cleansing and forgiveness is granted power comes into one's life. That power is Jesus Christ." Dr. Bryce exclaimed.

As moderator of the United Church of Canada, Dr. Bryce said he would be remiss in his duty if he did not express deep appreciation to the congregation of Trinity Church for their staunch loyalty to the church during the past seven years of stress.

He believed that in the past seven years the Church of Christ had fulfilled a great and pressing need, and he declared that as a part of the United Church which is one of the greatest Protestant churches in the world, the congregation of Trinity Church had played their part nobly.

15 FISHERS DROWN IN THREE WRECKS

Belgian, Spanish And French Craft Come To Grief Off Britain

LONDON, Jan. 11—(A.P.).—The sinking of the Belgian trawler Vierge Marie to-day raised to 15 the toll of fishermen lost in accidents over the week-end.

The Vierge Marie was wrecked on rocks off the coast of Cornwall. Four of its crew were drowned and two others were rescued on a life line shot to shore by a rocket.

Four men were lost yesterday when the trawler San Sebastian foundered on the rocky coast off the Island of Islay, Scotland, and seven when the French trawler Notre Dame de Lourdes sank after a collision with the steamer Theems at the mouth of the Thames.

MAY BUILD WHARF CRESCENT STREET SOUNDINGS MADE

Provide Ample Dockage For Tourist Cruisers—Remain In City Longer

WORK CONTINUING

Construction of a wharf with ample dockage for tourist cruisers is a projected extension of the work that is being carried on as a permanent improvement of the Crescent Street frontage on Little Lake.

Soundings have been made since the lake froze over, and this morning J. J. Duffus confirmed a report that an engineer of the federal department would prepare a plan of a proposed wharf which might be approved for construction.

It has been suggested that visiting tourist cruisers and other smaller craft would be more favorably disposed to remaining longer periods in Peterborough if the neighboring surroundings were more attractive and agreeable than at the George street dock. Soundings were made recently, taking advantage of the facility provided by the ice, and it was found that a depth of 20 feet of water was available for a wharf on the design of half the capital letter "H," with the long front parallel to the shore.

So far there has been no definite proposal for a new wharf at Crescent street, but if it is regarded as a desirable improvement it would receive the consideration of the department, with the likelihood that it would be recommended.

PREMIER REQUESTS ISLAND AIR BASE

Fog-Free Coast Of P.E.I. Has Advantages For Ocean Pilots

The island Premier had communicated with Mr. Howe, stressing the advantages of this province in the development of the Dominion Government's Aerial Service.

Hon. Mr. Howe praised the initiative which had been shown in the development of the present service between Charlottetown, Summerside P.E.I., and Moncton, N.B. This would offer the Government every incentive to further develop the route, he stated.

Hon. Mr. Howe recently visited Prince Edward Island and while he was in the province he was flown on a short survey of the Island.

Prince Edward Island air officials maintain that a base for planes in the island would not only be an asset in the proposed trans-Canada service, but would prove of great benefit to flyers when the trans-Atlantic flights were started, for the island coast is practically free of fog, bugbear of pilots on the Atlantic seaboard.

Takes Woman's Tip Turns Green In Bath

Belgrade, Jan. 11.

A MAGIC potion that turned its user green, was the subject of a legal action here.

Dragotjub Mihailovich, a peasant, declared that when he suffered the after-effects of an operation on his neck, he went to Natalia Karaklajich, a noted "wise-woman" in the district, whose cures are said to be famous. She told him to bathe his neck with water in which had been boiled a scythe, a used haircomb, a colored stone, and a number of ancient coins.

"The only result was that I went green," said Dragotjub to the Judge.

Natalia was fined $20.

The annual business meeting and election of officers of the Caledonian Club was held on Friday evening in the Woodmen of the World Hall. J. Miller, president, was in the chair. EIGHT-FOOT TALL GIANTESS NATIVE OF NOVA SCOTIA

Sister Recalls Strange Career Of Annie Swan Circus Queen

WED U.S. GIANT

TRURO, N.S., Jan. 11—(C.P.).—Annie Hanen Swan, Nova Scotia giantess believed to have been the tallest in the world, was recalled in Truro by a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Swan Biswanger, the only living member of the New Annan, N.S., family which became world-famous through the record height and size of Annie.

Eight feet, one inch, tall with her shoes on, the Nova Scotia woman was well proportioned and weighed 350 pounds. Mrs. Biswanger is five feet three inches.

The giantess' sister has several articles of clothing which belonged to Annie, including a nightdress, a skirt and shoe. The shoe measured 13½ inches from toe to heel and was made for a slender-shaped foot. The dress contained 100 yards of satin, besides about 50 yards of lace.

Parents Ordinary Size

Annie Swan was born in Millbrook, Colchester County. Her father, Alexander Swan, came to Canada as a young man of 21. Annie's parents were both of ordinary size.

When Annie was four years of age, she was an obnormally large girl and when she became old enough to go to school seating accommodation for her was found difficult. Shortly afterward she went to New York, where her career in exhibitions was started. It carried her to many foreign lands, appearing before the public.

After the Civil War in the United States, Annie met Captain Martin Van Buren Bates, an officer in the American army. He was an inch shorter than she, but weighed 500 pounds. They toured England together in a circus and were married in London. A child born in Seville, Indiana, weighed 22½ pounds at birth, but lived only a short time.

The giant couple settled down eventually in Seville, Ohio, and a house was constructed especially for the oversized people.

Doors nine feet high and ceilings 11 feet high were required for their comfort and all furniture had to be especially constructed.

Never in the best of health, the New Annan woman-giant died after a lengthy illness in 1888. She was about 32 years of age at that time, Mrs. Biswanger declared.

Articles of clothing left by the giantess are carefully kept by her sister, who said, "when I am through with these articles, they shall go to a member of my family, so that the clothing and she might be preserved for exhibits to future generations."

Scripture Is Read As Council Meets

From the third chapter of the gospel of St. Luke, Rev. J. D. Paterson read the following verses at the inauguration of Peterborough's new municipal council for 1937 this morning:

And John came into all the country about Jordon, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

And the people asked him saying: What shall we do then?

He answereth and saith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat let him do likewise.

Then came Publicans to be baptised, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do?

And he said unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed to you.

And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages.

KEEP TO THE RIGHT.

Speaking particularly to the younger members of the congregation before they withdrew from the morning service to the Sunday school room, the Right Reverend Peter Bryce, D.D., Moderator of the United Church of Canada who was at Trinity Church over the week-end gave them the clue to a text he first heard thirty-five years ago. The right reverend speaker gave the initials K T T R as the clue to the text and promised the child who could furnish the answer the present of a book. Without hesitation a small girl rose in the body of the congregation, and replied "Keep to the Right". Declaring the answer to be correct Dr. Bryce told the young people, "As you get older you'll often be asked to do wrong and be tempted to do what is not right. I urge you to remember this text and always keep to the right."

A vote of thanks to the hostess was voiced by Mesdames Douglas and Breton.

HIGH GOLD PRICE RESPONSIBLE FOR BIG AFRICAN BOOM

FINE MUSICAL PROGRAM

That South Africa is enjoying a tremendous boom at the present time as a result of the high price of gold, was one of the interesting things told the Peterborough Rotary Club at its regular luncheon to-day by Rotarian "Bill" Randall of the Toronto Rotary Club, who described his recent trip to the great Exposition at Johannesburg in an informative address.

Among the guests to-day were Rev. Dr. Robert Pogue and Rev. William Allan, former pastors of St. Paul's Church, Arnold Allan, who has blossomed out as a radio singer, and Alf. Clarke, organist of St. Thomas' Church, Toronto.

Rotarian Dave Diplock contributed two most enjoyable solos to the musical part of the program. With Mrs. Diplock at the piano, his fine tenor voice was effectively displayed in the popular number "Homing," and in response to the applause he scored in the song "A Brown Bird Is Singing."

Arnold Allan, with Mr. Clarke providing the accompaniment, was heard to advantage in two fine solos, a lilting Irish number "Sweet Molly Malone," and an amusing song, "The Big Brown Bear," both of which were thoroughly enjoyed.

Rotarian Ross L. Dobbin introduced the speaker, Rotarian Randall, who is head of the Neptune Meter Company, and who took to Johannesburg an illuminated address from the City of Toronto to the Mayor of Johannesburg.

Growing Rapidly.

Describing the Exposition city Mr. Randall said that it had a white population of 200,000, and was growing rapidly to such an extent that building permits last year totalled ten million pounds. The high price of gold was responsible for the present boom and the gold-mining industry in which Kaffir labor was largely utilized was going ahead rapidly. The speaker told of visiting several of the mines, several of which had shafts 8,000 feet deep.

The South African Exposition, while it had failed to live up to the committee's anticipations of an average attendance of 25,000 a day, had been a success, the speaker declared. The affair had been well planned and the exhibits were very fine. The Canadian exhibit was a noteworthy feature, in spite of the fact that there seemed to be an unusually large amount of gas stoves and electric stoves on display.

Rotarian Randall described some of his South African experiences, including trips to the Victoria Falls to the grave of Cecil Rhodes, the great Kruger Game Preserve, where he saw nineteen lions in a little over the day, and to such towns as East London, Durban, Port Elizabeth and Cape Town. Port Elizabeth, he said, was a coming city. Already such great firms as Ford, General Motors, and Firestone had big factories there, from which they not only supplied South Africa, but India, Malaya and the East.

The thanks of Rotary were extended to the speaker, on motion of Rotarian Dr. R. W. Frank.

SCOTLAND OFFERS BRIGHT MARKETS STATES OFFICIAL

Improvement Noted In Canadian Export Trade On Forty Commodities

CATTLE IN DEMAND

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Jan. 11.—(CP)—Scotland offers bright markets for the more than 40 Canadian commodities, Major G. B. Johnson, Canadian government trade commissioner at Glasgow, said in an interview here.

Opportunities for selling bacon, ham and cattle were particularly good, he stated. Indications pointed to higher values for fat and store cattle in the next 12 or 18 months.

"Scotland is probably Canada's most important market, per capita, for western wheat," Major Johnson remarked. "It buys as much (and in odd years, more) Canadian spring wheat flour as England and Wales combined, although the population is about one-eighth that of the larger partner. The grain distillers, located between Glasgow and Edinburgh, prefer Canadian western barley to all others when the quality is up to requirements. Not much rye goes to Scotland nowadays, but nearly all of it is Canadian.

"Supplies of Canadian cattle to Scotland have increased considerably and there is a noticeable improvement in the quality. Canadian dairy cows of good quality are also in demand.

"The trade in eggs is a considerable one and there are seldom complaints about quality, although the packing might occasionally be improved. The cheese trade, a very old one, is nothing like it used to be but sales in Scotland are once more increasing. Scotland is a large market for Canadian fresh apples. Canned fruits and vegetables, especially pears and apples, are sold there in large and ever-increasing quantities. Canadian hay from Quebec is very popular among race-horse owners and others.

"Canadian lumber of several varieties, from East and West, is sold in Scotland in large quantities for many purposes. Much of it is used in connection with the immense housing programs of the corporations of Glasgow, Edinburgh and other places.

"And so it goes over a wide range of perhaps 40 to 50 Canadian commodities, including chilled salmon, fish meal and oil, hardwood flooring, dowels for furniture making and golf pegs, cooperage stock, domestic woodware, honey, macaroni, canned soups and beans, rubber goods, agricultural tools, beekeepers' supplies, feeding stuffs, various kinds of seeds, hardware, electrical fixtures and appliances, plywood, leather and many others."

BOYCOTT DIMS HOPES OF FIGHT FOR SCHMELING

Unlikely To Meet Braddock Result Of Anti-Nazi Feeling, Lack Of Drawing Power

CHAMP AFTER CASH

Sees Next Battle Lost—Needs Million Dollar Gate To Quit On

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Jan 11.—(AP)—This is the inside story and study of a man of courage who was too good, too smart.

Max Schmeling was the only known fighter who dared to really fight Joe Louis, the devastating Negro Bomber with the pin cushion lips. As a reward for unquestionable ring heroism, he now finds himself unwanted as a fighting man in the "land of the free."

Unwanted not so much because he's a German citizen under mandatory Nazi rule, but unwanted because he isn't a sure and big enough drawing card to insure Jimmy Braddock, a tottering, idle champion a fortune in gate receipts for losing his heavyweight crown.

Long before the Jews began organizing a boycott of a Schmeling fight, Braddock and his manager began ducking the shrewd German. Older, slower and fat, Braddock realized his "last fight" had to bring in plenty of money.

For strange reasons, excluding anti-Nazi sentiment, Schmeling never has been a big drawing card, so the Braddock crowd had only one match in sight—a battle with Louis before a million dollar crowd, instead of a fight against Schmeling before a $300,000 fight mod.

The current boycott, naturally comes like money from home for the Braddock crowd, since the New York commission had ordered the champion to fight Schmeling before Louis.

13. More Ski Technique

After discussing in several articles the equipment needed in skiing, today we return to the technique of the sport.

There can be no doubt about it skiing has become one of the most scientific of sports, with interest and enjoyment growing in Canada as more and more people take to the snow trails. Ski theory and technique then assumes more and more importance.

Today every ambitious skier who sets himself a standard of proficiency is forced to devote more attention than hitherto to the fundamental principles and to study them well.

There is only one right way to learn to ski and only one right position for each part of the body since every movement made in skiing is governed by natural laws. The Swiss standard ski technique is based on this fact and it embraces in its simplest form every movement that the skier is called upon to master. There is, and can be, no better technique.

There is, too, a great deal of pleasure to be gained from investigating the mechanics of skiing with its various problems, and it should be remembered that the skier who has obtained a clear mental picture of the movements which the body is called upon to make has already solved many of the physical problems which will confront him.

That is why I consider technique of such high importance.

There were two exhibition games in the Senior Basketball Loop which has just been formed. The regular schedule will commence this Saturday. More about this later, names of teams, etc.

The C.G.E. team took the Orfuns into camp to the tune of 30-19 and showed the crowded gallery a nice exhibition of short-passing and sharp shooting. The Orfuns were without the services of Bun Kingdon after the first five minutes of play who had to retire because of a sprained ankle. Weese went well for the losers, notching the basket for 7 counters, while Richardson and Hunter tallied twelve points each for the winners.

In the second tusle St. Paul's took on the "Y" Leaders and outscored them 32 to 16. Neither outfit was at full strength but they provided plenty of lightning-fast plays. Thorburn was the high scorer for the winners, garnering 12 points. All the other players looked good.

"TOUGH GUY" IS O.K.

LONDON (CP)—Vincent Massey, High Commissioner in England for Canada, at the Authors' Club dinner said the expression "tough guy" was "O.K."

LORNE CHABOT

ROY WORTERS

Hockey fandom was asking whether gallant little Roy Worters, one of hockey's great all-time goalkeepers had stopped his last flying puck after a pile up of players during a New York Ranger-N.Y. American game sent him to the hospital with an operation in prospect. The team doctor declared that Worters would not don American's colors again this year. A professional star since he joined Pittsburg Pirates back in 1925, Roy has waged spectacular warfare against sniping opponents seeking points at the expense of Americans since 1928. The midget goalie has become something of a fixture with Americans who are now in the throes of a disastrous slump after a fine season start. Lorne Chabot, ex-Ranger, ex-Canadien, ex-Chicago and ex-Toronto netman, will replace him in the American nets.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

(C.J.P.)

LADIES AND gentlemen, tonight we offer you a three-act play staged at the Puck Opera on Brock St. and entitled: "Blood and Thunder." It is a triple-header in the Senior City Hockey League, called the old Blood and Thunder Loop 'cause there's blood on the moon when they play and thunder in the stands. At seven o'clock this eve, Mayfairs and Westclox clash; at eight, it's Millbrook vs. Outboard Marines; and at nine, the Lakefield lads tangle with Bewdley. Admission is 15 cents or a nickel if you can kid the doorman that you're still just a kid. This is a lot of hockey, scrapping and fun for the price of a semi-respectable cigar, and you can't go very wrong in an expenditure of that amount.

* * * * * * *

THERE IS no royal road to goal in this wild and woolly league. A puckster must run the gauntlet every rush and take more bumps than a second-hand auto on a country side road. Quite a fair crowd saw the opening jousts last week and all were enthused with the scrappy action, with some good hockey thrown in. As in the N.H.L., rules are rather elastic and gees do unto their opponents things that would rate a term on the hill if they tried it, say, on George St. Yes, they may spoil the child but not by sparing the rod!

* * * * * * *

THEY TELL a tale of a huge lumberjack from up Apsley way who saw one of the games last week here. He was a tough hombre who had carved his initials in countless campfire free-for-alls with a pair of trusty brass knucks. It seems he was staring entranced at the first tilt of the eve, fairly atremble with excitement as the Clockmen and the Marines tore into each other. Just as LeBarr and Stante collided with a thud that rattled dishes on Charlotte St. shelves, he was observed to slump over in a faint—and eight guys carried him out and laid him on a snow bank. But personally we think this is an exaggeration as no eight guys will leave a City Loop tussle to carry out anyone in a faint, unless maybe it were Jean Harlow! Anyway, you get action in gobs in those rousing senior melees.

UP IN Lindsay Saturday we were hailed by a chap, "Hey, don't you write sports in Peterborough? I've seen you at football games." We said no we didn't any more but we used to. No use asking for trouble. He said: "Well, I was gonna say you ought to plug for a home-and-home series in hockey between Lindsay and Peterborough rugby players. It would be good practise and fun, and fans always like hockey games between these towns." So then we said: "Sure, we write sports. We were just—ha, ha—kidding you. And we'll suggest such a series again." The Scugogers can ice a good puck team from their grid squad, but Orfuns can draw such puckists as Sloan, Magee, Weir, Archibald, Crowe, Curtin, Cameron, Gardner and a few others. Such a serial might prove interesting. How about promoting it, Jim Lehane?

OUR JUNIOR Colts play in Belleville tonight and there may be a few changes in the local lineup. Coach Buckland says he will carry 14 juniors and try to give them all some hockey, making a change or two each of the scheduled games. The Colts play in Tweed Wednesday and the two Clarks may not be available that night as there is a junior curling tankard in Lindsay on Wednesday. No one here still knows why Belleville refused to come here tonight for that postponed intermediate contest of Friday. Eddie Thomas said he couldn't get his squad together, but he probably wanted to stay home this e'en and coach the juniors. He should have been forced to play here today by the O.H.A. An attempt to get an exhibition game for tomorrow here with Oshawa failed, so Petes are idle till the Fliers come here on Friday.

* * * * * * *

FIVE TEAMS entered the Junior City Hockey League at their meeting in Duffus' Saturday night. They are All Saints, St. Peter's, Canucks, Monarchs and Tigers. The first four will open with a double-header this Wednesday night from seven to nine in the Brock, but dunno who plays who just yet. A double schedule will be run off with the top two teams playing off at the finish. The loop officers express appreciation for supplies to Vic Hamilton, Bill Kay, Woolworth's and Myer Levine. This should be a good league and will take care of a bunch of young pucksters of junior age around town. Bill Prindible is president and Mike O'Brien secretary; the loop is sponsored by the Peterborough Hockey Club.

SCHEDULES FOR three sections are now in for the Southend Junior League. There are two circuits in the southend, one intermediate which takes in six squads and has its own officers; and the other having five juveniles, four midgets and four bantams. The latter circuit acknowledges receipt from the O.H.A., via Bill Prindible, of a dozen and a half hockey sticks which will be divided among the bantam entries. These are St. Peter's, King Edward, Leaflets and Canucks. The Scarfe Trophy for the intermediates has been received and is a fine cup.

CHURCH BASKETBALL League standings are in tonight. St. Paul's Juveniles took a 24-14 victory over St. John's in a good game Saturday eve in the "Y", and George St. Bantams eliminated St. Andrew's 24-10, to leave St. Paul's and St. John's in the playoff berths. Lots of action and the loss of several players through the four-foul clause marked these tussles. Games next Saturday night in this loop at the Y.M.C.A. are: George St. Bantams vs. St. John's at six, and St. Andrew's Juveniles vs. Murray St. at seven.

* * * * * * *

HITHER AND yawn: Canuck Midgets go to Lindsay on Friday for an exhibition game with St. Mary's, having a return fixture here later . . . . It seems tournament play interferes with O.H.A. competition plenty up around the Lindsay district; many pucksters prefer these tourneys to O.H.A. play . . . . C.G.E. Shop Loop tilts Sat'day were postponed but they'll be played this Tuesday at the Brock as follows: Induction Motors vs. Marhine Shop at seven, Industrial Control vs. Wire at eight; Fractional Motors vs. Office at nine; and Wed. Switchgear meets Transportation at nine; no charge for these games . . . . Girls' cage contests Friday in the Y.W, are: Westclix Seniors vs. Marconi, "Y" Quakers vs. C.G.E. Seniors, Westclox Juniors vs. C. G. E., and George St. Juniors vs. St. John's; they start at 7.45 . . . . Four Church Puck Loop tilts tonight at All Saints starting at 6 . . . . Looks like oodles of hockey for local teams this week if the weather keeps cool. . . . . Wrestling class at the "Y" meets tonight at eight instead of Tuesday . . . . Other "Y" dope on volleyball and basketball is in elsewhere.

$400,000 OFFER MADE BRADDOCK

Kearns Enters Promoters' Field "With Backing To Bid With Any Of Them"

DETROIT, Jan. 11 (AP)—Jack Kearns, erstwhile fight manager turned promoter, entered his new field today, announcing a $400,000 offer to heavyweight champion Jimmy Braddock to fight Joe Louis here.

Referring to the Max Schmeling "boycott" in New York as offering Detroit the opportunity for the title fight, Kearns said he had sufficient financial backing here to "bid with any promoter in the country."

Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey, turned fight promoter a few weeks ago, his first such venture, under an agreement to stage shows at Olympia, the big indoor arena where Detroit Red Wings play hockey. He would stage the heavyweight fight in June at Navin Field, home of Detroit Tigers.

The $400,000 offer to Braddock, Kearns said, was accompanied by a $200,000 proposition to Louis. He said he gave Braddock the privilege of a percentage as well.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP) — If Germany really wants the Schmeling-Braddock scrap, now is the time to step in and grab it...It's 10 to one it'll never go on in this country ...Don't think for a minute that boycott isn't the real thing...One leading sports magazine was offered the cost of producing six issues (five figures) just to print a column of anti-fight propaganda each month ...P.S.: The mag turned it down.

Louisiana State and Santa Clare lugged $40,000 each out of the Sugar Bowl...Some of the boys are saying the real reason Gene Venske shifted from the 3,000 to the 880 metres in the Casey games Saturday night was not to get a crack at Glenn Cunningham, but to get out of the way of Don Lash...

Rumors says Carl Hubbell, who drew down $17,500 in '36, will collect $25,000 from the Giants this season.

Five Teams Entered Junior City League

Five teams entered the Junior City Hockey League on Saturday evening in the final meeting held in Duffus' Board Room. The squads are St. Peter's, All Saints, Monarchs, Canucks and Tigers. They will play a double schedule with the first and second teams at the finish meeting in playoffs. Bill Prindible is president and Mike O'Brien the secretary; the league is sponsored by the Hockey Club here and will play O.H.A. rules.

The schedule opens this Wednesday evening in the Brock St. rink with Canucks meeting All Saints at seven o'clock and Monarchs playing St. Peter's at eight. A small charge will be made for fans to see these lively contests. All games will be played at the Brock St. rink. Further information will be available shortly.

CRICKET VETERANS ARE THINNING OUT

Philip Mean, Hampshire Star, Is The Latest To Leave First-Class Ranks

LONDON, Jan. 11.—(CP)—When Jack Hobbs, outstanding star of post-war cricket in England, announced his retirment from first-class competition nearly two years ago, the knowledge that the great international played would be seen no more on famous pitches of the Old Country, Australia and South Africa came as a shock to followers of the ancient game.

A few weeks ago Kent decided not to re-engage "Tich" Freeman, famous bowler and hero of "Hop County" crowds for many years. Following suit, Hampshire County announced recently that Philip Mead, another veteran international player, would not be retained. His departure means that Frank Woolley, another Kent professional, alone remains of the "Old Brigade."

Hobbs, most brilliant of the quartet, was 53 when he cried "quits" and Freeman 47. Mead, big-framed left-hander, will be 50 in March while Woolley is a few months younger.

One of cricket's greatest charms is the interest taken by its supporters in the veterans of the game and Mead's appearances year after year for Hampshire had been taken for granted. For 30 years the "robot of first-class cricket," as he has been called, was the mainstay of Hampshire's batting just as "Tich" Freeman bore the burden of Kent's bowling staff.

Mead first played for the southern county against Australia at Southampton in 1905. He has since rendered England valuable service in test matches against Australia and South Africa both at home and abroad. Altogether he has hit 153 centuries in first-class cricket and scored more than 55,000 runs.

In recognition of his services, the Hampshire club is to pay his weekly wage until September. Arrangements are also being made for a public subscription list to be open all next season on his behalf. A. Macleod, Hampshire secretary explaining the position, said:

"Mead is free to accept any employment, but if he is available next summer, and the Hampshire selection committee wish to pick him, he will play. We hope, for his sake, that he will find another job."

Freeman was quickly "snapped up" by Walsall Cricket Club, playing in the Birmingham and District League. He was appointed professional and coach by the Midlands club.

Woolley, tall all-rounder, will again take the field for Kent this year. Known as the prince of left-handers, he first played for the county in 1906 and from 1907 until 1934 scored more than 1,000 runs in each season. In 1928 his aggregate was 3,352 (12 centuries). He has played for England in 32 tests.

AUSSIE SWIMMERS RETIRE

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Clare Dennis, 1932 Olympic breast stroke champion, has announced her retirement from competition swimming, also Bonnie Mealing, another Australian mermaid.

High Scorer

In a free-scoring game between South Porcupine Perkies and Toburn Mines of Kirkland Lake in the Gold Belt Senior Northern Ontario Hockey association, Bill Maki of Porkies scored six of his team's eight goals. Porkies won the game 8-1. Maki is seen here.

ELLSWORTH VINES ENTERS HOSPITAL

Seeks Rest To Cure Flu After Third Straight Loss To Perry

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Ellsworth Vines, forced by illness to suspend temporarily his net tour with Fred Perry of England, rested comfortably today in St. Luke's hospital. The California star, world's professional tennis champion, entered the institution suffering from a mild case of influenza and tonsilitis after playing a listless, losing straight set match against Perry Saturday night.

Vines plainly showed the effects of his illness in his Chicago match. He was slow afoot and frequently rested against the backdrops. Perry won easily, 6-0, 6-2, 6-3, for his third consecutive triumph.

Bill Tilden, former champion and Vines' opponent on a recent tour of the Orient, may substitute for Vines against Perry at Detroit tomorrow night. Detroit promoters said yesterday the match might be postponed to Saturday night in the hope Vines would be in shape by then.

TWO CAGE GAMES IN CHURCH LOOP

St. Paul's Juveniles And George Street Bantams Win Their Games

Church Basketball League standings to date:

Juvenile:	W.	L.	F.	A.	Pts
St. Andrew's	4	0	143	33	8
St. Paul's	3	2	90	97	6
Murray Street	2	2	56	92	4
St. John's	0	5	52	123	0

Bantam:	W.	L.	F.	A.	Pts
St. Paul's	5	0	65	13	10
St. John's	4	2	21	29	8
George Street	1	4	34	46	2
St. Andrew's	1	4	30	62	2

Two games were played on Saturday with St. Paul's Juveniles taking a 24-14 win over St. John's and George Street Bantams eliminating St. Andrew's by a 24-10 score. Games next Saturday are: George Street Bantams vs. St. John's at six, and St. Andrew's Juveniles vs. Murray Street at seven.

Though yet to win a game in five starts, Victor Coleman's St. John's Juveniles make this race a tight one. The Anglicans had a 6-5 lead at half-time and were maknig it close till Craig left with four fouls. St. Paul's forged ahead on smart work by Ferguson and Sedgewick, but the latter left later with four fouls. Dyer was high scorer for the losers and Ascott went well for the winners. The teams:

St. Paul's — Dunford, Morrow, Ferguson, Sedgewick, Ascott.

St. John's— Craig, Dyer, Castle, Pakenham, Marshall, Forsythe.

Referees—R. White, S. Rogow.

Scorer—D. Charlton.

George Street Bantams' win decided the playoff berths. Prior to this game, the East-siders had a chance, but their loss leaves St. Paul's and St. John's in playoff positions. Despite McPherson's brilliant efforts, St. Andrew's were outclassed by the husky George Streeters, who would likely have been in playoffs but for two default losses for using an over-age player. Parnall and Burns led in scoring, the count at half-time being 10-6 for George Street. The teams:

St. Andrew's—Ridyard, Dewart, McPherson, Harriss.

George Street — Parnall, Burns, Richardson, Saunders, Parr.

Referee—K. Gillespie.

Scorer—R. Rogow.

Trounce Montreal 2 To 1 Saturday But Penalties Kill Them In Chicago 2-1 Game

DETROIT BEAT BOSTON 4-2

Rangers Down Maroons 3-2 In Montreal Saturday But Lose Sunday 5-2

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—(CP).—Good times are apparently back in Big Time hockey again, for the boys are packing them in all around the circuit and the depression, which only hit the game lightly at its worst, is definitely gone.

There was something like $90,000 in the various club treasuries to-day from five games played over the week-end before 58,530 persons. That's important money and many a star will be staying awake nights figuring how to beat that $7,000 maximum rule when contract signing comes along.

Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins played to the biggest crowd of the five—13,496—a season record at Detroit Olympia. They saw Wings win a one-penalty game 4-2 and take back the top spot in the United States' division they had shared for a night with New York Rangers.

Rangers Perk Up.

Lester Patrick's team stepped up beside the Wings for 24 hours by taking the Maroons 3-2 in Montreal Saturday night but they slipped back when they dropped a 5-2 decision to Tommy Gorman's team in New York last night.

The win in Montreal left Maroons only four points behind Montreal Canadiens, the leaders, who were beaten 2-1 by Toronto Saturday. Maroons are still four points up on Leafs who were decisioned 3-1 by Black Hawks in Chicago last night. It was the fifth Hawk win in 22 games this season.

Bruins held the score tied at 1-1 for most of the second period but a smart Detroit passing attack shifted them out of the picture in the third. Herb Lewis put the Detroiters in front with his first period goal and when Joe Jerwa tied it up early in the second, Bruins held them off until there was only six seconds of the period to play. A pass from Ebbie Goodfellow to Syd Howe paved the way for the breaking score.

Maroons Provide Upset.

When Maroons took Rangers last night they broke a string of 10 Maroon-Ranger scheduled games in which Rangers were undefeated. The Montrealers had not beaten Patrick's team since the spring of 1935.

Saturday night's game was close but Maroons were much the better team in the New York encounter. Bob Gracie gave Maroons a first period lead in the Montreal game, but Neil and Mac Colville put the New Yorkers ahead in the second.

Earl Robinson tied the score for Maroons half-way through the third and set the stage for Frank Boucher to win the game. There was less than four minutes to play when the veteran centre took Cecil Dillon's pass for the important counter.

One of the Maroon goals last night was a gift from Ching Johnson. In the third Johnson rapped the puck into his own net while trying to clear Jimmy Ward's long shot.

Jerry Shannon scored twice in the first to send Maroons away to a good start, and when Bill Cook and Dillon got goals in the second Rangers were in a position to make things interesting. After the Johnson affair they threw everything into their attacks and Robinson and Baldy Northcott broke away for goals.

Best Game of Year.

The Canadien-Toronto game was the most thrilling of the Toronto season. The teams kept up a terrific pace from the start, and Toronto only won because they kept trying every minute. George Mantha scored for Habitants in the first period, Bill Thoms tied it up in the second, and Harvey Jackson got the winning counter in the third.

Red Horner was the centre of a wild second period when 11 penalties were handed out. Horner got three minors and Referee Babe Dye tacked on a 10-minute misconduct when the big defenceman protested.

Hawks cashed in on two penalties to Leafs to score their first goal against Leafs last night. Jimmy Fowler and Nick Metz were serving tripping penalties when Louis Trudell beat Turk Broda. Paul Thompson broke away with Trudell from a Leaf gang attack half way through the second to put Hawks two up, and Reg. Hamilton saved Leafs from a shutout with his third period goal.

Camera "Stops" Bangtails Cold As They Flash Under Wire

With every muscle taut and strained to the limit, these two speedsters flash under the wire at Tropical Park to provide one of the finest racing pictures we have ever seen. The runner on the rail is a fairly easy winner—no camery eye needed—but the pair of them make a scene to delight the heart of any lover of the sport of kings.

McGILL REDMEN PASTE PRINCETON IN 12-1 SHELLACING

Harvard Batters Dartmouth Indians Down In 2 To 0 Whitewashing

YALE LOSES TO U. OF M. 7-1

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—(CP).—The College boys who do their hockey playing in front of the "rah-rah" crowds in the International Intercollegiate League arenas put away the gear to-day until Friday with McGill Redmen on top and Harvard established as the leading threat to the Canuck teams.

They, along with Queen's who have played only one game, remained unbeaten over the week-end in three-way scrimmaging below the border. In full stride, McGill trounced Princton 12-1 Saturday, while Harvard edged past Dartmouth 2-0 and University of Montreal drubbed Yale 7-1.

Then, as 10,000—the largest crowd at a college game since 1930—howled joyfully, Captain George Ford led the crimson forces through the Indian defence on two rushes. He scored both goals himself to give Harvard its 13th straight hockey victory and its second of the League's short season.

Victory sent the John Harvards into a second-place tie with U. of M., and Toronto Blues, each with four points to McGill's six.

Redmen Run Wild.

Princeton's defence was helpless against the free-skating Redmen, who scored five goals in each of the first and second periods. A heavy fog settled over the ice in the third period and McGill counted only twice, while Barnicle punched the single Tiger tally past Goaler Tennant.

Paul Pidcock threw the strongest punches for McGill, scoring four goals. Bing Crosby, Russ McConnell and Lamb each fired home a brace while Mackay and Walker finished off the total with singles.

Yale had no answer to the blinding speed of the Frenchmen from the University of Montreal. Lecavalier sent U. of M. to the front in less than four minutes and they kept adding to the score while the Elis tried desperately for an attack to counter the Montrealers' swiftness.

Roger Gagne and Jean Armand divided scoring honors with two each while Ouimet and Migneault got one apiece. Fifty-six seconds after Ouimet's tally in the second period, Clint Childs slapped in the lone Yale goal on a solo rush.

Bitsy Grant Considers Withdrawing From Game Because Of Business Pressure

ATLANTA, Jan. 11.—(CP)—Soon Bitsy Grant may give up his role of "giant killer" in the tennis world. A veteran campaigner at 26, the tiny dynamiter says he is seriously considering withdrawing from active competition on clay and grass. He sums up his reason in two words: "Business pressure."

Grant sells insurance and finds it similar in many respects to his type of tennis game. "You've got everlastingly to keep hitting 'em," he declares. "To let up would be to lose." Giants tottered before his steady stroking yet he missed what he wanted most—a place on the American Davis Cup "varsity."

He believes the United States will regain the Davis Cup this year—with Budge, Mako, Riggs and Parker comprising the team." As for himself, he says he can't see how he can spare the time to play in trial matches in the spring.

Hockey's Big Seven

Jimmy Ward of Maroons, with a goal and assist boosting his total to 19, took over lone possession of last place in the big seven.

Dorothy Bundy of Santa Monica, daughter of famed netter May Sutton Bundy, is shown executing her pet shot, a powerful forehand drive against which few players can stand up. Ranked No. 8 among her countrywomen for racket ability, she has announced her candidacy for the U.S. Wightman Cup team. She recently won women's singles tennis championship held at mid - winter Southern California tournament.

To Johnny Sorrell, left winger of Detroit Red Wings who will be 30 years old tomorrow. Sorrell, born in Chesterville, Ont., joined the Detroit National Hockey League team in 1930, and was a star when they won the N.H.L. title in 1934 and the world championship in 1936.

Frank Boucher, Rangers, who broke up a 2-2 tie by firing a goal for New York against Maroons in last period Saturday night.

Jerry Shannon, Maroons, whose two first-period goals helped the Montrealers to a 3-2 Sunday night triumph over Rangers.

HORNETS MUFF SEVENTH IN ROW

Take 5-3 Beating From Falcons And Another 4-1 From Ramblers

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—(CP).—Donie Hughes went into a huddle with himself to-day to try and find some scheme to put an end to foundering tactics of his Pittsburgh Hornets. Ranked a classy outfit at the outset of the campaign, the Detroit Red Wings' farm team absorbed their sixth and seventh straight losses at the week-end.

They remained in second place in the International-American League's western section, seven points in front of Cleveland Falcons, who applied one of Hornets' smearings. Hughes hoped that Goalie Earl Robertson who replaced young Jimmy Franks might stem the tide, but it seems as though it will take more than Earl's wizardry.

The lowly Falcons rose from the depths to smite Pittsburgh 5-3 Saturday night and Hornets looked even more wobbly on home ice as they took a 4 to 1 pasting on Sunday from Philadelphia Ramblers. Bill Hudson saved the hive from a shutout with a smart goal early in the third period.

It was Ramblers' second win of the week-end as they moved one point ahead of Springfield Indians in the eastern section. The best the Redmen could do was split even with Syracuse Stars, winning at home 2-1 in overtime and dropping a 6-1 decision in Syracuse.

Ramblers Take Reds 2-1.

Ramblers overcame an early lead to drub Providence Reds 3-1 Saturday night, with Defencemen Hugh Gustafson and Vernon Ayres scoring two of the winners' goals. There was only two penalties handed out, both for tripping.

New Haven Eagles, fighting desperately to get out of the eastern group cellar, made a complete fizzle of the week-end for the Providence entry by overwhelming Reds 6-1. The Eagles were never headed in the hard but cleanly fought contest, which saw only two minor penalties.

Young Marcel Raymond was hero of Springfield's 2-1 victory over Syracuse Saturday as he scored the third overtime goal. George Parsons gave Stars the game's first goal in the extra session but old Alex Smith tied it up to pave the way for Raymond's effort. The following night Syyracuse took no chances and bagged six goals before Indians clicked late in the last session.

TWO STARS LOOM ON WINTER TRACK

North Texas Lad Wayne Rideout And Columbus Sophomore Weast Both Beat Lash

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (A.P.). — The youthful winter track season already has produced two athletes who may be heard from a few more times before the United States board-pounding season is over.

In the outdoor sugar bowl meet at New Orleans in December it was Wayne Rideout of North Texas Teachers' College who stole the show. He not only conquered Indiana's Don Lash in his specialty, the two-mile run, but surpassed every two-mile performance except the 8.58.3 feat Lash turned in at Princeton last year.

At the opening indoor meet on Saturday, the Columbus Council Knights of Columbus, games in Brooklyn, a Columbia University sophomore, Herb. Weast, outshone Lash and a number of other famous performers by running 100 meters in 10.6 seconds for a world indoor record.

Weast's remarkable performance clipped a full fifth of a second from the listed mark, held jointly by Bob McAllister and Karl Wildermuth, and considered almost unbeatable.

Lash came back from his New Orleans defeat to win in the remarkable fast time of 8.32.4 in the 3,000-meter event. His time was only 6 seconds slower than Paavo Nurmi's indoor record.

Glenn Cunningham again proved his superiority to Gene Venzke in the 800-meter feature, beating him by some six meters in 1.56.4.

QUINTUPLET CARROTS.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Jan. 8.—(CP)—Cecil Elliot came into newspaper office here and proudly displayed what he called his "quintuplet carrots."

Elliot said he grew the five carrots all of which sprouted from one root and are entwined together in his own garden.

BANCROFT FIRM MAKES BIG DEAL

Hubbel And Son Purchase Huge Timber Holdings Near Bracebridge

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BANCROFT, Jan. 11.—U. A. Hubbel and Son, well-known lumbermen of Bancroft, have purchased the timber holdings of J. D. Shier Lumber Company of Bracebridge. The block includes the township of McClintock, and part of Livingstone and Lawrence, a total of nearly 100 square miles.

This local company estimates its yearly cut at 6,000,000 feet at Bancroft, and still owns approximately 12,000,000 feet in the present limits in Cardiff and Chandos townships.

Hubbel and Son may move headquarters to Huntsville during the latter part of 1937.

Police Court

Police court was held on Saturday, in the council chamber, with Magistrate Lloyd presiding.

Wesley Baumhour, charged with being intoxicated in a public place, paid $10 and costs.

Charles Morois, on a similar charge, was also assessed $10 and costs, and allowed 30 days in which to pay same, in default ten days in jail. Jess Robinson and Clifford Grant of Mayo Township, charged with using snares to catch foxes, both pleaded guilty, and were fined $10 and costs. Clarence Wasmund, charged with trapping without a license, had his case dismissed, there being insufficient evidence to convict. R. W. Robinson was assessed $1 and costs on a common assault charge.

AGED HABITANT TAKES BRIDE, 17

GRAND WEDDING

ALBERTVILLE, Que., Jan. 11.—(CP)—Into the snow-laden hills of Matapedia Valley, 76-year-old Severin Ouellet has taken his girlish bride, 17-year-old Yvonne Savoie, to resume a lonely farm life.

Life has been drab for Ouellet, a native of Dalhousie, N.B., since his wife died and he was left alone on the little colonization settlement where he made his home for the last eight years.

Odd trips by horse and buggy or sleigh to the neighboring village of Albertville had been the only events in the life of the aged squatter. He made them whenever he had produce to sell or supplies to buy.

Then he met Yvonne, whose bright eyes and trim figure attracted the old settler. His visits to the village became frequent, and more frequent.

Last Tuesday morning as dawn broke, old Severin led Yvonne to the altar in the parish church. Almost every one joined in the procession of sleighs from the church to the home of the bride, where the wedding breakfast was served.

After the celebration they hitched up Ouellet's horse and sleigh, covered the bride and bridegroom with furs, and sent them away amid a tinkling of bells, bound for the little home near Ste. Marguerite.

BISHOP LICHFIELD ABOUT TO RESIGN

Striking Episcopal Figure Feels Powers Weakening—24 Years In Office

By Thomas T. Champion
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Jan. 11—The Bishop of Lichfield, Dr. J. A. Kempthorne, has announced his intention to resign early in the coming summer. Dr. Kempthorne will then be entering his 75th year and concluding his 24th as bishop of the diocese.

"I am acutely conscious that my powers are beginning to fail," says Dr. Kempthorne, "and it is wise for a bishop to lay down his office before, and not after, such failure becomes serious.

Dr. Kempthorne's finely chiselled features make him one of the most striking figures on the episcopal bench. Before going to Lichfield in 1913 he was for three years Bishop Suffragan of Hull, and previously had a fine record of parochial work in Rochdale and Gateshead, and lastly as rector of Liverpool for six years.

He has been a vigorous defender of the younger generation. At a diocesan conference he once said: "I do not wonder that some of our young people do not care to go to church when everything is being swayed by the stupid, sticky conservatism of some of their seniors."

The diocese of Lichfield was founded nearly 1,300 years ago. The exterior of the cathedral, with its three graceful spires, is particularly attractive. One of the chief objects of admiration inside is Chantrey's beautiful memorial known as the sleeping children."

FROM CHORUS GIRL TO SCRIPT WRITER

In London To See Barrie's Play —Betty Meehan Talks Success

LONDON, Jan. 11 (CP)—Betty Meehan, former Ziegfeld Follies girl, now one of the highest-paid scenario writers in Hollywood, came to London to see Sir James Barrie's new play, "The Boy David."

"Sir James was responsible for my transformation," she told a reporter. On the table was a signed copy of his "Kiss for Cinderella," which Betty carries as a mascot.

"I was only one of the ladies of the chorus in the screen version of this beautiful play," she explained, "and I thought the script falsified the ending. So keenly did I feel on the subject that I cabled Barrie about it. The result was that they changed the script, and I had dozens of offers to become a scenarist."

Miss Meehan was responsible for the script of "Beau Geste," one of the biggest box-office "draws" in cinema history. Her lastest screen play, "The Magnificent Obsession," is listed among the "gold-mine" features of the current American box-office digest.

She is the top flight of the 900 Hollywood "scribblers," but is too modest to mention actual figures. Writers are a better-paid class than producers at Hollywood, she said. The minimum weekly fee for writers now is $700 and the maximum $3,000.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S COLD EARS

"Whee-e-e! Burr-r-r! Gurrr-r-r!"

That was Uncle Wiggily making those funny noises. Mr. Twistytail, the fat gentleman pig, who was waddling along with him, laughed and asked:

"Are you trying to sound like Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear, Wiggy, my friend?"

"Oh, no," Uncle Wiggily answered. "I'm just cold, that's all. I always make noises like that when I'm cold."

"What kind of noises do you make when you are hot, like on the Fourth of July?" asked the pig.

"Oh, then I just say 'Whew! Puff! Ah! Oh!'" Uncle Wiggily laughed as he answered.

"Do you ever ask 'Is it hot enough for you?' Wiggy?" inquired the pig gentleman.

"Oh, no, never," said Uncle Wiggily. "That wouldn't be fair. But why do you talk about hot Fourth of July when I'm almost frozen? Let's hop along faster, Twisty," suggested the rabbit gentleman.

"You can hop, being a bunny," said Mr. Twistytail. "But I must waddle my way along, being a fat pig."

"Who bursts the buttons off his coat if he waddles too fast," chuckled Mr. Longears.

What Part is Coldest?

"That's right," agreed Mr. Twistytail. "But what part of you is the most cold, Wiggy? Is it your nose?"

"No," answered the rabbit gentleman. "My nose is pink and that is a warm color. Besides, I can twinkle my nose."

"What good does that do?" asked the pig.

"Why when you twinkle your nose you must move it?" said Uncle Wiggily. "And when you move any part of you that is cold it gets warm. You feel a glow, you see, in your cold feet if you run or you feel a warm glow if you twinkle your nose."

"I wonder if I could twinkle my nose?" grunted the fat pig.

"Try it," suggested Uncle Wiggily. Mr. Twistytail did, but his nose was like a rubber ball and when he pushed it out and in he looked so funny Uncle Wiggily had to laugh.

Mr. Twistytail also laughed. And when he laughed he laughed all over, just like a toy balloon in a field of clover.

"There, you should be warmer after that laugh," grunted the pig.

"I am," said the rabbit. "All but my ears."

Pig is Warm

"Is that where you feel the cold most?" asked the pig gentleman. Being fat he was hardly cold at all. That's one nice thing about being fat. It may be a lot of trouble to be fat, but feeling cold isn't one of them. Anyhow, Uncle Wiggily said:

"Yes, it's my ears that get the coldest, Twisty. You see they are really the largest part of me."

"Yes, they are very long ears," agreed the pig. And it was true. Uncle Wiggily Longears didn't get his name because he was like a gold fish, without any ears that can be seen.

"My long ears are very cold," said the rabbit as he hopped and Mr. Twistytail waddled along through the woods. "Oh, so cold."

All of a sudden Mr. Twistytail said: "Come on in here, Wiggy. Hop in quickly! some one is coming after us."

And what happened next and how the bunny gentleman warmed his ears I'll tell you in the next story, which will be about Uncle Wiggily's warm ears. But please don't let the ash can come in to listen to the radio unless it wipes its feet on the door mat.

MEXICANS READY HECKLE TROTZKY

Outburst Of Hostility Appears As Exiled Revolutionist Nears Port

TAMPICO, Mex., Jan. 11 (AP)—An outburst of hostility to Leon Trotzky threatened today as the tanker bringing the exiled Russian revolutionary leader to refuge in Mexico neared this port.

The first intimation of trouble originated in the Tamaulipas State Labor Federation, an affiliate of the Confederation of Labor of Mexico (CTM), which has opposed the Mexican Government's offer of asylum to the one-time Soviet War Commissar.

The time of the ship's arrival was not definitely known, but leaders of the protest said they had posted a look-out and were prepared to make a demonstration when the ship was sighted. The Ruth, chartered to an American oil company, was expected some time today on a special call to drop the exile.

Dock workers, it was learned, had hired launches and planned to send boatloads of demonstrators alongside the Ruth to heckle Trotzky when the tanker enters the harbor.

Extensive precautions were made to preserve order when the revolutionist sets foot in Mexico.

A Face Covered With Pimples Causes Much Embarrassment

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

There is little doubt but that impure and impoverished blood is the soil on which those red, white, pus filled pimples develop and thrive, and that nothing short of a vigorous, persistent blood purifying treatment will eradicate them from the system.

Try a few bottles and be convinced.

Edwin And Eric Little Assemble Effective Travelling Power Plant

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 11.—A machine built by Edwin and Eric Little of Seymour Township for a travelling power plant for farm work has been on exhibition at Campbellford. It is comprised of two motors, one for transportation and one for operating power. The secondary motor is a Buick 4 cylinder, and the primary a Chevrolet Superior. A special duplex transmission is installed and the steel frame of the Chevrolet automobile has been replaced by timber. The chassis is equipped with tractor and regulation wheels. The expense of manufacturing the combination was extremely low, and the cost of operation much less than a tractor, due to the lighter motors. The invention has been put to numerous uses, among them being sawing wood, running a grain mill, ploughing and cultivating. The boys have shown great ingenuity in the making of this and other mechanical equipment. Eric Little was engaged as assistant cheese maker at Trent Bridge Cheese Factory last season.

BAILIEBORO LIKES GOVERNMENT PLAN

Decision To Pay Old Age Pensions And Mothers' Allowance Approved

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 11.—A survey of the business men and farmers of this district made within the past few days, generally discloses the approval of the taxpayers in the community in the legislation recently passed by the Provincial government in absorbing the costs of old age pensions and mothers' allowances.

The steadily increasing demands upon the taxpayers for pension purposes has long been a handicap to the progress of those making an honest effort to pay taxes and the new legislation has greatly encouraged residents, who believe with depression days vanishing and a new era of prosperity dawning, that the Provincial government is doing what is within their power to help the hard-pressed taxpayer to get a new start.

One prominent resident of the district stated that the new legislation would make it possible for municipal and county council legislators to cut the coat according to the cloth and not only should county taxes be reduced but great strides could be made in paying off the tremendous debt which had accumulated in the united counties of Northumberland and Durham.

Mr. Bickell said a rush for new licenses was anticipated this week but to date the demand throughout the province had been small.

BAILIEBORO

FALL WHEAT STILL APPEARS HEALTHY

Ice Is Chief Menace To Crop Bailieboro Farmers Think

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 11. — The general conversation in country stores and among rural and urban folk is largely centred upon the unseasonable weather prevailing in central Ontario.

Many think that snow is badly needed to cover up the country in order that wheat and grass seeds would be protected from the winter winds and frosts but all agree the rain has been needed for the water shortage which has prevailed since last fall.

Farmers in this district which is noted for being one of the finest fall wheat sections in Ontario, are not greatly disturbed over the continuing mild weather. Although the snow has completely disappeared and the wheat and seeds have been left exposed, both are looking healthy and the weather although mild has not drawn the frost from the soil to cause the roots to heave or become damaged.

Past records go to show excellent crops following open winters and although it does seem normal when the countryside is well blanketed with snow still nature seem to arrange weather conditions to fit in with crop conditions. The one danger when fields are free from snow at mid-winter season is of ice forming on the fields and heavy ice covering wheat or grass seeds can cause much damage. However, all seems well to date in regard to these crops and the mild weather is providing an abundance of water as well as helping to shorten up the long Canadian winter which this season set in so early in the fall.

Farmers of the district believe that owing to the heavy rains there will not be a heavy snowfall this winter.

FOURTEEN SHOT AS RIOTS BREAK IN FLINT CITY

Police Use Guns And Gas In Vain Effort To Move Strikers From Plant

NATIONAL GUARDS CALLED

General Motors Shut Heat Off Factory, Guards Attempt To Block Food

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 12—(C.P.)—Michigan National Guardsmen were mobilized to-day in fear of a renewal of rioting at the strike-closed Fisher Body Plant No. 2 after a night of disorder in which at least 14 persons were shot—one wounded critically—and a score suffered other injuries.

During a lull in the street fighting between police and strikers, Governor Frank Murphy arrived in Flint from Lansing and conferred with various officials. Soon afterward Captain Frank Millard ordered the Flint Company of the National Guard—numbering 55 men—to assemble at the Armory.

While the Guardsmen awaited further orders, a force of State policemen was ordered to Flint to reinforce the city police and deputy sheriffs who clashed with the strikers.

Approximately fifty city policemen augmented by county officers to-day stood guard near the plant, closed by a "sit down" strike. A menacing crowd remained throughout the night and showed no indication of leaving the scene. After the last of three skirmishes the police withdrew across a bridge near the building to block off the area.

First Bloodshed in State

As the first blood was shed in Michigan in connection with the United Automobile Workers' widespread strike in United States plants of the General Motors Corporation the two men who have been directing the strike from the union's headquarters in Detroit were en route to Washington to confer with John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

"We will do anything to protect our workers," said John Brophy, a director of the C.I.O., in commenting on the conference at Flint. He and Adolph Germer, president of the D.A.W.A., travelled to Washington for the conference.

The scheduled closing of four more General Motors plants to-day would leave 112,000 employees idle by to-night.

Flint police used riot guns and tear and nauseating gas in their futile attempts to drive a crowd from the Fisher plant and to dislodge several hundred "sit down" strikers inside. The strikers defended themselves with bottles, stones, nuts, bolts and other objects.

Signal for Fireworks

The removal by company guards of the ladder the strikers had used to deliver food through a second-storey window to the men inside was the signal for the crowd to congregate outside the plant. At first it was orderly. Then the strikers seized control of the plant entrance and the company guards retreated across the street. The police appeared, wearing gas masks and carrying riot guns, gas bombs and gas grenades.

When the union men refused to surrender the door to the police the officers began using the gas. Then

WOMAN'S APPEAL OUSTED BY COURT

Judge Thinks 18 Months May Do Marjorie Constable Good After Recent Company

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—(CP)—Concluding Marjorie Constable had become associated with men who had criminal records and had co-operated with them in an attempt to rob the brewers' warehouse in Wiarton, July 27, the Ontario court of appeal declined today to reduce the sentence of 18 months. Mr. Justice Makins imposed after her conviction by a jury at Walkerton.

"It may do this woman good to be separated from those men," said Chief Justice Rowell, who pronounced the court's judgment.

Lacking a transcript of evidence taken at the woman's trial, R. P. Ottwell abandoned her appeal against her conviction. Mr. Ottewell contended that the only evidence against his client was that she had occupied a hotel room overlooking the warehouse.

Counsel admitted that Marjorie Constable had associated with men who had committed crimes and had been "running around the country" with Adrian Vanderyagt, who had been convicted on a charge of participating in the attempt to rob the warehouse.

For the Crown, Joseph Sedgwick, K.C., opposed reduction of sentence. He argued that in view of the company the woman had elected to keep, for her own good she should be kept in the reformatory for 18 months.

Having no copy of evidence taken at the trial of Adrian Vanderyagt, Mr. Ottewell said he was forced to drop Vanderyagt's appeal against his conviction.

CONDITION IMPROVED.

Council Names Aldermen To Board Of Health

Council Follows Policy Established Some Years Ago

Aldermen Stocker, Dutton And McIntyre Appointed To Board Of Health

DEPUTATION EXPENSES

Council Turns Down Resolution That No Remuneration Be Paid Aldermen

In appointing Aldermen Stocker, Dutton and McIntyre to the Board of Health for this year, the city council Monday night declined to depart from the policy it established a few years ago of making the Board as a spending body directly responsible to the ratepayers through their elected representatives.

Alderman Hamilton introduced the by-law as a matter of January routine, and on the second reading, with Alderman Sloan in the chair, Alderman Cotton proposed the name of Alderman Stocker. This motion was seconded by Alderman Glover.

As an amendment Alderman G. N. Gordon submitted the name of ex-Alderman F. T. Tuggey who, he said, would be independent of the council.

"With the Mayor and the Medical Officer of Health and two of the aldermen on it, the Board of Health is just a subcommittee of the council." Ald. Gordon remarked.

Should Have A Woman

For the second of three vacancies, Alderman Hamilton was proposed by Aldermen McIntyre and Glover, and Alderman Dutton by Aldermen Juby and Cotton.

Alderman Gordon recommended in an amendment to the amendment that Mrs. W. R. Morris be appointed, but he failed to get a seconder.

"There is no woman on the Board, and I think the women of the city feel that they should be represented in directing a service that is vitally important to them," Alderman Gordon said.

Alderman Glover said — "The names proposed by Alderman Gordon are entirely satisfactory, and I think these citizens would make excellent members. But I understand it is the council's policy to appoint members of the council to the Board. If there is anything wrong with that policy I would like to hear it is."

Alderman Gordon—I think the Board of Health should be an independent body. The Mayor and the Medical Officer of Health should be sufficient, and I feel that the women of the city are being neglected.

Did A Wise Thing

"In the light of our experience," Alderman Dutton stated, "I consider that when the council took the work of the Board of Health into its own hands it did a very wise thing. I don't think the change suggested by Alderman Gordon is necessary or desirable at this time."

Alderman Dutton said he felt sure that the citizens generally understood and appreciated the improve-

Cat, Dog Faithful To Master's Memory

ORILLIA WRITES FINIS TO TOWN'S SCRIP SYSTEM

$3,134 STILL OUT

ORILLIA, Ont., Jan. 12—(C.P.)—Orillia authorities to-day prepared to wipe out the town's scrip system after it had been in force less than two months.

When the town's finances looked none too bright, it was decided last year to issue scrip to help carry the relief burden. The system came into force last November 20.

Last night the 1937 council met at its inaugural session, and the end of scrip was written without a dissenting voice. Council members, by law rescinding the two which inaugurated the scrip scheme. There will be no scrip issued henceforth, and that in circulation will be redeemed at the town office or at Orillia banks starting February 1 at a one per cent. discount.

Under the new by-law all unused or unissued scrip will be cancelled or defaced in the presence of the manager or accountant of the Royal Bank of Canada branch here, and the mayor or other members of council. Then all scrip in the town's possession will be burned.

Orillia at the moment has more than $3,000 worth of scrip in circulation. The initial issued November 20 amounted to $1,150. On December 1, $697 worth was redeemed and more was issued later with $3,228 worth redeemed January 2.

Scrip issued January 2 amounted to $4,960, leaving slightly more than $1,000 in circulation. Since then, however, another issue of $2,134 was made. The amount in circulation at present is about $3,134.

First issue of scrip went to more than 100 heads of families for food allowances. The scrip was presented at grocery stores in return for food, but later the scrip was tendered for other requirements of those on relief.

Cooked Shoulder Of A Woman Tasted Good To Early Settler

Mrs. Felice Meloche, Essex County, Recalls Day Indians Gave Father Startling Dish

BE 104 ON WEDNESDAY

LA SALLE, Ont., Jan. 12.—(CP).—Mrs. Felice Meloche of this Essex county town will probably celebrate her 104th birthday to-morrow by nibbling a piece of cake and eating a large bowl of corn flakes and milk but she can recall a distant day when her father had a far different fare—the cooked shoulder of an American woman.

It happened 100 years ago. William Lyon Mackenzie's rebellion had thrown Canada into a state of civil war. Non-intervention was an issue and a charge the United States was aiding the rebels had led to friction.

Her father, Basil Drouillard had been tramping through Essex county bush for three days with little food when he came upon an Indian camp near River Canard. The Indians greeted him courteously and served him a large piece of meat.

He was hungry and wolfed it down. As he was licking his fingers of the last shreds of meat, an old squaw grinned at him. "Do you konw what you were eating?" she asked. He admitted he didn't but thought the taste a little unusual.

The squaw smiled again. "It was an American woman we caught and killed," she replied. Drouillard would not believe it so the fat squaw padded off and returned in a moment holding by the hair the head of a white woman.

Mrs. Meloche was not afraid of Indians when she was a little girl. As she grew up on the big Drouillard farm in Anderdon township she saw more bronzed Indian faces

BRITAIN PROPOSES IMMENSE RESERVE OF FOOD SUPPLIES

Plan Including Purchase Of Possibly 3,650,000 Tons Wheat To Go Before House

MONTH LIMIT AT PRESENT

LONDON, Jan. 12 (AP).—Plans to build up huge reserves of wheat and other foodstuffs will be submitted to Parliament soon after it meets January 19, officials of the new food defence plans department said today.

They explained buying would not start until the necessary funds had been appropriated, but predicted a reserve sufficient for between six months and a year would be accumulated gradually.

Experts said Great Britain would need to store 3,650,000 tons of wheat (approximately 136,250,000 bushels) for a full year's reserve, but doubted this much would be obtained immediately because of the huge cost, as well as storage difficulties.

A new warning of the danger of a food shortage is case of war was given by Major Nelson Rooke in a recent address in which he declared present supplies were sufficient only for two to four weeks.

He added: "Storage of six months' supply of bread and meat, or their equivalents, for a population of 45,000,000 is a fundamental necessity."

The scheme for mobilizing food resources for use in case of war was begun late last year with the appointment of Henry Leon French as director of the new food defence plans department.

Experts have estimated a year's supply of essential foodstuffs would include 3,650,000 tons of wheat, 5,000 tons of potatoes, 2,250,000 tons of onions, 1,250,000 tons of cheese and 625,000 tons of butter or margarine.

NO GASOLINE TAX CUT FOR THIS YEAR

Highway Program Too Extensive—Gov't Will Not Sponsor Bill To Lift Speed Limit

TORONTO, Jan. 12 (CP) — The government will not sponsor an amendment to the Ontario Highways Traffic Act abolishing the 35-mile-an-hour speed limit, it was learned at Queen's Park today.

It is likely a private Liberal member will introduce a bill to abolish the speed limit and to replace it with a safe driving provision but the cabinet attitude on such a measure is not yet defined.

It was understood Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways favors zone speed limits on Provincial Highways, that is in certain populous areas not incorporated as cities, towns or villages, a 30-mile or 25-mile limit would be rigidly enforced. This proposal is related to that to abolish the speed limit.

Mr. McQuesten said today the extensive highways program for 1937 would preclude any reduction in gasoline taxes or motor vehicle license fees this year.

BROTHER ANDRE IS LAID IN TOMB

Thousands From All Walks Of Life Pay Tribute To Little Holy Man

By John Leblanc
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

MONTREAL, Jan. 12—Brother Andre's body, the repository of apparent miraculous powers in life, was laid in the tomb to-day with all the solemn splendor the Roman Catholic Church accords her great in death.

Amid the sombre dignity of a Pontifical High Mass of Requiem the little holy man of Mount Royal was buried beside his imposing shrine atop the mount, the $4,000,000 shrine he erected to St. Joseph from the gifts of pilgrims who called him a worker of miracles.

Three thousand persons saw the ceremony, jammed into the low, vaulted crypt of the Oratory to St. Joseph. Outside, while a trickle of snow planted down and a chill wind gusted across the mountain, an estimated 15,000 more pressed around the edifice.

All walks of life were there, in final homage to the 91-year-old Friar, who died last Wednesday after a life of humility and pain and suffering. Mothers brought babes in arms; the infirm hobbled up the long hill on crutch or cane; some had to be helped into the church.

GOING TO SCHOOL HUNGRY

Teacher Finds Boy Has No Lunch—Family Unable To Get Relief

TORONTO, Jan. 12 (CP). — Because his family has not been in Toronto the six months necessary to be given relief, a boy has been going hungry each day to Parkdale School, John B. Davies, principal, told its Old Boys' Association last night.

"When the boy acted dull the teacher asked him what he'd had for lunch," said Principal Davies. "She found he had eaten only a cookie. I took him out to a restaurant for a meal, and he was a lot brighter. His family recently moved into the city from York Township. It must wait six months before it gets city relief."

The association raised $35 which was placed at Mr. Davies' disposal for the family.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 12.—(CP).—Puzzled by a number of strange angles, officials have started a probe into the death of William Edward Rann, 41, found dead in his car to-day. At first thought to be a case of suicide, officials investigated the possibility of foul play.

Dr. A. R. Routledge, chief coroner, has ordered an autopsy to see what caused death. Detective Cavin Monahan is conducting the police probe.

Missing since last Saturday, Rann was discovered in his car. It was parked in a garage which he rented and which was a considerable distance from his home.

Medical authorities said Rann had been dead since Monday and perhaps earlier. The doors of the garage were closed and a garden hose had been attached to the exhaust of the car and then extended through a window into the inside of the machine where the body was found.

At first it appeared as if Rann had committed suicide by turning on his motor and dying from carbon monoxide gas from the exhaust.

Officials were first puzzled when they found the keys were not in the car. The ignition was apparently locked so the motor could not run. Unless the motor had been running the man could not have died from exhaust fumes.

An expert is being asked to look over the car to see if the motor could have been started without the keys. Rann had not had the keys of the machine since Saturday. They were at home all the time.

Another angle that seemed strange was a piece of tin that had been attached to the hose so it fitted perfectly over the exhaust pipe of the machine.

Roosevelt Declares Washington Murder Has Shocked Nation

Orders Every Means At Command Of U.S. Government Be Used In Hunt

"MENACE MUST END"

No Let Up In Search Until Perpetration "Of Ghastly Crime" Caught

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—(A.P.)—President Roosevelt declared today the murder of 10-year-old Chas. Mattson in Washington state has "shocked the nation" and added every means at the command of the United States Government must be enlisted to capture the perpetrator of "this ghastly crime."

Simultaneously, Attorney General Cummings offered a $10,000 reward for arrest of the kidnappers of the boy.

In an official statement, the President said the Justice Department was engaged in a search which "will not be terminated until the murderer is caught."

Stephen T. Early, a White House secretary, telling of the Chief Executive's reaction to first news of discovery of the boy's body said in effect Mr. Roosevelt had directed Cummings to "go get them."

Roosevelt's Attitude

The text of the President's statement follows:

"The murder of the little Mattson boy has shocked the nation. Every means at our command must be enlisted to capture and punish the perpetrator of this ghastly crime.

"Attorney General Cummings informs me that he has offered a reward for information leading to the arrest of the criminal; and that the special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice are engaged in a search which will be pursued relentlessly and will not be terminated until the murderer is caught.

"I bespeak for the agents of the Department of Justice the continued and wholehearted co-operation of the local police and all other law enforcement agents in this necessary work.

"A crime of this kind is renewed evidence of the need of sustained effort in dealing with the criminal menace."

Sheaf Of Resolutions Presented To Council

ALDERMAN G. N. Gordon celebrated his return to the council Monday night by unloosing a sheaf of resolutions which fared variously. On two of them that were defeated he called for the ayes and nays, several others failed to get seconders, and others were adopted with the unanimous support of the council. One of them requests the Liquor Control Board not to renew the wine shop license at the end of March and affirms that eight beverage rooms are ample for the city.

FRANCE LOOKS INTO MOROCCO, FEELS BETTER

Military Inspection Fails To Reveal German Troop Concentration

WAR TENSION EASES

PARIS, Jan. 12 (A.P.). — A military inspection of Spanish Morocco set at rest French fears of German troop concentrations to-day amid indications of coming negotiations for a "full and lasting settlement" of Franco-German problems.

Resident General August Nogues of French Morocco informed the Foreign Office that General G. H. Berenger, one of his aides, had inspected the Spanish zone and reported he could find no evidence of large numbers of German troops.

WAR OUTLOOK EASES.

LONDON, Jan. 12 (C.P. Cable).—Europe breathes again. Paris and Berlin, which have been almost daggers drawn over Spanish Morocco now talk of co-operation. London regards Chancellor Hitler's assurances to France on the integrity of Spain and Morocco as ending the crisis.

Britain is now pushing ahead with the proposed ban on volunteers. It is felt here that if the Powers can be induced to follow the British example by banning volunteers there will be some hope that both the Spanish Government and General Franco will be ready to accept such a system of control as will place an effective barrier against foreign intervention in Spain.

Neither the Spanish Government nor General Franco has yet replied to the control plan submitted for their consideration by the non-intervention committee. They were requested to reply within 10 days. Eight of 10 days already have expired.

Ivan Maisky, the Soviet Ambassador, complained to Foreign Secretary Eden yesterday of the alleged piratical activities of General Franco's warships in the Mediterranean, and asked that the British Fleet participate in international action against them.

Portugal Wants No Control

LONDON, Jan. 12—(C.P.-Havas). Portugal to-day refused to accept any form of international control over the passage of arms and war supplies through its territory bound for Spain.

COLD WAVE BREAKS WEST SIGHS RELIEF

Score Of Deaths Reported From Cold--Warming Orchards Costs $1,000,000 Nightly

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—(AP).—Generally moderating temperatures brought the western half of the United States a measure of relief today from the coldest siege of the winter.

Although the mercury remained below the freezing point in most Rocky Mountain States, the bitter six-zero cold of the past week abated.

More than 100 persons still were snowbound in the west. Fear was expressed that five motorists perished in the blizzard-swept Nevada. An airplane observer saw an automobile half-buried in snow north of Las Vegas, Nev.

In addition to millions of dollars in property damage, storms and cold weather caused the death of more than a score of persons, most of them in California, Oklahoma and Texas.

California citrus fruit growers were cheered by a forecast of rising temperatures. They estimated damage already done to crops might reach $10,000,000. Floyd Young, Federal Fruit Frost Meteorologist, said the cold wave was definitely broken and that orchard firing—which cost $1,000,000 nightly since Friday — would be unnecessary to-night.

Florida fruit growers worried about heat damage to their crops. They said persistent temperatures in the 80's might cause the fruit to ripen too rapidly.

Quincy, Ill., was virtually isolated for the fourth consecutive day yesterday. Broken power and communication lines left most of the 40,000 residents without telephone and electric service.

3 FLIERS KILLED.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(CP Cable.)—Three aviators were killed yesterday in two Royal Air Force plane crashes.

Pilot Officer R. A. M. Alson and Aircraftsman L. Rice died when their plane crashed in flames near Aylesbury.

Will Lost 17 Years Is Found Day Widow-Beneficiary Dies

Was Tacked To Back Of Drawer In Desk Used Years In Departmental Store

ADMINISTRATORS MISSING

VANCOUVER, Jan. 12.—(CP)—A second-hand desk, hiding place of the 17-year-old will of an Alberta rancher, today had given up its secret but on the day of its discovery the will's sole beneficiary, the rancher's widow, died in ignorance of the document's contents.

Drawn in Havre, Mont., in February, 1920, by James Harvey Wallace, Lethbridge, Alta., the will voided a previous will and left the rancher's then substantial estate to Barbara Ellen Wallace.

After Wallace's death, his widow moved east from Lethbridge and she died at Stanstead, Que., last Saturday, the day the missing will was found tacked to the outside back of a drawer in the old desk used by D. L. Loughman, advertising manager for a departmental store here.

The desk had been in the store's used furniture department for several years, but had been in Loughman's office the past four. How it came first to the store was not known.

The will, naming Mrs. Wallace, Francis Asbury Wallace of Gleichen, Alta., and Thomas Brown, Vancouver, as administrators, was contained in an unstamped envelope addressed to F. A. Wallace in care of a business block here. No record of a man by that name could be found here. Neither could Thomas Brown be traced here.

The will's concluding paragraph reads: "My former will made in Lethbridge shall not in any way conflict with this, my last will, and any matter not clear or specified shall be left to the decision of the administrators named herein."

Property disposed of by the will consisted of mortgages, livestock and cash and a half interest in J. H. Wallace and Co., holdings which included ranch lands, leases, cattle, improvements and accounts due in the Lethbridge district.

Widows between 35 and 55 have more chance of marriage than spinsters of the same age, according to the Register-General in London.

Kidnapped Mattson Boy Is Found Dead In Bush

Battered Body Is Nude Believed Dead For Days When Found By Hunter

Vast Police Force Resumes Search After Being Held In Check To Allow Contact

RANSOM NEVER PAID

Footprints In Snow Only Clue In Case To Date—Family Prostrate

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—From the battered body of Charles Mattson, 10, found nude in the snow, a mighty force of detectives to-day sought a definite clue to the child's kidnapper and killer—"the most hunted man in the nation."

Finding of the frozen body in a brushy area near Everett, Wash., yesterday was the immediate signal for a wide-flung search of men with all the modern weapons of scientific detection at their command—a search nervously withheld until then to permit safe return of the boy to his father, Dr. W. W. Mattson.

In a guarded mortuary United States Government agents and physicians examined and re-examined the battered remains of the victim, abducted on December 27, and $28,000 ransom which the boy's father strove desperately to get to the kidnapper—but failed.

Paul Sceva, a close friend of the family who helped identify the boy, said "Charles had been dead a long time, probably between three days and a week"—long before Dr. Mattson's last frantic efforts to pay the ransom. Blood on the body was frozen.

"The kidnapper has acted like a trout coming out of his lair," Sceva declared. "almost taking the bait and darting back in again."

From their careful autopsy officers hoped to find clues leading to the swarthy bearded man who broke into the Mattsons' living doom two days after Christmas while the toys Charles received still were under the tree.

Federal Men Baffled

Federal agents under the bespectacled veteran, Harold Nathan, were silent. Other authorities admitted they were as yet without one definite bit of information which might send the kidnapper to the gallows under Washington's kidnap and murder laws or the Federal Lindbergh law.

The Mattson family, grief-stricken by the horrible ending of the abduction, hid within their English-style home and refused to see anyone but intimate friends.

"Dr. Mattson asked me to tell you he has 'made every effort humanly possible to pay the ransom to gain the return of my son,'" Sceva said.

"The doctor has broken down for the first time since Charles was kidnapped, and the entire family is sharply shaken. Mrs. Mattson is under a nurse's care.

"The ransom definitely was not paid, although the doctor made many attempts to pay it. The kidnapper was too yellow to come out of his hiding to obtain the money."

Sceva, when asked if Dr. Mattson ever went out to make "personal contact with the kidnappers," said he would not "deny this."

Three times Dr. Mattson contacted the kidnapper through letters and by telephone in an effort to pay the $28,000 ransom, but failed to receive assurance his son lived. His openly expressed fears were confirmed when Gordon Morrow, 19, found the dead body in a slight depression in the snow during a hunting trip.

The state legislature, at its opening session prepared to put a $5,000 reward on the kidnapper's head.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, threw the full force of his bureau into the case. At Chicago Hoover debated flying here.

Sentiment Runs High

Feeling against the child's slayer ran strong in Tacoma and was echoed in legislative corridors in the state capitol at Olympia. The bitter wish was expressed the killer would be found and a shortcut taken to place him on the gallows.

Sentiment rose as the brutality of the crime was reflected in medical findings.

At Seattle, Otto Mittelstadt, King County Coroner, reported evidence the boy had been bound and roughly treated before he was killed.

Dirt and grease in the skin indicated the body had been taken to the spot where he was found, on the floor of a dirty, jolting old automobile, the coroner said.

"Besides an ugly wound on the left side of the head, where the boy had been struck with some blunt object, there were other marks and

SOCIALISTS BEAT INSURGENTS BACK ON TWO SECTORS

Morale Unshaken After Fierce Nine-Day Attack By Foreign-Led Troops

MADRID BEING CLEARED

By Jean Rollin
(Copyright, 1937, the Havas News Agency.)

MADRID, Jan. 12.—(CP-Havas)—Socialists pressed back the insurgent drive against Madrid with counter-attacks in two sectors today.

After holding their lines for nine days before crushing attacks by German and other insurgent troops, the Socialist international brigade and militiamen stormed forward from Aravaca and battled their way back to the Las Rozas-Majadahonda sector, a distance of about six miles, the Madrid command announced.

Proving their morale unshaken by the terrific punishment to which they had been subjected by the insurgent drive, Madrid's defenders rapidly gained all objectives set by the command, it was claimed.

Las Rozas is at the juncture of the Madrid La Coruna and Madrid-Escorial roads and close to the Madrid-Avila railway. It is about 10 miles northwest of Madrid's northwestern Puerta De Hierro, or "Steel Gate."

Another column operating on the insurgent flank routed the enemy from Villanueva Del Pardillo, about six miles southwest of Las Rozas, after brisk fighting, the government communique reported.

(Fascist sources said the Las Rozas-Mapadahonda attacks had been crushed).

Clearing Madrid.

Meanwhile, the capital seethed with activity as the government accelerated its obligatory evacuation of the non-combatant population.

Jimenez told the Havas correspondent that the "aim of the obligatory evacuation is twofold; To spare the greater part of the non-combatants from the atrocities of war and to permit the defenders to act with more liberty in the sectors threatened."

He said that Madrid's normal population of 1,000,000 had been greatly increased by refugees flocking into the capital in the van of General Francisco Franco's advance which carried to the capital's suburbs.

END IS APPROACHING

Pope is Conscious of Fact He Has Not Long to Live

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 12—(A.P.)—Pope Pius XI was reported to-day by persons close to him as apparently conscious of his approaching end. The Holy Father was said to have been weakened by another night's struggle for breath and intense pain concentrated in his right leg, which has also become affected by a varicose condition. It was said the Pontiff told a Cardinal who wanted to delay an important conference during the week-end:

"I must do my entire duty while the Master concedes me energy: my successor must not find things undone."

ABERHART CLAIMS ROSS INTERFERED WAS ASKED TO QUIT

Split Over Proposed Cabinet Appointment ex-Minister Says In Statement

NO RED LEANINGS

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

EDMONTON, Jan. 12. — It was a clash of wills, rather than a clash of policies, that led to the resignation of C. C. Ross, former Alberta Minister of Mines, who left the Aberhart Cabinet on January 5.

This was indicated yesterday in press statements released by the former Minister and Premier William Aberhart, each giving his explanation of the rift. At the same time, the Premier denied that Social Credit members of the Legislature had Communistic or Socialistic tendencies or that divisions were forming in the party ranks.

The Aberhart statement laid down the principle that a Premier must be free to call men into his Cabinet in whom he has complete faith. Then it continued: "If, perchance, any member of a Cabinet tries to control or interfere with this, my constitutional right, by a threat of resigning or in any other manner, and persists in it, surely there is only one course for me, as Premier, to take if I am to remain head of the Government. It was for this reason that I was compelled to call for Mr. Ross' resignation."

Portfolio the Snag.

In a statement issued earlier, in Calgary, Ross said he disagreed with the Premier over a proposed Cabinet appointment. "My resignation from the Government came about through a difference of opinion with the Premier over one matter, and that is a proposed appointment to a Government portfolio."

Neither statement indicated what Cabinet change was proposed, although it has been known for some time that Premier Aberhart has favored another portfolio, probably combining Relief and Municipal Affairs under one Minister.

"May I also add this further observation," the Aberhart statement read: "I am fully aware of the fact there has been much propaganda circulated to give an impression that we have, in connection with our Legislature, members who have Communistic or Socialistic tendencies, and that there is grave danger of a division in the ranks.

"I strongly object to this propaganda for I believe that it is absolutely unfair and wholly untrue. I resent, therefore, vary much the suggestion that any such conditions exist."

EXPECT SENATORS NAMED WEDNESDAY

Cabinet Busy Putting Finishing Touches On Speech From Throne

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—(CP).—Last pre-session meeting of the cabinet will be held to-morrow to put the finishing touches on the Speech from the Throne which Lord Tweedsmuir will read Thursday, announcing major items of legislation to be dealt with by Parliament during the next 3½ months.

Meanwhile the administration is expected to make up its mind as to who will fill two Senate vacancies in Quebec. Names of the new Senators are expected to be announced to-morrow night.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King made no announcement after yesterday's cabinet meeting, but said his government's program for the session was well advanced.

Thursday in Parliament will be a day of formality only, but the House of Commons is expected to start work Friday with establishment of committees. It will also hear tributes to those members who died since last session.

The session will open without Conservative Leader Bennett, now on the High Seas en route home after a four-months tour of the Empire. He is expected home by Monday, in time to join in the debate on the reply to the Speec from the Throne.

35 YEARS TREASURER

Missed Only Three Council Meetings Since 1902

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 12—(C.P.)—Beginning his 36th year as treasurer of Southwold Township, D. A. Cattanach told the council in his report, Southwold showed greatly improved financial condition.

Before he became treasurer, Cattanach was township collector for six years and his proud record is that during the period less than $100 was returned to the county treasurer in tax arrears.

The treasurer has missed only three council meetings since he became a member in 1902.

LICENSE SLOT-MACHINES

Kitchener Charges $500 for First Machine and $10 for Each Additional One

KITCHENER, Ont., Jan. 12—(C.P.)—Despite the protests of a score of municipal organizations, a by-law was passed by city council last night licensing slot-machines and pin games. For the first machine, the owner will be charged $500 and for each additional machine $10. Each store or establishment will be limited to one type of each machine.

Contention of the aldermen was that it was inconsistent on the part of some of the organizations to object to the machines when it was considered that in their bazaars and other money-raising projects, gambling devices were permitted.

THE BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 36

"NERVES—that accounts for Reid's leaving your house," Selden told Graham. "It reminds me of a true story of a student at one of our leading hospitals. He was in the Common room and they were all telling ghost stories. Someone dared him to go to the dissecting room, which was down a long corridor. He went and didn't return. When the others got alarmed they went there—he was dead."

"What killed him?" Graham asked, his somber eyes fixed on the other.

"He had heard some noise, probably a mouse or rat, had turned to run, and his coat had caught on a hook beside the table used for dissecting."

"Rather a gruesome yarn, but I don't see what bearing it has on this case," Graham said stiffly.

"An example of nerves, that's all. One can play on people's nerves sometimes for a joke and the consquences are fatal."

"In your profession nerves must be a handicap."

"Possessing nerves, certainly, but the knowledge that others have them has often been of great use."

Ramdas entered with drinks, and set an old Chinese tray on a table, withdrawing without a word.

The Colonel helped Selden, and while the latter was drinking, poured himself a glass of neat whiskey and drank it off.

"I told the inspector that I would bring the hounds along," he said in a more cheerful tone. "They should be able to follow the track of Miss Lawrence and her charges." There was a sneer in the voice that called for comment.

"You think, then, that she has had a hand in it?"

"Surely that's your province."

Selden took a bold course.

"Reid was telling me of a wonderful smoking room you have in the roof; perhaps he was romancing. He said one could get a good view of the neighborhood."

"Would you care to see it?" Graham asked sauvely.

Selden finished his drink. "Very much. You see, I don't know much about this country round here, and it might give me an idea of where the missing people have gone."

The Colonel led the way to the roof, up the stairs from the gallery, and threw the door open. The view was rendered indistinct by the mist that had developed after the storm, but the village could be seen in the valley below, and the pile of the Abbey rising like a dream picture from a thin bluish vapor that eddied in wisps round the base. Woodland intersected with meadows rose in undulating billows from the vale, and the stream showed like a silver thread hidden at times by trees. A watery sun illuminated the landscape, making it faint and unreal like a Corot picture."

"On a fine day this must be a wonderful view," Selden said, leaning his arms on the window ledge and carefully examining the shutters that could be pushed from their sockets in the framework, and were of steel. Colonel Graham stood beside him, pointing out the various places of interest.

"If you have seen enough, Selden, we'll try the hounds. Coats has two of them ready. The fresher the scent the better."

They were walking towards the door, Selden leading, but at the entrance the detective wheeled suddenly, and his quiet, uncertain manner was gone. The face that met the Colonel's was very stern.

"Colonel Graham, of what are you afraid?"

The question was wrapped out like a pistol shot, and for a moment the other was taken off his guard. He almost staggered back, and fear leapt to his eyes, unmistakable and urgent terror.

Then he recovered himself with an obvious effort. "Afraid?" I don't know what you mean—are you trying to be funny or just rude?"

Selden's eyes were on him still, gravely, almost pityingly. "You won't tell me—I am sorry for many things."

Graham laughed uneasily. "Whatever made you have such an absurd idea? I've been a soldier all my life."

"Exactly—that is why I wondered. You have faced danger—I don't doubt you courage for a moment—but when a brave man takes the precautions you have done, it makes one wonder."

Selden shrugged his shoulders. "I am genuinely sorry—I might have helped you." He led the way without another word, and a constraint came between them.

"You agree to use the bloodhounds?" the Colonel said when they reached the study.

"Certainly, we can't neglect any method."

"Very well, then, we'll go."

The tramp over the fields was not very pleasant, for both men remained silent, immersed in their thoughts. From time to time the Colonel shot a glance at the young detective in which anger and fear were mixed. Coats held the hounds in leash, and as he was in earshot confidential conversation was impossible.

Both men were glad when they emerged at the bank of the lake, where the hounds lifted their heads and gave tongue as they do when reaching water.

The great gateway stood open, and James came hurrying to meet them. His face went a ghastly yellow at the sight of the hounds, but neither men appeared to notice anything. The Colonel spoke roughly.

"Take us to Miss Lawrence's room at once," he ordered.

"Yes, sir," James replied, eyeing the hounds with disgust as they strained forward.

They went up the stairs, James leading, and Coats behind.

"This is Miss Lawrence's room," he said, throwing the door open.

The Colonel had taken charge of the affair with feverish energy. He hunted round for some garment or article belonging to the girl, cursing under his breath when he found that everything had been removed. James had remained in the sitting room, and Coats was in the corridor holding the hounds ready.

"Yes, sir," James replied, examining the coat.

"Yes, I recognize it," the Colonel said eagerly. "I saw her wearing it the other day—I wonder why she left it behind?" He summoned Coats and let the bloodhounds take the scent. They would have torn it, but were still mursled.

"Are you armed, Colonel?" Selden asked quietly.

"Armed? Of course not—why should I be?"

"One never knows—we are not just practicing with the hounds you know."

Along passage they went and down the stairs, the hounds pulling furiously. Selden kept his eye fixed on James and watched every movement of his face in the gathering gloom, for twilight had fallen. When they came to the library door James clenched both hands convulsively, and his eyes were starting from his head, and then a look of great relief came to his face as the hounds went on; but the look was not lost on Selden, and he smiled behind his hand.

"Good Lord!" The ejaculation came from the Colonel for the hounds were in the ante-chapel, and tugging Coats towards the dark stairs that led to the crypt. "Stop!" he shouted. "There must be some mistake."

"They're pulling mighty hard, sir," Coats said, without emotion.

"Let them go," Selden said. "You know you said the dogs never lie. They are on the track all right."

"But not there! Surely not there!" Graham cried in a cracked voice.

Selden calmly followed them down the damp green-coated steps and into the ghastly crypt. He turned on the light and watched with a grim set face as the hounds tore through the iron gates, which stood open, and made a dash for the coffin, wherein the late Sir Henry had been interred.

"Pull them back, Coats—this is too horrible!" Graham shouted, rushing forward and hauling at the leash in a paroxysm of terror.

The bluish light cast a ghastly pallor on their faces, and Selden glanced at James' face, which expressed intense surprise and perplexity. He seemed utterly bewildered by this bizarre turn of events.

"What is the meaning of this?" Graham turned furiously on Selden.

"The bloodhounds never lie," the detective replied firmly.

Coats had dragged the hounds back and closed the iron gates, standing calmly waiting for orders.

"You are not suggesting that Miss Lawrence and the children have been murdered and placed in that coffin!" the Colonel said hysterically. All the strong man in him seemed turned to water.

"We had better get out of this—it is not a cheerful place," Selden said, placing his hand on the Colonel's shaking shoulder.

They made a hurried and rather undignified exit from the place.

GERMANY, FRANCE TALK SETTLEMENT OF DIFFICULTIES

Negotiation Of Vast Accord Eases War Tension Greatly

PARIS WATCHES MOROCCO

By Henry Cassidy
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

PARIS, Jan. 12.—(AP).—In a sudden breaking of the acute tension which has bound Europe since before the Christmas holidays, France and Germany were reported to-day to be negotiating a vast accord in full and lasting settlement" of their difficulties.

Ambassadors of both countries returned to their capitals bearing dispatches which, diplomatic circles said, signalled overtures for a broad economic and political agreement.

It was a sudden and welcome lifting of the war clouds that had become increasingly darker since France and Britain stiffened their demands on Germany against volunteer aid to the insurgents in the Spanish civil war and reported German infiltration in Spanish Morocco.

The first break came in Berlin where Chancellor Hitler and French Ambasasdor Andrew Francois-Poncet exchanged mutual assurances of territorial integrity for Spain and her territories, including Spanish Morocco.

Immediately after the exchange, Francois-Poncet left for Paris with reports the Third Reich was leaning nearer and nearer to a return to economic collaboration with the Western European democracies.

CHATHAM, Ont., Jan. 12 (C.P.).—Calling upon Alderman James Harlick to apologize for charges he is alleged to have uttered at a meeting of City Council in committee, Alderman Bert Groombridge thrust the first note of discord into proceedings of the 1937 City Council last night.

Ald. Groombridge claimed Alderman Harlick had accused him of "conniving" when Council committees were being selected, and had charged that he had been guilty of "disgraceful conduct."

The cost of this individual dress is well within even the limited budget.

When you're making your selection, do keep the gay print silks in mind. They are ideally suited to this easily made dress.

YES, THIS FOOD ENDS YOUR CONSTIPATION

Look out for those half-sick days, when you feel listless, headachy, out-of-sorts. Your trouble may be constipation. The real cause of common constipation is too little "bulk" in meals. Your system misses its regular exercise.

Get this needed "bulk" in a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Within the body, its "bulk" absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently sponges out the system.

Why keep on feeling bad when you can feel good? Millions of people use ALL-BRAN. Tests prove it's safe and effective. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Serve as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into recipes. Remember, ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Certainly you'd rather eat a food than take pills and drugs. Buy ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London.

At the Theatres

"LOVE ON THE RUN."

One of the neatest bits of foolery in this semi-fantastical tale of swift-moving adventure and romance is the episode where the old cracked keeper of the Fontainebleu Palace (who is sure he will turn into a pumpkin at the stroke of the midnight hour) watches the capers of Joan Crawford and Clark Gable as they do the minuet to the strains of a tinkling music box, in Madame de Maintenon's apartment.

It is a pleasant bit of exotic filming that brings the volatile Joan and the large-eared but very capable Gable into the limelight at most moments, with Franchot Tone in the rather embarrassing role of stooge to Gable's quicker wit. It is, in a way, somewhat of a re-hash of the theme of that very fine picture, "It Happened One Night," in which Gable and Claudette Colbert had the stage. The runaway millionairess runs again in this picture, with Gable, once more in the role of a star reporter for the sensational press, as her follower.

In the course of their running, they become entangled with a pair of international spies who have an important secret map in their possession. The tale see-saws between the two elements—the runners-away and their followers—to a pleasant and vivacious tempo that allows plenty of action and not much actual love-making, as is the way of most of the Gable pictures.

With the bill of entertainment is included a delightful colored fantasy in which a kindly Christmas magician does a lot for the sorrowful children of an orphanage.

And there is a satirical comedy, entitled "No Place Like Rome," in which the Eternal City of many centuries past is pictured, and a Roman father is quoted in a wise-crack to his romantic son:

Mrs. Meloche remembers that when she was about seven years old an Indian shot one of the Drouillard cows. The Indian came out of the bushes, skinned and sliced the cow, courteously gave a piece to Mrs. Drouillard and departed with the remainder of the carcass.

Cleared Their Farm.

When her parents came to Anderson township it was covered with dense forest which had to be cleared before the crude wooden plow, drawn by oxen, could turn the rich loam.

The only settlement on this side of the river was a group of log cabins across from Detroit. The occupants of those cabins were busy arguing over a name for their village and it was not until three years later they decided on the name "Windsor." At the age of 21 Miss Drouillard married Joseph Meloche.

For many years the Meloches kept a grocery store. Later they built a hotel at Sandwich West Township which became famous for its succulent chicken dinners and the gay hospitality of the Meloche family, which by this time included five sons and three daughters. Mr. Meloche died more than 30 years ago. A few years later the hotel burned down.

There are seven living children, 42 grandchildren, 29 great grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren. Many of these live in distant parts of the continent but in her 104 years of life the wanderlust has never seized Mrs. Meloche.

Until four years ago her sight and hearing were practically unimpaired and she was active around the house. But as she passed the century mark her faculties began to fail. Today she is nearly blind. Her voice is still strong but she hears with difficulty.

Just Between Us Women

QUIET and sincere sympathy is often the most welcome and efficient consolation to the afflicted. Said a wise man to one in deep sorrow, "I did not come to comfort you, God only can do that, but I did come to say how deeply and tenderly I feel for you in your affliction."—Tyron Edwards.

Dear Friends:

Isn't it a grand thing, when we are going through heart-breaking trouble to know that some of our friends are standing by? They know we must go through this alone, that all they can do is to console us, but it takes away that awful feeling of aloneness which makes this trouble seem so much worse.

Many's the time I had heard that "there were worse things than death" but I couldn't see it at all. What could be worse I thought, for everything had ended for the one who had gone, and there was a vacancy in your life which no other seemed able to fill.

But there are worse things than death. There is the death of all your hopes, a long slow death, there is the loss of all you built up in your life, there are decisions which must be made, involving not only yourself but others, and the torturing thoughts that come to you as to whether this decision was wise or not, in the face of what happens afterward.

And then it is that you need your friends. They can see more clearly than you, for their emotions are not involved as yours are, these things do not "feel them as they do you, and so they are able to review the whole thing dispassiopately, and advise you clearly.

Some of us hold all our sorrows inside us until the lid blows off in a nervous breakdown, and it is a horrible thing to have. But if you are a good listener and consoler to others, let them have the same chance to console you.

All your friends are not stony-hearted or unfeeling, and you will be surprised at the unexpected friendship you will be shown. All through my own trouble runs like a golden thread the kindness that has been shown to me. Some have done it in words, and some in deeds, and one in particular shines forth because of what she has done and is doing for me.

And so, out of the ruck of trouble, you yet can have a spirit of thankfulness, because of what your friends have done. What altho' some stood aloof? There were many who stood aloof from our Lord, and He did more for His friends than we ever could, so instead of letting it embitter you, just think of the ones who did prove friends.

My particular friend does not cry all over me. On the contrary she makes me laugh, she puts courage in me, she tells me of some of my good points and raises my opinion of myself, for trouble has a bad way of making us lose belief in ourselves.

She looks for things to do for me which will make me more comfortable, which will brighten some of my hours, and never under any circumstance does she make me feel that I am under any obligation to her, but that she gets a great deal of pleasure in being able to help.

Of course I could have been very stiff-necked and decided that I could go it alone, but then I would have missed all this friendship which I so badly needed. Some day, I shall even up the balance, but not I hope in the way she has helped me, for I would not wish my worst enemy to have the sorrow I have had. But I shall find a way.

And so, to you who are heavy hearted, I would say go to the One who said "Come unto Me all ye who are heavy laden," and then let your friends show that they are friends. Do not be stony with them. You are no more able to go it alone than the rest of us, and while you hold yourself aloof, what can anyone do for you.

If you have helped others and had the joy in knowing you had helped, let others get the same joy from helping you. What altho' those you had done so much for never make an offer to do anything? There are others who are ready and willing, and good does not always come from those we have helped. Let your burden be eased, and your heart warmed as mine has been, by the help and comfort of true friends. And don't forget that I am.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

The Way of All Strikes

For three weeks there has been a strike at the plant of the Empire Cotton Mills at Welland, and the announcement now is that the management has decided to close the plant.

Another report stated that on the day when the announcement of the closing was made the strikers had a dance for the purpose of raising funds, and the hall was packed.

There are, we learn, 840 men, women and children out on strike, and with three weeks' idleness behind them it will take a good deal of dancing to provide financing for their daily needs. We believe it would be correct to say the funds of the strikers are low and that want is already being felt in many of the homes. There are a good many families in every community in about the same position. When there is no income for three weeks available funds in many cases will be depleted. In homes where the wages are never sufficient to allow the saving of a portion of them want will come rapidly.

It is apparent, too, that no strike pay is available for the workers at Welland. Reports indicate that many of them have only recently joined a union, and for that reason alone there would not be a fund on hand to finance a strike. The management claim the plant is not now operating at a profit, but there was also a promise that adjustments would be made in favor of certain of the lower-paid classes. The one thing certain is that strikers to the number of 840 men, women and children, who at the end of three payless weeks are holding dances to raise money, are facing straight out hito hardship. A strike is an industrial war in which one faction seeks to force the other into submission, and that form of warfare hurts and costs money. We believe that strike will eventually be settled, and settlement will come by way of compromise, and in the end it will be found that the compromise agreement might just as well have been negotiated before the strike started.

The Father Has to Pay

There are a good many sons who drive father's car, and for that reason alone there ought to be a good many fathers interested in a judgment recently given in a case where a son under 16 years of age was driving his father's car.

James J. Denny was the owner of the car, and he carried insurance with the Guildhall Insurance Co. Ltd. The son, under 16 years of age, was in an accident with another car and a young man was injured. Action was instituted for $7,000 damages. The insurance company fought the case in court and secured settlement by paying $1,065.

The next step was taken by the insurance company when it brought its case to court, claiming it should be reimbursed for the payment because Denny, in allowing a boy under 16 years of age to drive the car, had actually broken the contract with the insurance company. At Osgoode Hall the answer was given, and Mr. Denny was told he was liable for the amount and would have to pay it to the insurance company.

Neither fathers nor sons are apt to think often of such affairs when the juniors want to take the car out, but that decision is sufficient to cause a little cool consideration within the family circle.

The House That John Built

John Rose got a job at Copper Cliff. He worked in the day time and after that he kept on working because he was building a house in which to put his wife and eight children.

An interesting story is that of John Rose. He had been in the position for two years where he had to live on relief and charity in the city of Hamilton, and he did not like it. One day he helped load a truck with fruit in return for which he was offered a free ride as far as Kirkland Lake. When he reached North Bay the driver told him to get off because the load was too heavy. He thumbed a ride to Sudbury and all he had to eat in three days was some sandwiches which were given to him by a picnic party at Sudbury. All that was in the summer of '36.

On the fourth day out from Hamilton he found work at the Copper Cliff smelter where he worked by day and at night labored on the building of a house. At Christmas time the house was far enough advanced so the family was united. Says John Rose: "I've heard of the barren north, but it's been wonderful, not barren, for me."

This paper is glad enough to print a story of that kind. It does not concern a man who has gone forth and found a gold mine of his own; has nothing to do with one who has come to the front espousing a new theory on how to divide the existing wealth of the world. Just a plain recital of one man who had been down and out for two years and who was not able by his own efforts to provide for his wife and eight children. Now he has his family under the home roof again. We hope John Rose has success. A man of his sort can stand a good deal of it without being spoiled.

He Left a Message

Rev. Dr. James Edward Moore died in Peterborough. He had spent 42 years and eight months in the ministry of the Methodist church. He was 86 years of age at the time of his death and left the request that there should be engraved on his tombstone the words "He that winneth souls is wise." In his life work Dr. Moore had found the truth of those words. It had given him more satisfaction than anything else. To use his own phrasing he had seen "men and women weeping their way to Calvary."

We hear a good deal today about what the modern church should be doing. It is a highly organized affair and subject to a good many man-made regulations. Within it there are societies whose number is great, and they all appear active. The providing of music for worship has developed to the stage where enormous investments are made in great organs. The machinery of organization is adequate as far as size and planning can make it.

Dr. Moore had probably seen all these developments in his day because he began many years ago during the period of his probation, and he was then on a circuit. He moved to better churches and he had wide experience because his ministry took him to many parts of the province. But through it all he had found the epitome of church effort in those few words: "He that winneth souls is wise."

In his estimation all else had to bend toward that one idea. It is well that he left that message. It seems to say something of which often too little is heard.

The Policy For Canada

Britain has declared the Foreign Enlistment Act of 1870 applies to the present fighting in Spain, and that means British subjects will be barred from offering their services.

Ottawa opinion inclines to the belief that when the British government makes such a pronouncement it applies to Canada and all parts of the Empire. In this case it is proper and sensible that it should.

Canada as a nation has no part in the slaughter going on in Spain today. There are factions in the Dominion who have openly recommended the raising of companies of recruits in this country, equipping them and sending them off to Spain. The action of the British government, if given effect in this country, would put an end to all such planning and to all such nonsense.

The Powers of Government

For those who talk of the security which one has in the possession of private property, or of governments bonds, there is not much cheer in an opinion voiced by Chief Justice Hon. N. W. Rowell when speaking before the Ontario Bar Association at London. In brief it is this:

> "There is nothing to prevent our legislative bodies, acting within the limits of their constitutional powers, from enacting an ex post facto (retroactive) law, a law impairing the obligation of contracts or taking property without due compensation.

It really means there are two laws in operation, (1) the law which the average individual has to obey or put up with the consequences of disobedience, and (2) the laws which our various legislatures may pass to legalize anything which they desire to do. In explaining the sovereign powers of federal and provincial laws, Hon. Mr. Rowell quoted the famous judgment of Chief Justice Riddell:

> "The Legislature within its jurisdiction can do everything which is not naturally impossible, and is restrained by no rule, human or divine . . . . . The prohibition, "Thou shalt not steal" has no legal force upon the sovereign body and there would be no necessity for compensation to be given."

It is also known and admitted that arguments founded upon injustice or hardship have no weight affecting the validity of legislation. Once the opinion has been given that the legislature has not gone outside of its field in passing legislation, then the legislation can be wide and deep, broad or narrow. For purposes of preventing inroads upon its cash a government can decide itself whether any person can bring action for damages against it or any of its departments. The point is that our legislatures can do things which a private individual or a corporation cannot do and there is no power to stop them. True, a government can be defeated, and in that there is a measure of protection.

Fine Tribute to Y.M.C.A.

W. Orton Tewson, well-known writer of New York, forwards this record of a unique tribute paid to the Y.M.C.A.

> Some years ago, when on a tour of the world for the Y.M.C.A., Fred B. Smith arrived at Nagasaki, Japan, one morning, without his trunk, which had been sent to Osaka by mistake. The "Chicago Maru"—a mail boat—on which he was to leave, was to sail at two o'clock. The trunk could not possibly reach Nagasaki until six o'clock, and without it, Mr. Smith could not sail because it contained the records of the tour.
>
> In his dilemma, Mr. Smith appealed to the Shipping Company, but was told that it was impossible to hold a mail boat and that it must sail at the appointed hour. Then, something led him to go and see the captain of the liner, "a fascinating little Japanese." After hearing his story the skipper said:
>
> "I hold ship for you until six o'clock."
>
> Six o'clock came, but no trunk. It was on the second section of the train which would not arrive until eight o'clock! It was terribly humiliating for Mr. Smith, but back he went to the captain and explained the fresh delay.
> "I hold ship for you until eight o'clock," said the captain, despite ominous mutterings and growlings from the passengers at the delay.
>
> Well, the trunk arrived at eight o'clock and the liner sailed. During the voyage, Mr. Smith went to thank the captain for his great consideration and added:
>
> "I am a little curious to know why you were led to do this great favor."
>
> The captain replied in a monotone:
>
> "I live in Tokyo. I have a boy. He was bad boy. He join Y.M.C.A. He is good boy. I hold ship for you."
>
> And he walked away.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We imagine Premier Hepburn likes the change in the Globe and Mail's type more than he did the change in editorial policy made several weeks ago.

Leon Trotsky has arrived in Mexico and most people are wondering how long it will take him to make that country too hot for him.

An Ottawa messenger yelled so loudly when two crooks tried to hold him up that they fled. We have heard voices something like that on the radio.

The fixed value of celery for duty purposes is to be suspended upon importations and we imagine something will be heard of that in the dining rooms of the country before long.

An expedition has left New York to search in the jungles of Venezuela for an umbrella bird, which has become a very scarce article. Few birds nowadays are seen carrying umbrellas.

Mussolini bought a workman's ticket to pay a visit to a Rome theatre. The Italian dictator thus proved once again that he is a real showman who knows how to appeal to popular sentiment.

Conservatives still have a majority of 30 in the Senate so the present government will have to stay in office for a considerable period to get the upper hand in the upper chamber.

Canada may put a ban against Canadians going to Spain to fight but if the people of this country are as sensible as we think they are no law to that effect will be needed.

Another effort is being made to establish a Federal Ministry of Sports. But unless the promoter of the idea guarantees the system will produce a few Canadian winners at the next Olympic games we would be inclined to move the six months' hoist.

With nine years service as chairman of the Utilities Commission to his credit, Gordon S. Matthews bids fair to overhaul the fine record of achievement in that position set by his father, T. F. Matthews, who was a tower of strength as chairman for many years.

Weekly newspapers want the Ontario Government to publish at the end of each session of the Legislation a summary of the legislation passed in the form of government advertising. That would be a much more effective way of enlightening the people than burying the stuff in the Ontario Gazette.

There is an agitation in Orillia to do away with scrip. The opinion is that while the thing sounded fine on paper it has not worked out that way, and we seem to remember that more than one newspaper pointed out long ago that the result would be just about that.

WELCOME

¶ Some folk complain an awful lot, and talk in words both long and hot, of people at their door; they say their knocking will not cease, nor can they find sweet hours of peace, nor do they rest much more.

¶ They fear some salesman waits without, to sell them broomsticks, wax or kraut, or some man peddles bills; they fear he's selling mops or cheese, or for spring planting corn and peas, or ointment and some pills.

¶ They fear the man has come for cash, to buy him wrinkled prunes and hash, or else his feet are bare; or he may have shoe strings for sale, or needs some help fresh out from jail, he may be filled with care.

¶ I like to have such people call, I greet them gladly in the hall, they come and sit with me; I'll serve them sandwiches and cake, and give them all they like to take, and with them drink some tea.

¶ I hear the stories they recite, of nights when there's no straw in sight, when frost is on their nose; I hear of miles on railroad rods, of folk who pitch them bricks and clods, of enemies and foes.

¶ I like these people at the door, no matter what they're coming for, they never cause me pain; far better than to sit for days, and be alone in mental haze —when no one ever came.

Folk At Tilbury Are Eating Crow

(From the Chatham Daily News)

SPORTSMEN in the vicinity of Tilbury have discovered a new food —at least they have tested out an old food, and have discovered that prejudice against it is mis-placed.

In other words they are eating Crow—not in the sense that the politician, according to time-honored legend, performs this gastronomic duty when confronted with the "deadly parallel" selected from his various speeches, to prove contradiction of sentiments—but actually placing the roasted carcasses of these black enemies of agriculture, on their tables and ravenously consuming them, to the accompaniment of the usual condiments hitherto reserved for turkey, quail, partridge or wild duck.

And those who have tried the experiment declare it to be a great success. They have found the crows to be fat, juicy and delectable, appealing to the palate, and satisfactory to the appetites. Doubters may be inclined to regard these declarations as an evidence of stubbornness —an aversioin for admitting defeat— a proud effort to prove that the experiment was not a rash one—but members of three or four families in Tilbury who consumed crow for their dinner the other evening are still alive, active and cheerful—and the fact that they are looking for "more crow" seems to prove something or other. There have been no evil effects—showing that you can have "caws", and no effect.

There has been a natural prejudice against crows as human food, from the fact that these birds are known to be "scavengers" in their choice of life-sustaining properties; that they eat flesh and offal—but after all the same thing might be said of chickens, who eat worms, bugs and various forms of low animal life—even snakes,—and they eat it raw. So why be prejudiced against the crow. We eat roosters—and they "crow."

The Daily News confesses it was a little sceptical about this crow-eating experiment, and consulted a well-known Chatham physician—even at the THOUGHT of eating this form of feathered life. The doctor stated that he saw no objection to eating crows—if the banqueters really enjoyed the flavor. Crow meat is certainly not poisonous; and since the crows of Kent county feed lavishly on corn and other grains (for proof ask any farmer), a little bit off the breast, or a drumstick, should be quite acceptable—if you are hungry enough.

He went even farther. He told of an experience of his brother, who, after a most appetizing meal, was informed that he had just partaken of wild-cat meat. Down in Mexico he knew of people who even ate rattlesnakes, without any sign of rattling sensation in the mid-section.

The Tilbury epicures declare that crow tastes better than quail, in spite of the other "quailing" effect the suggestion gives to people who have not actually tried it. It may be true—but our recollection is that quail on toast is pretty hard to equal, let alone to beat.

Of course, as we have said, the idea is not entirely new. Most people have little difficulty in recalling the nursery rhyme about "four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie." Seems to us there was some singing on that occasion. However, since there wasn't even a squawk out of the crows in Tilbury, it has remained for the banqueters to sing the praises of this wonderful diet. They declare that it is really a dish worthy of being "set before the King."

It may be true. If it is true, the idea has great possibilities, for any farmer will tell you that there is little chance of being a crow shortage for several years, judging by the size of the flocks this year.

Now if someone will only suggest eating starlings, we will be all set for a winter's supply of food.

HARD TO FIND.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

THE WORLD has come to a stage of development when it is most difficult to find anything really new.

A few days ago there came a story from Los Angeles, Cal., to the effect that Dr. King of that city had made medical history by finding an ether anaesthetic that was non-explosive, non-nauseating and could be heated, the latter property being invaluable for its capacity to prevent pneumonia.

But Ontario doctors say there is nothing new in this at all. They say they tried heating ether 25 years ago and they heat it now by immersing the can in hot water. However, the heating must be limited so that the ether will not evaporate too quickly. As to the non explosive property, the doctors are divided in opinion. They think ordinary ether is not bad in that way. One doctor said he had used ordinary ether in farm kitchens, with roaring fires going in the ranges. What the doctors all emphasize is that when an ether is made that will not nauseate the patient, something very useful will have been attained.

It is amusing to note how frequently something that has been known years ago and discarded, comes to life as a discovery. In fact some of the finds of that nature persist quite a time as genuinely new. Human memory is short and definitely unreliable.

A Bit of Nonsense

Prepared

An English party, on a visit to Switzerland, wanted to climb a small peak in the district.

It was considered an easy climb, but a guide was engaged, and on the morning one of the party turned up with a rope.

The guide looked at him cynically, and inquired: "M'sieur is going to skip, perhaps?"

TOO LATE TO LEARN

Shipwrecked Tourist: "I'm afraid I don't understand a single word. Languages was my weak subject at school."—Humorist.

They're Potential Murderers.

THE Pittsburg Legal Journal gives a verbatim report of the remarks made by Judge M. A. Musmanno, of the Criminal Court in that city, when he recently sentenced a man to the workhouse for six months for driving an automobile when intoxicated, although no accident had occurred.

Addressing the prisoner at the bar, the judge spoke in part as follows: "You have pleaded guilty to the offence of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. It appears from the evidence here that you were travelling on the Ohio River boulevard at a speed of eighty miles per hour while drunk. That no serious accident resulted is good luck, that's all. That you did not kill some one, or did not meet your own death, is just one of those inscrutable mysteries of fate. Certainly all the elements of a tragedy were there.

"We would like to say something to you, and through you to the world, about this offence. Every man who operates an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor is a potential manslaughterer. If manslaughter does not actually result, it is not because he has done anything to avert it. An engine of death is on the highways and at the wheel is a man with his brains floating in alcohol.

"No exoneration, excuse, defence or alibi can be found for a drunken driver. Certainly he cannot plead ignorance of the law. Nothing is more publicized today about automobiling than the danger of operating a car while drunk. When a man in full possession of his faculties, and thoroughly aware that he will soon be guiding a car over the streets, nevertheless puts into his mouth that which he knows will distort his vision, upset his equilibrium, paralyze his judgment, dull his reflexes and derail his muscular control, he is deliberately preparing himself for trouble; he is open-eyedly seeking victims to crush under the wheels of his death-dealing machine.

"It is no pleasure for us to punish any one; and certainly we never impose a sentence under any theory that the law must be avenged. However, we must realize that society can only hold together with laws which govern the relationship of man and man, and if inebriated motorists are permitted to speed their cars over the highways like wild Apache Indians riding mustangs on the boundless prairie, then society is bound to suffer. Every motorist knows that it is wrong—legally and morally wrong—for any one to take a steering wheel in his hands when he has been indulging in strong drink.

"There have been many new drinks, and new names for them, concocted during the last year or two. We will add one to the list and say that in Allegheny county the mixing of alcohol with gasoline will produce what we will denominate a bastile cocktail.

"The sentence of the court is that you pay the costs of prosecution and be committed to the Allegheny county workhouse for a period of six months."

Every word expressed by this judge is true, however people may feel about the mode of expression, and it will be well if his remarks are generally heeded by those who are tempted to drive when under the influence of liquor.

Eat Lightly, Go To Bed.

(From the Chicago Daily News.)

JULIAN HUXLEY, in his book "Science and Social Needs," sardonically refers to "our friend, the common cold." Probably no more treacherous foe of the human race exists, as our most recent experience with flu and pneumonia bears witness. For both of those dread ills the cold breaches the defences of the human system, stealthily admitting our greater enemies for their often fatal attacks on lungs and heart. M. J. Rosenau, distinguished American sanitarian, declares: "Could the sum total of suffering, inconveniences, sequelae and economic loss resulting from common colds be obtained, it would at once promote these infections from the trivial into the rank of the serious diseases."

Few victims of the common cold show it deference as a major ill, but medical science knows its virulent possibilities. Since the days of Pasteur research men have been indefatigably on its trail. In recent years groups of researches at Columbia, at Harvard and at John Hopkins have been specializing on the common cold. Pursuing Pasteur's fruitful clew, science has sought the cold germ. Thus far the search has been vain. Indeed, among the seekers prevails the conclusion that there is no germ; that some subtler agent must be held guilty, some evasive, invisible agent already foggily recognized in other diseases and named a virus. Now comes the disclosure by Dr. Wendell M. Stanley, 32-year-old researcher for the Rockefeller Institute, that he has discovered the nature of a virus, and learned many things of importance about its behavior. He has dissipated much of the fog in which it hid.

Hitherto practically all that was known about a virus was negative. A fine porcelain filter will catch a germ, but there is none so fine as to hold a virus. A germ can be bred in a non-living organic culture, but not a virus—it needs the living tissue of its victim. Germs are microscopically visible, but the particles of a virus are too small to be seen through the most powerful microscope. If, then, a virus is the cause of the common cold it is not remarkable that the particular virus responsible has eluded identification.

But Dr. Stanley has warmed up the trail. His discoveries bring the virus within the manipulation and understanding of the scientist; they include the promise that, by the use of some vaccine or serum, human beings may be immunized against its attacks. No such defensive agent has yet been discovered. "Eat lightly, go to bed and stay there until you are well," is the best curative advice the doctors can give. But it may soon be as needless to contract a cold as it now is to contract smallpox.

Farm Conditions Not the Best.

(From the Windsor Star.)

DELEGATES to the annual Community Life Conference held recently at Pickering College, Newmarket, spoke pointedly on the subject of living conditions on the farms of this province. A resolution embodied some of the improvements considered requisite to a decent standard of living in rural areas. A telephone, running hot and cold water, electric power, automobile, radio, comfortable furniture and heating, library and labor-saving machinery were requisites that ought to be in every farm home, according to the resolution which deplored the low standards of living prevalent in many rural communities which in numerous cases were mercly rural slums breeding inefficiency, immorality, disease and bad citizenship.

This indictment of conditions in agricultural life may appear severe, yet there is much truth in it for it is fairly well recognized that farmers have been willing to tolerate a standard of living below the value of their contribution to the national income.

The agricultural industry is pretty largely the foundation of any genuine prosperity in Canada. When farming as a whole is proceeding successfully, the whole economic fabric in Canada is strong. That has been a uniform experience in Canada. To-day it might be said that the degree of improvement in economic conditions is about parallel to the progress in the farm industry toward better conditions. The revenue getting into the hands of people who live on the land is the financial stimulus to activity in other industries that have recorded betterment. It is of general concern, therefore, that farm prosperity should be promoted in every quarter that can offer a hand in such a task. It is true that many farmers have been able so to conduct their business as to provide up-to-date equipment and some of the refinements outlined in the resolution referred to herein, but the rank and file have had to struggle along with much less than that. There does not seem to be any doubt that if the whole industry were up to the level of its most successful representatives, the general economic situation would be tremendously better. It is necessary that every organization that plays a part in formulating policies and directing the affairs of the nation should pay more attention to this problem of the farm. It is the bedrock on which our structure of prosperity can be effectively built, but it is apparent that the other industries that profit because of successful operations on the farm must become aggressive supporters of all policies that give promise to improving the lot of the farmer.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS.

(Calgary Herald)

APART FROM the continuance of propaganda warning against the danger of the motor and drink combination, many authorities are of the opinion that the evil can best be checked by the cancelling of the driving licenses for an extended period of time of every motorist found in charge of a car when under the influence of drink. This has worked well in many parts of Great Britain. Fines have not proved effective but the loss of a license is a real punishment and disgrace.

PUNCTUALITY.

(Windsor Star)

A CLERGYMAN remarks that it is dangerously close to being an immoral act for Sunday School teachers to be persistently late for their classes. The bad example set young people by their elders in this way, it is pointed out might have far-reaching effects.

It is important, obviously, that Sunday School teachers should be on time for their appointments. On the other hand, it has to be remembered that a Sunday school teacher is unpaid, that he or she merely carries on the work for the love of it or through a sense of duty, also that such teaching involves a considerable sacrifice on the part of many persons and that there are occasions when it is difficult for a teacher to be strictly on time. Of course, if a teacher is persistently late the conclusion may be reached that the task is too great an interference with his or her private life, and perhaps in such circumstances it is better for the teacher to drop out.

Punctuality is a trait that everyone, Sunday school teacher, or otherwise should seek to develop. On this continent, unfortunately, there is a widespread lack of it. We are not nearly as particular and exacting in this respect as are the people of Europe. A seven o'clock dinner invitation in Canada may mean the arrival of guests anywhere up to 8.30.

It would be much more pleasant and satisfactory for everyone if people would take more pains to reach their engagements on time. In most cases there is no reason why they cannot do so. A little less carelessness, a little more planning would make all the difference in the world.

ABOUT THE TURKEY.

(Manchester Guardian)

WHEN THE turkey, noble bird of our Christmas dinner-table, first came to England, not from Turkey, but from America, it was widely confused with the guinea-fowl, an African bird that reached Europe through the medium of Muselman traders, who were generally known as Turks.

The French shared the general confusion about the country of origin of the turkey and at first called it poule d'Inde, from which comes the modern name of dindon. A similar error was perpetuated in the old German name Kalkuttisch Hun, from Calicut, on the Malabar coast of India, to which the turkey was brought in the seventeenth century from America. The Swedish name for the turkey is kalcon, which is just a modification of the old German name.

"Probably," says an authority on ornithology, "few animals or birds have been so persistently misrepresented by the names given to them as the American bird we call the turkey"; and the same authority points out that our farm-yard names for the turkey are far better than those of the poultry dealer. In Scotland the bird of the season is regarded as something of a feathered clown and is called by the humorously realistic name of "Bubbly Jock," and the Suffolk name of gobble-cock has an appropriate sound.

IN A SAD PLIGHT.

(Sudbury Star)

THE REGRETTABLE and distressing situation in which the people of Hagar township find themselves and which has decided them to refrain from nominating a 1937 council and seek dissolution of the municipality, is of course the direct result of the depression and the burden that relief has foisted upon the taxpayers.

From all accounts the affairs of Hagar are in a bad way, and there will be need of Government intervention to unravel the tangled skein. With 99 percent. of the residents on relief, barely 10 percent. of the taxes paid; banks refusing to advance loans, and no funds to finance the schools, the township is undoubtedly facing a disconcerting and perplexing problem.

AGE-OLD RITUAL MARKS PAGEANTRY OF HOUSE OPENING

Parliamentary Scene Will See Modern Statesman Play Legendary Roles

TROOPS MARCH, GUNS BOOM

By W. W. Murray
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 12—(C.P.)—The second session of the 18th Parliament of Canada will open here Thursday to the accompaniment of a pageantry as old as the hills. Ceremonies and gestures which have descended from mediaeval days, which were ancient even when Henry III, nearly 700 years ago, established in England the first faint glimmerings of modern democratic government, are preserved and re-enacted with due solemnity on this annual occasion.

For a brief time the statesmen of to-day surround themselves with an environment instinct with meaning, and move across the parliamentary scene like figures of some hoary legend. Privy Councillors uniformed in blue, lavishly gold-braided, and, despite their unquestionably peaceful turn of mind, carrying swords, array themselves with staid judges, clad in scarlet and ermine. Churchmen, diplomats, soldiers, sailors and airmen, notables in the official life of the country, all garmented brilliantly or somberly, according to their calling, add the dignity of their presence to "The Opening."

The ceremony has its locale in the Senate Chamber of the Parliament Buildings. Thither the Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir, will remain at three o'clock Thursday afternoon. His escort comprises a troop of Dragoons, and the thunder of guns booms across the Ottawa River as he descends from his conveyance. Drawn up in front of the lofty Peace Tower will be 100 men from the Governor General's Foot Guards, heavy greatcoats enveloping their scarlet tunics and blue trousers, their heads encased in towering bearskins.

March Up Hall of Fame

Conducted to the throne, a high-canopied chair elevated on a red-carpeted dais, and facing the high ranking dignitaries of the land, the Governor General requests the summoning of the members of the Lower House, who have already assembled in their own chamber. The messenger is the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, clad in a black velvet dress with liberal adornments of lace.

The pageantry in the Commons is less colorful, but equally historical. Three sharp knocks on the door are heard, and the Serjeant-at-Arms proceeds to inquire. Returning, he announces: "a messenger from His Excellency the Governor General."

"Admit the messenger," the Speaker of the House orders.

Arming himself with the Mace, symbol of the Commons authority, the Serjeant-at-Arms gives access to the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, while he stands at the open door with the Mace.

"His Excellency the Governor-General requests the immediate presence of the members of His Honorable House in the Chamber of the Honorable the Senate," declares the messenger from the Governor General. He departs after much bowing, and at once the Speaker heads the Commoners in a procession to the Senate. There they find they can go no further than the Bar of the House. They are not permitted on the "floor."

As soon as the Commoners have arrived, His Excellency reads the Speech from the Throne in both English and French. This document, prepared by the Government, contains an outline of the major legislation with which Parliament will deal.

Returning to their own chamber, the Commons at once get down to work. The first thing they do is introduce a bill—a "dummy," in actual fact. This is a gesture which reasserts the right of the Commons to consider their own business before they take up the business of the King.

NAZI SHOCK TROOPS ARE BEATEN BACK

Madrid Chief Sends Crack International Brigade to Capture Highway Line

MADRID, Jan. 12 (OP-Havas)—A pounding government counter-offensive today sent German shock troops and other insurgent forces reeling back through the fog northwest of Madrid and cleared the strategic Madrid-La Coruna road, the city's northwestern life-line, the defence council claimed today.

In a big drive to offset the gains scored by the insurgent offensive of the past week, General Jose Miaja, Madrid commander, hurled his crack international brigade and militia against the insurgent positions in the Majadahonda-Las Rozas sector.

The sector through which the La Corunda highway runs is about 10 miles northwest of Madrid.

Supported by tanks, the government forces swept the insurgents from positions commanding the highway which forms an intersection with the road to Escorial at Las Rozas and runs close to the Madrid-Avila Railway, it was announced.

The government forces were pressing the insurgents back toward Majadahonda and the Villanueva Del Pardillo and Pozuelo sectors, in a southwesterly direction, it was claimed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12—(C.P.)—Moses L. Parshelsky, Brooklyn, N.Y., realty man, was $2,000,000 poorer to-day, but went free on suspended sentence after pleading guilty to an indictment charging income tax evasion as far back as 1919.

The suspended sentence, handed down yesterday by Federal Judge Robert Inch, carried five years' probation. United States Attorney said he believed the acceptance of $2,000,000 was the "largest money settlement in income tax fraud in the history of the country."

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 12. — Short covering in late dealings led to brisk rallies in wheat on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday after values had slipped more than a cent. The close was only ⅛ cent lower to unchanged.

The late rush to buy enabled the market to offset bearishness engendered by unconfirmed reports Italy was re-selling wheat purchased from Argentina in the past few months. Trading throughout the session was quiet. With export sales of Canadian wheat restricted to scattered lots, little resistance was shown in early dealings to the light selling.

Affirming tendency at Chicago, where the close was ¼-⅜ cent lower, was a factor in Winnipeg's late strength. Liverpool was weak, closing off 1d after relinquishing early gains.

Trade reports were that Italy had offered to re-sell Argentine wheat deliverable immediately, and was continuing her purchases of wheat for delivery in March.

Cash grains were inactive. Liquidation in rye high-lighted coarse grains, with losses of more than two cents being boarded.

Definite Turn To Prosperity

The Canadian Bank of Commerce Report at Annual Meeting Encourages High Hopes

After presenting the strong Statement of the Bank for the fiscal year ending 30th November, 1936, the General Manager, Mr. S. H. Logan, said in part:

The inauguration by the Bank of Personal Loan Departments has already been mentioned in the Directors' Report. I might add that every one of our branches in Canada is now equipped to make these loans to people with small but steady incomes who find themselves in temporary need of financial help.

The plan is one which enables the wage earner to cope with emergencies, to make expenditures of advantage to himself and his family, or, by consolidating debts already incurred to ease the pressure upon him by permitting their payment under a budgetary plan.

You may be interested in some information from the latest annual return to the Government which classifies our loans in Canada by the borrowers' occupations.

The largest single occupational group, out of a total of $1,000 borrowers, consists of some 29,800 customers engaged directly in agriculture. Loans to sundry individuals not specifically classified by occupation numbered 35,700. As regards the distribution in amount of total loans, agricultural loans, including the financing of grain from the farm to the export market, accounted for 21 per cent., manufacturers and other producers took 18 per cent., while wholesalers and retailers absorbed 7 per cent. Private individuals borrowed 15 per cent., governments and municipalities 14 per cent., brokers and bond dealers 13 per cent., while construction, because of its low ebb, accounted for only 3 per cent. It is interesting to observe how closely these percentages compare with those of the last Dominion census classifying gainfully employed Canadians by the occupations which they followed.

These figures indicate how wide and varied is the field served by the Canadian banking system, and how large is the number of borrowers who rely on the aid of bank loans in the conduct of their affairs.

There are men, of whom a few are in positions of responsibility, who decry our banking system as a mechanism which, for the benefit of bankers alone, enslaves the people by forcing upon them an ever increasing burden of debt from which they can never hope to escape. To this cause, they claim, can be attributed all hardship and poverty and they urge, therefore, that the system should be changed.

Loans are, however, never forced by the banks on unwilling borrowers, but are sought by borrowers in the expectation that borrowing will be to their advantage. Unless the banker, on examination of the facts, agrees that such expectations are reasonable he is most likely to deny the applicant's request and will at least attempt to dissuade him from the venture. Since borrowers take the initiative in obtaining loans it is absurd to say that the banks force debt upon them.

IMPRESSIVE BUSINESS GAINS

The signs of business improvement for some time evident in Canada are, at least in the more thickly settled areas, becoming much more pronounced. This improvement is especially remarkable because it has developed, and is sustained, in the face of many adverse conditions.

Total agricultural income is estimated to have risen by 15 per cent. and to have brought farm purchasing power close to the level of 1930.

Our satisfaction over these surprisingly good results in a year when agriculture faced immense handicaps must, however, be tempered by a realization that many farmers in the worst drought areas did not share in these higher returns.

With a few exceptions our industries have operated at a normal rate of activity. Virtually all of our modern manufacturing plant facilities in the forestry branch have been utilized in providing about 40 per cent. of the world's requirements of newsprint paper and at least 15 per cent. of the world trade in lumber. During recent months, moreover, logging activity was more than one-third greater than in the like period in 1935, which foreshadows an even higher production for newsprint paper and lumber mills in the current year.

The heavy, or capital goods, industries have surged forward at a pace beyond expectation. Notwithstanding the slow recovery of construction, a large and representative group of the heavy industries, whose production records are available to the Bank, are now operating at an average rate 50 per cent. greater than two years ago. I suggest that the revival in this particular line is one of the brightest features in our general economic situation. The re-employment of a host of trained workmen, whose skill was being impaired by idleness, removes a very real threat of a loss to Canada in industrial efficiency. It indicates also that other branches of manufacture are commencing to bring idle capital into use to provide replacement of obsolete equipment.

In 1936 our production of minerals was valued at $360,000,000, the largest amount on record for Canada. With the exception of the return paid on foreign capital employed, and the cost of equipment unobtainable in this country, virtually all of this sum has been, or is being, disbursed in Canada to pay for labour, supplies, transportation and other services, and as dividends to Canadian investors.

These immediate advantages, and those derived from the firm resistance offered by our mining activities to the effects of the depression, are generally recognized and appreciated. There are others which may be overlooked, although of equal or greater importance, but which must eventually come to a country so richly endowed with minerals as Canada.

Sources of energy and metals conveniently at hand have played an important part in industrial growth the world over.

We have developed metallurgical units which rank among the most important in the world, and we are now smelting and refining a large proportion of the metals we have for sale abroad. Thus we have laid the foundation for establishing a great industrial structure based upon our mineral resources and their conversion in Canada into manufactured goods for home and foreign consumption.

EXPORT TRADE REACHED BILLION MARK

We have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the record of our general export trade. We reached the billion dollar mark for the first time since 1929, when exports stood at $1,200,000,000.

This achievement is the more remarkable because the general price level in that interval has fallen by 22 per cent. If, therefore, our present volume of export trade were calculated in terms of 1929 values the result would exceed the total of that year by about $80,000,000. It is, moreover, doubtful whether at any time the benefits of our export trade have been so well distributed among Canada's various industries as in 1936.

When we compare the results in Canadian export trade with those achieved by other countries our good fortune is emphasized, for I find that the rate of increase in the average monthly gold value of our exports during the first ten months of 1936 over 1935 was not only triple the rate of increase of the world as a whole, but was also greater than that of any other major exporting country.

Canada improved its position among the world's exporters by drawing ahead of France into fourth place, and by further widening the margin between its level of export trade and that of Japan, which continues to occupy sixth place.

As was to be expected, the striking increase in exports stimulated our demand for imports, which rose by over 10 per cent. The final result was a margin of exports over imports in excess of $350,000,000, and thus we had to our credit the third largest merchandise trade balance this country has enjoyed in the post-war period.

The hazards and hardships of pioneering in a new country would have overwhelmed our forefathers had they not possessed vision, energy and courage. I believe that these qualities still survive in our people, that they will enable us to solve the problems which now confront us and so to develop our heritage that we shall ensure an enviable future for Canada.

Sir John Aird, the President, said in part:

Canada's present economic condition approaches prosperity.

In fact, a healthy prosperity of the 1925-27 order actually exists in many sections of the country, notably over most of our vast mining domain, in areas of good crop yields such as the Maritime Provinces and extensive sections of Quebec and Eastern and Western Ontario, as well as in important lumbering districts, such as the Pacific Coast, where production has been greatly expanded.

Taking the Prairie Provinces as a whole a substantial improvement is shown during the year, the advance being quite marked in those areas where good crops were harvested. Although the total figures for the wheat crop were below the small yield of 1935 the grade was exceptionally high. With the very welcome improvement in price which came last year the effect has been to raise the value of all grain production to at least 250 million dollars, fully 30 millions in excess of that of 1935.

REQUISITES FOR FURTHER PROGRESS

Where prosperity still lags it can be stimulated by a further development of natural forces of recovery, by normal crop conditions this year, by a practical policy of grain marketing, by necessary reconstruction measures in the West, by strict observance of the principles of good credit and by more determined efforts to balance our public budgets.

These are the requisite factors applicable to any section of Canada that desires to share fully in a general advance which may be of such dimensions as to surprise the most optimistic. Indeed, the question today appears to be not whether the present business revival will continue, but firstly, whether the prospective development of business can be prevented from assuming boom proportions with consequent over-speculation in the stock market and over-investment in industry; and, secondly, whether rearmament, which now induces a feverish demand for certain materials, can be replaced by constructive and more desirable enterprise.

I shall not qualify my former expressions against excessive trade restrictions because of their depressing effect upon business. But now I urge world-wide tariff revision for two other reasons, namely, to protect the consuming masses against possible sharp increases in living costs, and to prevent the large governmental expenditures still necessary for public relief from mounting so high as to nullify efforts to achieve budgetary balance.

The tripartite monetary agreement announced by Great Britain, France and the United States last September denounced, in effect, competitive currency depreciation, and in a sense renounced the system of national currency management which had formerly been in vogue. But it is nevertheless highly gratifying that there is now at least a semblance of monetary unity and that business transactions are less hazardous than when the exchanges were continuously subject to wide fluctuations.

PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Canada's most urgent national problem is that of unemployment which, notwithstanding the marked improvement in our domestic business and foreign trade persists in undiminished degree in the Dominion as a whole, although showing recession in several Provinces. Before the problem can be dealt with intelligently we must have detailed information concerning the entire body of the unemployed with a complete classification according to their individual trades or callings and aptitude, having regard to age and state of health, for absorption into the nation's industrial life.

Once an authoritative survey is made as to the classes of the unemployed and their distribution throughout the Dominion, Governmental policies can be intelligently directed toward meeting the situation by public works or otherwise, as may be deemed most expedient. Stability of currency is essential to the revival of private constructional or durable enterprises which furnish so much and so productive employment. Such enterprises are financed by the issue of long-term securities to the investing public. As long as national budgets remain unbalanced, with accompanying currency or credit inflation, uncertainty is bound to persist concerning the future value of the monetary unit.

It should be recognized that the present alignment of the world wheat supply in relation to demand is due more to exceptional crop damage over a large area than to increased consumption. Since 1932 the annual requirements of wheat importing countries from the major exporting group, including Canada, have averaged about 500 million bushels, as compared with the previous 5-year average of 760 millions, owing mainly to the desire of these importers to make themselves as independent as possible of overseas wheat. Yet there is a clearly discernible tendency on the part of exporting countries to expand their acreage even beyond that which they sowed during the period when wheat-deficient nations were importing most heavily. There is therefore as imperative a need as ever for improvement in the efficiency of Western agriculture and for aggressive sales policies, as well as for more strenuous efforts to diversify farming and to withdraw sub-marginal lands from cultivation.

CONSOLIDATION OF GOVERNMENT SERVICES

If, contrary to the opinion this Bank has expressed for many years, legislative union of some of the Provinces is not regarded as feasible, there seems no valid objection to consolidation of certain services so as to end their duplication, particularly as between the Dominion, the Provincial and the Municipal Governments.

Our timber stands are among the most valuable of our resources, for with the complementary wood manufacturing industries they have a total annual production value of nearly 600 million dollars and furnish employment to about 250,000 people. If, therefore, as forestry experts claim, the growth increment is less than the total depletion, we are living off our forest capital, a condition which could be remedied by a system of real forest management. Unless steps are taken by governments for the replacement of timber cut and lost from other causes, we shall be faced before many years have elapsed with the disastrous consequences of our wilful neglect of this most valuable natural resource.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

We have been so concerned over the unsatisfactory earning power of the railways companies, and particularly over the recurring deficits of the Canadian National Railways, that we have overlooked the gravity of another transportation problem, that of reconditioning these systems. While both companies are models of operating efficiency, they have considerable obsolete and out-of-date equipment and the question of replacement is a pressing one. We may safely leave the problem of adequate new equipment for the Canadian Pacific Railway to the directors of that company, but the problem in respect to the Canadian National Railways is a public matter. This important public utility must be kept in efficient condition by the provision of modern equipment, and while large capital expenditures would of course be necessary for that purpose, they might be justified by the lower operating costs which could reasonably be expected to follow the use of the more economical motive power units now available, as well as by the greater financial returns which would probably result from the introduction of more rapid freight and express service and more attractive travelling conditions.

CONFIDENCE NEEDED

We in this country are among the most fortunate of all peoples. Yet our economic position is challenging as well as heartening. It is challenging because our economic freedom presents the opportunity of repairing the errors of the past and of making the next period of prosperity more general and durable than those of former eras. With confidence, coupled with industrial enterprise and the vast national assets at our command, we can establish our economic and social life on a higher plane than has previously been enjoyed by the Canadian people.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

SELWYN, Jan. 12.—The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Association of the Selwyn United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Gilbert McIlmoyl on Thursday of last week with an attendance of thirteen members and two visitors, although many of the members were unable to be present, owing to the icy condition of the roads.

The meeting was presided over by the newly-elected president, Mrs. Gordon Fitzgerald. The W.A. have made plans for a social evening sponsored by them, to be held on Thursday evening of this week, after the presentation of the picture "King of Kings" which the Y.P.U. are presenting in the church. It was also planned at the meeting to piece two quilts which will be kept for relief purposes.

The scripture reading was given by Mrs. Norman Stockdale and a paper on "Friendship" read by Mrs. Gilbert McIlmoyl. The latter also presided at the piano.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wilfred Nicholls and the roll call will be answered by each member's favorite book and its author. After the adjournment of the meeting, delightful refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

BADMINTON CLUB HAS FIRST SOCIAL

Large Turnout Enjoys Games And Refreshments That Follow Contests

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 12.—The Lakefield Badminton Club held their first social evening of the season in the Memorial Hall here on Friday. There was a splendid turnout of members. A series of ladies', men's and mixed doubles were run off under the direction of the team captains, Miss Betty Harvey and Mr. Arthur Kingdon. A keen interest was taken in the play, in which everyone joined. The games were so arranged that each member took part in several contests during the evening, thus maintaining the interest throughout. The players enjoyed taking the role of spectators when they were not in the game themselves. They were treated to some specially fast games of men's doubles towards the end of the evening, when Smith, Spence, Harvey and Kingdon put on a closely contested match.

Dainty refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. John Langley, social convenor. Mrs. Geo. Kelly presided over the coffee urn.

Members are hoping that these social evenings will be regular weekly features of the club.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 12.—A check-up on the number of births, deaths and marriages in the village during the year 1936, shows a decline in births and deaths since 1935, but an increase in marriages.

In 1936 there were 14 births, recorded, with only 9 in 1936, showing a decrease of 35.7 per cent. There were 13 deaths during 1935 with 12 last year, a decrease of 7.7 per cent. Marriages increased from 6 in 1935 to 8 in 1936, or 33.3 per cent.

Chandos Council Raises Annual Remuneration Of Official To $100

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CHANDOS, Jan. 12.—A deputation of the Apsley Red Cross Society composed of the president, Mrs. T. H. Lean; the Outpost nurse, Miss Finnemore, and the Revs. R. N. McMullin and C. A. G. Spence attended the Chandos Municipal Council meeting on Saturday with the object of obtaining a higher remuneration for the services of a medical officer of health, should a doctor be secured for Apsley, the former salary attached to the office being only $50 a year.

After listening to the arguments presented by Mr. Spence, and concurred in by other members of the deputation the council unanimously decided to raise the salary to $100, on motion of Charles Wease seconded by Will M. Johnston, the new member of the council.

Mrs. T. H. Lean cordially thanked the council for their prompt and pleasing response to the request.

Wood For Taxes

At the initial meeting of the Chandos Municipal Council it was decided to accept cord wood in payment of taxes when requested, the tax collector being authorized to measure the wood. Where ratepayers have no wood lots, Reeve Caldwell suggested they be allowed to cut wood on lots to be purchased by the municipality. A purchaser has already been secured for all cord wood placed on the roadside.

CLARENCE EDDY IS DEAD

CHICAGO.—Clarence Eddy, 86, internationally known organist and friend of composers and singers of five decades, died Sunday.

POLICY FORMED FEW YEARS AGO IS FOLLOWED

ments effected by the Board in recent years from the standpoint of economy and also efficiency. If assistance or advice was needed from persons outside the membership of the Board at any time, Ald. Dutton said he felt that it would be given gladly and gratuitously by persons who were qualified to help.

Alderman McIntyre was appointed third member without opposition. Alderman Stocker and Alderman Hamilton said it was an advantage to have the chairman of the property committee on the Board.

On Public Library Board

Albert E. Borland of the post office staff, and secretary of the Workers' Educational Association, was appointed to the Public Library Board, succeeding ex-alderman Joseph Crowe. Mayor Macdonald read a letter from the Association affirming that they were the only organized group in the city interested in adult education and requesting that they be given representation on the Public Library board when the occasion permitted it. They also invited the Mayor and Aldermen to attend their classes which are held every Monday night in the Collegiate Institute.

Alderman Sloan recommended the appointment of Mr. Borland, saying that Mr. Crowe had not been in good health of late.

Interim Payments

Requisitions of $20,000 a month from the Board of Education and $2,000 a month from the Separate School Board for January and February were approved on Alderman Hamilton's motion seconded by Alderman Glover.

Alderman Sloan requested that the Fire, Water and Light Committee consider the need of lighting the corner of Lansdowne street and Monaghan Road.

Deputation Expenses

A routine resolution authorizing Mayor Macdonald to approve expense accounts of any deputations during the year was moved by Alderman Glover and seconded by Alderman Hamilton. It was adopted on a recorded division in which every member of the council except Alderman Gordon voted for the motion.

Alderman Gordon said there had been abuses of this practice, although possibly there might not have been any last year. If any members of the council went out of the city on deputations they should submit their bills with vouchers and have them paid in that way. Alderman Gordon said he was getting some information about deputation expenses.

Mayor Macdonald said—"I assure Alderman Gordon that if he goes back he will find that deputation costs have been a great deal lower than they were years ago."

When he came to the council fifteen years ago Alderman Stocker said it was a common thing for aldermen to put in expenses of $35 and $40. He had fought against that method. In recent years some deputations did not cost the city a cent.

"For the last seven or eight years there has been no more economical council in the Dominion of Canada," Ald. Stocker added.

When Mayor Macdonald called for the vote on the motion empowering him to approve deputation expenses, Ald. Gordon alone opposed it. He asked for the ayes and nays, and Mayor Macdonald voted with the nine other "ayes", and Alderman Gordon was recorded as voting "nay".

Proposes Inventories

Inventories of all city machinery, tools and other assets and property was suggested by Alderman Glover. This stock-keeping had been suggested at a recent meeting last year, he said. Alderman Dutton recalled that the proposal had in view a listing of all properties "in order that we should know what really belongs to us."

Alderman Sloan said the Board of Works kept an inventory of its materials and machines, and Alderman Stocker reported that there was a complete record of the Parks committee's equipment. Mayor Macdonald said that the proposal would be investigated.

Change at Incinerator

Alderman McIntyre was authorized to have certain beams at the incinerator raised to give the garbage collection truck more head room for dumping its loads. The work is to be done immediately.

The council's appreciation of the long service given by Joseph Crowe as a member of the Public Library board was expressed in a motion by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman McIntyre.

Invitation to Senator

"It won't do the city any harm to get on the front pages of the newspapers," Alderman Gordon remarked in regard to his motion, which was seconded by Alderman McIntyre, that a banquet be tendered Senator Iva C. Fallis, "the first woman to be appointed to the Canadian Senate by the Liberal Conservative party, and that the legal committee and Mrs. W. R. Morris and Mrs. Joseph Mills be a committee to confer with Senator Fallis as to the time and place of such banquet."

"It would be a graceful act in which we could all join," Ald. Gordon said. "Senator Fallis is a public spirited woman and one of the ablest speakers in Canada."

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Opposes Wine Shop

Another motion by Alderman Gordon advised the Liquor Control Board of Ontario that the council considered eight licenses for hotels to be entirely adequate for Peterborough, that no more beverage room licenses be issued, and that the authority for the wine shop on Charlotte street be not renewed after March 31, 1937. Alderman McIntyre seconded the resolution.

Alderman Gordon said that if any applications should be made to the Liquor Control Board for additional beer room licenses the council's motion would be on record and the Board would surely give it consideration.

"In regard to the wine shop license," Ald. Gordon continued, "any one can buy wine there without control. A man may be at home intoxicated, and he can telephone for wine and have it delivered to him. I am told by the police that a large part of street drunkenness is due to the sale of wine." The motion was unanimously endorsed.

Aldermanic Stipends

Alderman Glover seconded another Gordon motion to the effect that no remuneration be paid the aldermen this year. Alderman Sloan supported it, saying that he had previously advocated it in council, and he could not go back on it at this time. "I think we should have five aldermen and pay them $200 a year," Ald. Sloan said.

The aldermen are paid five dollars for each meeting of the council, but nothing for committee meetings.

"For the amount of work the aldermen do for the citizens it is a small allowance." Mayor Macdonald commented, and Alderman McIntyre said that at the end of the year most aldermen were out of pocket.

The motion was defeated, and Alderman Gordon called for the ayes and nays. The division was as follows: Ayes (to cancel the stipend) —Aldermen Gordon, Glover and Sloan.

Nays: Aldermen Cotton, Stocker, Wilson, Hamilton, Dutton, Juby, McIntyre and Mayor Macdonald.

Restore Salaries

Continuing his inning of motions, Alderman Gordon suggested that the reduction in the salaries of employees of the council, which excluded the employees of the Utilities Commission and Board of Education be removed, and that the salaries be restored in full. Official statistics showed that for fourteen months in 1935 and 1936 the cost of living had advanced 15 per cent. The cut in the salaries of civic servants was 12½ per cent.

"I feel they are entitled to it," Ald. Gordon declared.

"You are no doubt aware that this is a question that comes up for discussion in Finance Committee when we are preparing the budget," Mayor Macdonald remarked. The motion was not seconded.

Committee Meetings

Another motion that failed to attract a seconder was proposed by Alderman Gordon as follows:—"That all council and committee meetings be held in the council chamber hereafter, and that notice of all such meetings be printed in The Peterborough Examiner, in the edition the day before such meetings, excepting meetings of committees dealing with prospective or pending litigation of the corporation of the city of Peterborough."

Mayor Macdonald said that every meeting of the finance and relief committees matters relating to citizens who were receiving free hospitalization and others who were placed on the relief list were discussed and were of a personal nature.

More Police Protection

A resolution by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Wilson that the Police Commission consider the appointment of a traffic officer "for the city and the policing the residential areas," that the Commission and Finance Committee confer on this proposal and the cost of "further and better police protection for the ratepayers" was adopted.

There is no policing of the west ward, the north ward and Ashburnham, Ald. Gordon stated. "In the north ward a serious crime was recently committed, and there have been quite a number of burglaries. Peterborough is now the size of a city that should have a traffic officer."

Mayor Macdonald—This matter has been under consideration by the Police Commission, and we have recently considered taking some action. This resolution will strengthen the Commission's hands. The question was largely a matter of getting a little extra money for the police department. From my experience last year on the Commission I see the problems of the police in a different light. The outlying sections of the city are not getting police protection, especially at night, and they are entitled to it. A patrol officer would be on duty in the evenings and at night. I think the Commission intends to make a recommendation along that line."

Alderman Stocker—For forty-five years the police have been patrolling from Charlotte street to Brock street and if one of them were ten feet farther he'd drop dead.

He spoke of "park pests" lying on the grass near the sidewalks at Central Park and insulting girls passing by. All that was needed was that the police beats be extended a little, and there wouldn't be any additional expense, Ald. Stocker said.

Alderman Dutton said the time was overdue for the resolution being put into effect. He approved of strict enforcement of the existing laws.

Ald. Wilson suggested that the present police force might be distributed to better effect.

"I think the police force is very efficient for the number of men at their disposal," Ald. Hamilton remarked.

Mayor Macdonald concluded the discussion with the statement that this whole question was being discussed by the police commission. Borrowing a prize ring term he said: "Just leave it with me to see if I can 'soften up' the council for some extra money for the Department."

Institute Has Donated Coat-Hangers For Use At Town Hall

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, Jan. 12.—The January meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Rork Ferguson, with a good attendance, considering the icy sidewalks and rain. The roll call was answered by each member giving her one superstition.

A letter was read from the principal of the Public School, thanking the Institute for Kleenex provided for each room.

It was decided to pay the delegate's expenses to the local leader training school on buymanship to be held in Peterborough, Jan 13. Mrs. E. Cuthbertson is the delegate.

Coat hangers were donated by the members to be placed in the Town Hall for the convenience of those attending card parties in the hall.

It was decided to put on a card party, euchre, lost heir, and crokinole, in the hall, January 19; the proceeds to be given to the Children's Aid.

It was decided to send baskets of fruit to the sick.

Mrs. Ferguson then took charge of the meeting, and community singing was enjoyed, followed by a two-minute talk on the motto: The best Doctors in the world are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet and Dr. Merryman, by Mrs. Ferguson.

A report of the convention at Toronto, given by Mrs. Lochead and Mrs. Longhurst proved very interesting. Mrs. Cuthbertson and Mrs. Ferguson gave a musical selection. Lunch was served by hostesses, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. E. Cuthbertson and Mrs. Ferguson.

New Racket: WINDSOR.—A new racket has sprung up in Windsor and district, according to Archie F. Gignac, solicitor for Sandwich West Township, which has struck hard at the prominent slug-machine trade here. Mr. Gignac said slugs were being bought in Detroit at $1.50 a thousand and used to play machines here where each token is worth five cents in merchandise. Mr. Gignac thought that was hardly a paying proposition for merchants who have the machines on their premises.

CROSS IS BURNED ADJACENT TO HOME AT GILCHRIST BAY

Police Believe Attempt Made To Chase Family From Neighborhood

SEVEN FEET HIGH

Investigating the burning of a fiery cross outside the home of George Woodcock, 62-year-old resident of Gilchrist Bay in North Dummer Township, Provincial Constable David Silvester ridiculed the suggestion that it was the work of the Ku Klux Klan.

The cross crudely-fashioned out of maple saplings was coated with tar and bound with burlap presumably to make it the more inflammable. Mounted on a base made from a piece of rail fencing, the cross was seven feet in height.

Remains of the cross have been brought in by the officer and are at present in his office at the county buildings, pending the completion of investigations.

According to Constable Silvester, the victim of the pranksters believes the burning of the cross to have been an attempt to scare him and his family from the neighbourhood where he has lived since last summer. Woodcock originally comes from an isolated section between Coe Hill and Bancroft.

He is stated to have told police he was in bed on Saturday night when around nine-thirty o'clock he was awakened by the sound of stones being thrown against the side of his cabin. Hurriedly dressing he ran downstairs and saw the fiery cross glowing in the darkness in close proximity to his dwelling. He grabbed at the burning cross and threw it into the roadway, and later reported the matter to provincial police.

"Do you think it was the work of the Ku Klux Klan," the officer was asked. "Naw," he chuckled. "But I think that whoever is responsible for the burning of the cross wanted to scare the old man into believing that it was the Klan."

TRIBUTE IS PAID LATE REV. MOORE

Funeral Service Was In Charge Of The Presbytery of Peterborough

Brother ministers gathered from the Peterborough district and joined with relatives and friends in according the late Rev. Dr. James E. Meore funeral honors at the residence, 174 Hunter street east, Monday evening. A service was conducted by Rev. A. S. Clelland of Norwood, chairman of the Presbytery.

Rev. E. W. Rowland, pastor of Mark Street United Church cited particularly the intensely evangelical nature of Dr. Moore's career in the service of his church. He spoke from the Scriptural words referring to the death of Moses: "The servant of the Lord died there according to the word of the Lord."

Rev. Rowland spoke of him as a preacher, as a pastor and as a citizen. As a preacher, the conversions he obtained in his many pastorates were his chief pride. He referred to him as possessing the tender and sympathetic nature of the true shepherd of souls in his work as a pastor. As a citizen he was proudly aware of his descent from United Empire Loyalist stock and loyal to the Empire, Rev. Rowland said.

Scriptural lessons were read at the service by Rev. G. K. Tyler of Park Street Baptist Church, representing the Peterborough Ministerial Association in the absence from the city of Rev. J. D. Paterson, the president, and by Rev. C. C. Miller of Bridgenorth, secretary of the Presbytery. Rev. S. A. Kent of Havelock led in prayer.

Among the large gathering of friends present was Rev. R. Bamforth. The Mark Street board was in attendance in a body. A profusion of floral tributes bespoke the sympathy and regret of those present and many others afar.

A solo, "Now the Laborer's Task Is O'er" was sung by Mrs. E. Mitchell of the Mark Street Church choir.

The remains were taken to Uxbridge today for the service at the United Church there this afternoon with interment at Uxbridge.

5 MEN DISMISSED, NAVAL DOCKYARDS

Result Of Documents In Workboxes—Climaxes Sabotage Inquiry

LONDON, Jan. 12 (AP).—Five men were dismissed from service in two British naval yards today after a two-year investigation of suspected sabotage and leakage of confidential information.

"Five dockyard workers have been discharged, four from the Devonport dockyard and one from the Sheerness dockyard," an official Admiralty statement said.

The Devonport dismissals resulted from discovery of "certain documents" in the workboxes of four employees, it was said. The nature of the papers was not disclosed. The inquiry has been provoked by uneasiness in connection with rumors of numerous foreign spies operating in England.

Detectives were called in to investigate damage to the submarine L-54 at Devonport in April, 1936. Another case which received official attention was the discovery of pieces of metal in the machinery of the Griffin.

Two other vessels, the Royal Oak and the Oberon, were delayed for four days in December, 1934, when short circuits in their electrical systems caused postponement of cruises with the Mediterranean Fleet.

His first effort ended in failure, but he hopes to demonstrate the practicability of sail skiing when the Weather Man affords some crusty snow.

DEALERS WANT ICE.

Dealers in natural ice in the Peterborough region are beginning to wonder if they are going to find ice of sufficient thickness for storage on the lakes and rivers this season. Up to the present there has not been enough cold to provide the 18-inch thickness of ice required, and the time for the annual cutting operations is fast approaching. Many stretches along the Otonabee River which usually freeze over early in the winter are now open.

ROADS IN GOOD CONDITION.

After a pleasure drive over district roads Monday, a local citizen reports the county and township routes are in unusually good condition. Most of the roads are bare of ice and snow. Sail Skiing Makes Debut On Chemong Lake

Andy Rutter (LEFT), skiing enthusiast and prominent member of the Peterborough Ski Club, is shown demonstrating his new idea—sail skiing on Chemong Lake. The glass-like sheet of ice failed to afford sufficient footing for control of the skis and he ran a poor second in a race with Sonny Roy (RIGHT) on his homemade ice boat. On glare ice, Andy found the only practical manoeuvre was a straight run before the wind but he is convinced that tacks at high speed will be possible when a fall of snow provides a better medium for the skis on the lake surface.

Farm Purchasing Power Close To 1930 Level Bankers Claim

Marked Gains Over Most Of Canadian Business Field Are Reported

BANK'S ANNUAL MEETING

TORONTO Jan. 12. — Marked gains over most of the Canadian business field were shown by S. H. Logan, general manager, and Sir John Aird, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, in their addresses at the bank's annual meeting held to-day. Sir John stated that Canada's economic condition approached prosperity, with that happy situation actually existing in many sections of the country. Substantial improvement was noted in the Prairie Provinces as a whole, the exceptional quality of the small crops and improved prices raising the value of all grain production to at least 250 million dollars, fully 30 millions in excess of that of 1935.

Mr. Logan introduced a new observation on Canadian mining, after mentioning that its production value of 360 million dollars was the highest on record and that as 90 per cent. of our minerals and their products were placed in foreign markets this important industry had gained a leading position in the international base metal trade. A vast mineral area in Canada was being diligently explored and some of the most important of the world's metallurgical plants were now in this country, which laid the foundation for a great industrial structure and a substantial increase in population, such as followed the development of the United States and which would eventually be witnessed in a country so richly endowed with minerals as Canada.

While a number of farmers were suffering from recurrent crop damage, two-thirds of the agricultural population were in an improved position as a result of an increase of 15 per cent. in the agricultural income of 1936. Farm purchasing power was close to the level of 1930. With few exceptions our industries had operated at a normal rate of activity. Mr. Logan emphasized the great progress in the newsprint mills which provided about 40 per cent. of which provided about 40 per cent. of the world's requirements of paper; the world's requirements of paper; in lumbering, which had been so active as to furnish at least 15 per cent. of the world trade in lumber; and in the capital goods industries, which had surged forward at a pace beyond expectations and were operating at a rate 50 per cent. greater than two years ago.

No Loans Are Forced.

The bank credit position came in for some comment. "There are men, of whom a few are in positions of responsibility," said Mr. Logan, "who decry our banking system as a mechanism which, for the benefit of bankers alone, enslaves the people by forcing upon them an ever increasing burden of debt from which they can never hope to escape.... Loans are, however, never forced by the banks on unwilling borrowers, but are sought by borrowers in the expectation that borrowing will be to their advantage....Since borrowers take the initiative in obtaining loans, it is absurd to say that the banks force debt upon them."

Sir John Aird thought the Canadian public were among the most fortunate of all peoples. They had overcome most of the forces of depression. They were exempt from that clash of violent and undemocratic elements which in Europe have betrayed the cause of peace and have had much to do with making that Continent the habitation of fear, hatred, civil strife, and potential world war. Yet Canada's position was challenging as well as heartening, because her economic freedom presented the opportunity of repairing the errors of the past and of making the next period of prosperity more general and durable than those of former eras.

With the prospect of a general advance which might be of such dimensions as to surprise the most optimistic, Sir John mentioned requisites for any part of Canada that desired to share fully in this upturn. It was necessary that there be further development of natural recovery forces, normal crops, a practical grain marketing policy, necessary reconstruction in the West, strict observance of good credit principles and more determined efforts to balance budgets.

Canada's Most Urgent Problem.

Unemployment was Canada's most urgent problem. Before it could be dealt with intelligently there must be detailed information concerning the entire body of the unemployed with a complete classification according to their individual trades or callings and aptitude, having regard to age and state of health, for absorption into the nation's industrial life. "It is a mistake," said Sir John, "to assume that a general improvement in business will alone suffice to absorb this vast body of unemployed. There will still remain an army of unemployed whose skill and energy cannot be availed of because the industries or trades to which they belong have lagged in the process of recovery."

The National Railways.

"We have been so concerned," continued Sir John, "over the recurring deficits of the Canadian National Railways, that we have overlooked the gravity of another transportation problem, that of reconditioning these systems. We may safely leave the problem of adequate new equipment for the Canadian Pacific Railway to the directors of that company, but the problem in respect to the Canadian National Railways is a public matter. This important public utility must be kept in efficient condition by the provision of modern equipment, and while large capital expenditures would of course be necessary for that purpose, they might be justified by the lower operating costs which could reasonably be expected to follow the use of the more economical motive power units now available, as well as by the greater financial returns which would probably result from the introduction of more rapid freight and express service and more attractive travelling conditions."

Turning to the necessary reconstruction in the West and to the question of a guaranteed price for wheat, Sir John said: "I am free to admit that the problems of the West are not as well understood as they should be and that the Prairie grain growers have had grievances in the past in the obvious disadvantage of selling their products at world prices, sometimes at ruinously low figures, and of buying their requirements in a highly protected domestic market. Some adjustment of this unbalanced situation has been effected by the tariff revisions of the past year, by the spread of industrialism in the West (forty new industries were established in Winnipeg alone in 1936 and fifty new products added to the output of existing manufacturers) and by the more rapid increase in the prices of agricultural products than of retail goods. It seems clear that further measures to restore agricultural purchasing power are most desirable, and I heartily endorse the proposal that the affairs of the Prairie Provinces undergo a thorough examination by a Royal Commission with a view to their speedy improvement.

Suggests Cutting Borrowing Powers

"Why not cut in half," Alderman Gordon suggested last night when Alderman Hamilton as chairman of the finance committee moved a routine resolution authorizing the borrowing of funds from the bank up to $641,000 until the year's taxes are collected.

"The city treasurer is getting in more money than he knows what to do with," Ald. Gordon commented.

"We might be lending to the bank yet," Ald. Wilson jokingly remarked.

Alderman Hamilton had said that the amount mentioned in the resolution was only a formality and that the city would not require it.

"We are only arranging for whatever credit we may need," Ald. McIntyre said. "It doesn't mean that we are going to borrow that sum, and we might as well pass it." The motion carried.

APPEAL ALLOWED IN DIXON ACTION

Court Directs That Conveyance Of Real Estate Be Set Aside

An appeal by Mrs. Albert E. Dixon against the judgment of Mr. Justice Hogg in dismissing her action against John R. Walsh and Germaine Walsh tried here in July, 1936, has been allowed by the Appeal Court at Osgoode Hall. The court has directed that a conveyance of Mr. Walsh's real estate to his wife be set aside.

Mrs. Dixon sued as a creditor upon a judgment of $2,841 which she recovered against Mr. Walsh as the amount due on a mortgage given by Mr. Walsh to her. She claimed Mr. Walsh had conveyed to his wife some three farms and a Peterborough house in order to avoid paying Mrs. Dixon and that the conveyance was fraudulent and void.

The Court of Appeal consisted of Chief Justice Rowell, Mr. Justice Middleton and Mr. Justice MacDonnell. Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., acted for Mrs. Dixon and J. R. Corkery was counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Walsh.

Pet Canary Found Drunk In Its Cage

The pet canary belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Green, Gilmour street, has recovered from its hangover and is once again singing spiritedly but its owners are wondering who led the innocent little bird astray by pouring a couple of fingers of rye whiskey into its water trough the other night.

The evil deed was apparently done by one of the guests at a little party which was in progress. Drinking deeply, the fine feathered creature hopped to the top roost and lettered perilously while whistling a disjointed song. Swaying further and further, it finally gave up the difficult balancing feat and did a nose dive for the cage floor. There it remained—out cold.

The owners discovered the cause of the phenomenon and removed the temptation for a continuation of the binge should the bird awake. A dark cloth was swathed about the cage and, the next morning, the bird had regained its equilibrium.

The Rambling REPORTERS

THE RED HERRING.

He was a tiny boy, loitering far from home on the sunny side of the street. His wrathful parent, patrolling the street in search of the little stray, said: "What are you doing away up here?" Turning, the little boy pointed to two larger boys disappearing around the corner. "Those two boys were running after me and hitting me", he declared. All of which might have sounded all right to the parent, but was simply astounding to a watcher who had seen the two lads pass innocently by while the child was strolling in the other direction. The interesting part of the affair was the fact that the father didn't believe the child and refused to have his wrath deflected from its proper focus.—C.L.M.

SUGGEST COVERING OUTDOOR MARKET; ABOLISH ALL TOLLS

Property Committee Will Consider Resolution Sponsored By Ald. Wilson

FEDERAL BUILDING

A proposal for the improvement of Peterborough's market, widely known throughout the neighboring counties for the quality and quantity of its weekly trade, was made to the council by Alderman Wilson Monday night. He suggested in a resolution which was seconded by Alderman Stocker that the property committee consider an investment of covering the outdoor market, and if this general idea receives the approval of the committee that Alderman McIntyre, chairman, and City Engineer Parsons visit the markets in Toronto, Hamilton and London for suggestions that may be incorported in any changes which may be undertaken here.

Alderman Wilson also recommended that the committee consider the question of doing away with the toll system and making the market free. The motion was approved by the council and passed on to the property committee. Ald. Wilson said that the accomodation at the market had been outgrown as shown by recent crowds which required three or four policemen to regulate movement, and his proposal is a rather broad instruction directing the committee to consider the need of increased facilities for the selling and buying public.

J. J. Duffus Letter

Business of the federal government through the channels of both the post office and customs house had improved with the times to such an extent that the need of a new public building combining these services was being increasingly felt, J. J. Duffus, M.P., observed in a letter to the council. He suggested that he would be glad to consult with any committee to talk over this perennial project, and accompany a deputation to Ottawa if the council so desired. The policy of the government was not to approve new buildings in places where the existing accommodation was adequate, but Peterborough's experience during the last year again emphasized the need of more space and convenience for the postal and customs service although both their buildings were in good repair. Mr. Duffus also wrote that he would welcome any suggestion from the council in which he could assist to obtain more employment such as the Crescent street improvement that is now be-in carried on.

London botanists report that there are now 5,000 known species of orchids.

FATHER APPEALS FOR AID TO HELP CRIPPLED GIRL

GOES TO CITY COUNCIL

Joseph Chase, Park street, appealed to the council Monday night for some help from the city for medical care of his twelve-year-old daughter who is suffering from curvature of the spine.

"She was examined by Dr. Robertson at the Rotary Club clinic," Mr. Chase said, "We can't expect the Rotary Club to have the funds enough for all the cases that were presented, but we thought the council might be able to do something to have her go to the Sick Children's Hospital for treatment. Dr. Robertson told my wife that it would take about nine months."

Alderman Dutton said he understood Dr. Moir and the Rotary Club were co-operating in these children's cases as much as possible, and advised that Mr. Chase's request be referred to the finance committee.

"This case has been considered on more than one occasion," Ald. Dutton said. "I believe certain suggestions were made to the parents along the line of certain things that might be done by the mother, including some light exercises. My impression is that they were not followed out as faithfully as they might have been."

"This matter will not be lost sight of," Mayor Macdonald said, and Mr. Chase said that a recommended exercise of hanging by the hands from a bar set across a door frame had been too painful for his daughter, and it was not continued.

Ald. Gordon called out—"Chase come up and see me in the morning," and made a memorandum of the case.

HASTINGS, Jan. 12—On Tuesday morning, January 5 a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at 9 o'clock at the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, Hastings, by the Rev. Father Costello when Helen Elizabeth (Nellie) second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson of Percy township became the bride of Lawrence Doherty, second son of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Doherty of Asphodel.

The bride looked lovely, attired in a graceful frock of rust crepe, trimmed with gold braid. She was attended by her sister, Madeline who wore green with black trimmings and accessories to match. The groom was supported by his brother, Phillip of Ottawa.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where a wedding repast was served to the immediate relatives. The table was daintily arranged and centered with the bride's cake and was most effective with its pink and white streamers. Two girl friends of the bride, Misses Alice and Jessie Whitred were waitresses and were assisted in the serving by Mrs. Ethel Lamey and Mrs. Ben Gibson.

Later the happy couple left for a short honeymoon, the bride wearing a brown coat and hat and accessories in brown. Mr. and Mrs. Doherty will reside at Westwood.

MINOR LEAGUES PLAN BIG YEAR

President Of Pro. Association Predicts Fine Season Ahead In Diamond Sport

26 LEAGUES GOING

By W. G. BRAMHAM
President, National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 12—(AP)—At this time of the year when reflection and anticipations are in order, it is customary to take stock of the season just behind us and to visualize as best we may, that which is down the highway ahead. We are inclined, as a rule, to see the future through rose-colored glasses, for a radiant picture of what is to come is most desirable, and it is a trait of human nature to forecast things as we would like them to occur.

I have no desire to be accused of issuing a stereotyped statement in behalf of the minor leagues of baseball, but as I glance at the records written on the pages of 1936, it is impossible to ignore the fact that our leagues and clubs have enjoyed a splendid season. Nor is there anything in the offing to indicate that 1937 will not be as artistically and financially successful as its predecessor, if not more so.

26 Leagues Going

I am, therefore, obliged to fall back, in a measure, to the recipe of former years and openly state that we of the minors are looking to 1937 without apprehension for the welfare of baseball.

During the 1936 season we had 26 leagues in operation. Taking in 31 states of the Union and three provinces in Canada. Every league which answered to the roll call at the start of the schedule was present at the adjournment of the season. We cannot ask for more than that, and it is my pleasure again to report that such stability has been the rule, rather than the exception, for the past several years.

St. George's Victors In Senior Church Tilt

St. George's Seniors handed George Street their second straight loss by a 3-2 score in a Church League fixture featured by injuries and penalties last night. The United suffered most losing their captain, Lloyd Parnall, early with an injured knee, George Street were still leading 2-0 as they opened the third Edwards and Heard having scored. R. Pearson got one back for the other side. A small riot started during the third heat with Referee McFadden handing out two penalties to each side, Tice getting a match penalty, Sproat a major and Bradley and Edwards minors. With George Street short-handed, Gibson tied it up and with two minutes left to go, R. Pearson sank the winning counter on Adamson's neat pass. Both goalies were good with Rennie shining for the losers and the pair, Houghton and McBride, effective for St. George's but crude. Many feminine rooters cheered St. George's on to their first victory in two years. The teams:

St. George's — Goal, I. Pearson; defence, Houghton, McBride; centre, Adamson; wings, Gibson, R. Pearson; alternates, Hele, Stevens, Tice.

George Street — Goal, Townsend; defence, Rennie, Heard; centre, L. Parnall; wings, Sproat, Weir; alternates, Edwards, Akers, R. Parnall, Henderson.

Referee—H. McFadden.

MARK ST. BANTAMS DEFEAT ST. JOHN'S

East City Squad Wins 8 To 0 Over Young, Inexperienced Outfit

A young, inexperienced St. John's Bantam team could not cope with the husky, classy Mark Street crew in their Church Puck Loop tilt at All Saints' Monday night, and the East City squad took an 8-0 win. The strenge defenec of Scriver and Eason again made the difference, the latter getting five goals. Scriver, R. Moore and Ralph got the others. Thompson, the lone player from last year's St. John's champions, shone for the Anglicans, with Matthews, Crowter and D. Moore working hard. The teams:

Mark Street — Goal, Robinson; defence, D. Eason, Scriver; centre, Mackey; wings, Agnew, R. Moore; alternates, C. Eason, Cullen, Curtis, Smith, Ralph.

St. John's.—Goal, Matthews; defence, Thompson, Land; centre, Crowter; wings, D. Moore, Cranford; alternates, Clark, J. Moore, W. Moore, Farrow, Frank, Batten.

Referee—H. Fisher.

Trinity Juveniles Lost To St. John's

St. John's Juvenile took a 3-1 triumph over Trinity in a lively Church Hockey League contest last evening at All Saints' rink. McBain gave the best goal-minding performance of the season, being peppered hard all through but stopping many hot ones. Each of the starting Anglicans' forwards got a goal and J. Horton scored for the Trinity team. Turner in the winners' cage also went good. St. John's, mostly last year's bantam champions, have a speedy juvenile squad but lack team-play. The teams:

Trinity.—Goal, McBain; defence, J. Horton, Patterson; centre, R. Horton; wings, Deering, Smoke; alternates, Vallery, Stanley, Grose, Thompson.

Referee—R. Heard.

KING OF WINTER SPORTS

Ski-ing

By Charles Schaer

Sponsored By Peterborough Ski Club

14. Correct Ski Posture

Movements of the body in skiing can be analyzed into a number of definite and fundamental skiing positions, plus the transition from one to the other of these positions, smoothly and accurately.

Erect running position showing correct knee bend

The most important of these positions is the bent knee position, which is the very basis of the Swiss ski technique. It is the first letter of the skiing alphabet, and every skier who wishes to improve his or her technique is advised to study and digest the following brief explanations.

Stability, elasticity and the ability of the body to react with the demands made upon the muscles—these are the factors which decide whether the skier is holding his body in the correct position or not. Correct posture is the basis of every swing and turn and of good ski technique in general.

The bent knee position as illustrated above, is the best posture for the skier on the run.

It involves principally only knee and ankle action, the body being "sprung" at the knees. By altering the angle of the latter the weight of the body can be brought nearer to or farther from the area of support, while it is always possible to maintain a certain amount of elasticity. Stability is increased by lowering the centre of gravity—increasing the angle of the bent knees.

Brentford And Arsenal Match Headwork For 1-1 Draw

These soccer players certainly can use their heads in more ways than one. Here we see some splendid headwork in front of Brentford's goal. The game was played at Arsenal stadium between Arsenal and Brentford. It ended a 1-1 draw.

WRENCHED KNEE SHELVES PATRICK

Flashy Rangers Wingman Off For Ten Days After Maroon Tussle

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(CP)—A severely wrenched knee suffered in the game against New York Americans last Tuesday and aggravated in the match with Montreal Maroons Saturday night has put Lynn Patrick, flashy wingman of New York Rangers, on the shelf for at least 10 days, physicians said to-day.

The type of injury is particularly exasperating to the big, blonde son of General Manager Lester Patrick. Not only is it the first leg handicap he has suffered since jumping to the National Hockey League from Montreal Royals three years ago, but it is also the first time he has been unable to skate since turning pro and gliding about the frozen surface learning the fade-away shift of Frankie Boucher, the pivoting of Cecil Dillon and sharp-shooting of Butch Keeling.

Young Patrick was a crude skater when New York first got a look at him in Rangers' Broadway blue. He had had only one season with the Royals after coming east from Victoria, B.C., where he was unable to find ice to skate on during four years. Naturally he was awkward and to correct this fault Patrick skated at every opportunity, it is conservatively estimated that since signing his first pro contract he has spent upward of 500 hours skating in an effort to correct his lack of speed and poise.

His determination to reach the top as a skater and his ability to absorb the knowledge so willingly purveyed by his team mates, is due to pay 22-year-old Lynn good dividends. He is valued on the puckman market to-day at $15,000, according to Art Ross of Boston Bruins and is in a position to force Pop Patrick to pay a top-hand salary next season.

The clever Toronto boxer, Sammy Luftspring, who recently turned pro, defeated Frankie Genovese, also of Toronto, by a technical knockout in a professional bout in Toronto. Luftspring, who has fought five pro fights and won all of them, is now looking toward bigger money bouts. Rumors have it that Sammy would like to meet Gordon Wallace of Vancouver, for the Canadian welterweight title. Luftspring is seen in a typical fighting pose.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

(C.J.P.)

JANUARY SHOULD go out in a blaze of glory for Peterborough lovers of winter sports. On account of the big three-day Winter Carnival being staged here, it includes ski jumping and stunting, dancing, dog derby, figure skating, brass bands, parades and general whoop-de-whoop! And all we ask is a bunch of snow for that big weekend. With an energetic Sports Committee working hard on plans, aided by the Ski Club, the local service clubs, the Council, Chamber of Commerce and others—well, all we have to say is Huntsville had better look to its laurels as the leading Ontario centre for winter sports! This one here should go over with a bang.

WE LIKE this bit from the Kitchener Record column "Hoo Kares," written anonymously: "The genuine columnist is getting shoved out of position these days. When there is a tennis racket on Bill Tilden writes a column. Earl Sande writes a column about the bang-tails. Jack Dempsey writes a column about the bang noses. Dr. Dafoe writes a column about the quints. This sort of thing is stirring up class hatred between legitimate columnists and those who ought to have more sense. But if you are not interested in boxing and you see Dempsey's name at the head of the column you don't read it. If you are not interested in horses and you see a jockey's name on top of the column you sigh and pass it by. This goes for these and those and them.

* * * * * * *

"BUT WHEN you see a column headed by a guy you think doesn't know anything about anything then you read it so that you can say to yourself what does that punk know about it anyway. But you read it just the same. Sports editors are not hard-boiled because they want to be. They are drove to it. One time a frail told a well-known sports writer she loved him; and before he thought what he was saying he told her: 'Okay, go on out there and show me and I'll give you a good writeup tomorrow!'" It strikes us that Mister H. Kares is an understanding soul.

THREE C.G.E. Shop Hockey League tilts are listed for tonight at the Brock. Machine Shop plays Induction Motors at seven, Industrial Control tangles with Wire Dept. at eight, and Fractional Motors meet the Office at nine. Wednesday night sees Switchgear play Transportation at nine. This tussle tomorrow is preceded by two Junior City League opening games, Canucks and All Saints clashing at seven, and Monarchs meeting St. Peter's at eight.

* * * * * * *

OVER 300 fans saw three rousing Senior City Hockey League games last p.m. at the Brock. The ice was good, the action fast and the checking rather robust. Westclox took a 6-2 nod over Mayfairs but it was closer than it sounds; Millbrook rallied spectacularly in the third heat to get a 2-2 draw with Outboard Marines; and Lakefield turned in a battling third-frame drive to notch a 3-1 win over Bewdley. These teams are dishing up mighty entertaining hockey and the fans are going for it. These Blood and Thunder Loop tussles are listed for the Brock on Thursday: Outboard Marines vs. Mayfairs at seven, Bewdley vs. Westclox at eight, and Millbrook vs. Lakefield at nine.

* * * * * * *

FOUR CHURCH League puck games were run off at All Saints' rink last gloaming. Mark St. Bantams took an 8-0 swish over St. John's; St. Paul's done All Saints' Juveniles dirt by a 5-2 score; Trinity Juveniles bowed to St. John's, 3 to 1; and St. George's Seniors yanked o' a 3-2 win from George St. The loop executive may take some action over the young donnybrook staged in the senior struggle. By the way, the league can now oblige St. Luke's and St. Andrew's if they want to enter the juvenile section as none of the present seven teams has played more than twice, and it can be arranged easily. Tonight at seven, George St. plays All Saints Bantams; while tomorrow sees Knox Juveniles meeting Mark St. at seven.

WE CAN'T turn our back on those goldarned Colts a minute but they up and lose! We decided to stay for the City Loop contests here last eve and pass up the Colts' win in Belleville—so what happens but the Quinte kids give our lads a 4-3 licking. And reports are that Belleville earned the victory all the way. They outplayed the locals and we are told that toward the end of the tilt the young Petes' heads were getting back to normal size. That's something, at least! Don Crowe, we are told, was the only Peterborough player that really looked good last night. Another blow to our gang was a torn ligament in Bun Kingdon's shoulder—and he may be out for awhile. Someone stole his shoulder pads before the game.

* * * * * * *

WHAT WAS wrong with the Colts? Well, they didn't backcheck worth a hoot, they drew unnecessary penalties, and they figured they only had to go through the motions to beat Belleville. They lost and now they have a tough scrap in Tweed tomorrow against a bolstered squad playing on its own ice. We are quite confident our Colts will cop group honors again but they'll have to play hockey. The loss in Belleville should do 'em a lot of good. But it looks like we'll have to attend these out-of-town games in future ourself so that there'll be no more nonsense! The refereeing was all right last night but he used a whistle instead of a bell and it couldn't be heard half the time in the uproar. We prefer a bell. The Colts practise tonight at six and the intermediate Petes at seven.

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

So far we have only one local entry for our Neill Trophy bonspiel to be held on Thursday morning.

W. G. Morrow, umpire for this district, postponed the playing of the Ontario Tankard, on account of ice conditions.

Our representatives left for Lindsay this morning to play in the District Cup competition.

Our own opinion is that if it is played at all, it will be on very heavy ice. . . . Just what is all the rush to play such important matches under unfavorable circumstances is rather hard to figure out.

We have one rink, skipped by T. McArthur, entered in the Midland Bonspiel beginning to-day.

We did get through with our schedule games last night. . . . The outside ices were in fair condition, but the centre ices got very heavy before the games were over. . . . We doubt if the ice will be fit to curl on to-night.

St. Paul's Cop Nod Over All Saints' 5-2

St. Paul's Juveniles of the Church League took a 5-2 nod over All Saints last night, having an edge all the way. A full turnout of the Presbyterians and hard checking throughout held All Saints at bay. Though not a high-scoring team, the winners shoved five goals in, Macknea and Morrow tallying twice each and J. McMillan the other one. A soft shot by Webb which McBride muffed and a nice effort by Wade, who shone all through, accounted for the losers' goals. Ascott and King were best for the winners. The victors are on top of the heap now, while All Saints are in the cellar. The teams:

All Saints.—Goal, Lacey; defence, Todd, Ellis; centre, Wade; wings, Buchanan, Hart; alternates, Kempt, Webb, Roberts.

St. Paul's.—Goal, McBride; defence, Ascott, J. McMillan; centre, T. McMillan; wings, Morrow, Easton; alternates, Moorhead, Macknes, King, Perks, Tarkington, Taylor.

ROTARIANS HEAR ABOUT HOLY LAND

Rev. Father Galvin Addresses Campbellford Club On Palestine Trip

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD Jan. 12.—The Town Council were the guests of the Rotary Club on Monday, when the Rev. Father Galvin of Grafton, gave an interesting address on the itinerary of his trip to the Hold Land which he made last summer.

Father Galvin told of many interesting if not altogether pleasant features of his trip through Palestine which was at that time suffering from a general strike by the Arabs in protest to the rapid immigration of the Jews. The activity of the Zionist organization had increased their number in 16 years from 16,000 to now nearly 400,000, much to the alarm of the Arabs, who did not feel that a country comprising from nine to ten thousand square miles was large enough to accommodate such an increase in population despite the fact that the Jews had introduced many arts and sciences into the country and paid in most cases very fancy prices for their new homes.

A Strike Organized.

The Arabs first of all made protest to the British government and when nothing was done the strike was organized.

The speaker told of how when he arrived in Jerusalem with the strike at its height he was compelled to hire an Arab to help him transport his luggage to Cassanova and was amazed at the strength and dexterity with which one man of slight stature was able to carry on his back not only the speaker's steamer trunk but a small club bag and a case of books as well, weighing in all about 180 lbs. He expressed regret that he was unable to visit the temple of Solomon, which was closed during the strike and heavily guarded for fear that damage might be done to it. Many expert linguists were found among the Arabs. Jerusalem had a population of 125,000 people, one half of which lived within the city walls and must heed the sound of curfew which rings every evening at seven o'clock.

For centuries the Arabs of this strife torn country had been merciful to the Christian crusaders but, the speaker suggested that were they to gain complete control of the country they would no doubt persecute them in a manner that would rival the days of King Richard.

Rev. Harold B. Neale expressed he thanks of the club to the speaker. Other guests included Rev. Father Macauley, who introduced the speaker, and Messrs. J. D. Mills and Geo. Ironside.

BOTH LACK FINISH

Starr And Clarke Turn In Smart Performance With Harding Going Well In Goal

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 12.—(CP.)—Belleville Junior "Redmen" went into the lead of their group here last night when they handed Buckland's smart Peterborough squad a 4-3 defeat and remained undefeated in the group schedule.

Neither team displayed championship form as they have lacked practice to develop their team work and condition, but after the first period it was a typical junior tussle with the boys being all out at the end of the pastime.

The locals are breaking in an entirely new team with Tompkins the spearhead of the attack and he was easily the best player on the ice, accounting for two goals and having an assist on another. His stick-handling had the losers bewildered and he could have been more effective had he passed the rubber at certain times. McCreary and Derry made a hefty defence in front of Sharp, who tended a smart game of goal for the winners, robbing the Peterborough crew on numerous occasions.

For Peterborough, Eddie Starr, catcher for the C.O.B.L. squad, stood out in his centre ice play, while Clarke on the defence was a close second. Harding was beaten cleanly on all four goals and he saved a number of tough ones.

Only Four Penalties.

The game was comparatively clean, there being four penalties, with Peterborough drawing three of them. There were no penalty shots. The first period was scoreless and Belleville opening the scoring midway through the second frame when Cain scored on a pass from Tompkins and Storms made it 2-0 for the locals two minutes later, when he went the length of the ice to tally.

Belleville scored early in the third period, Tompkins being the marksman with Morgan and Cain assisting and Peterborough countered for the first time when Clarke scored on a pass from White. When well inside Peterborough drew within one of tying the score when Clarke tallied, unassisted, but Tompkins scored the prettiest goal of the night on a solo dash that had Harding beat all the way. The Petes threw caution to the wind and stormed Sharpe and were rewarded when Heale took a pass-out from Starr to tally. Belleville protected their slim lead until the final bell.

MILLBROOK TIES WITH MARINES

Two Senior City Hockey League Squads Battle To Thrilling 2-2 Draw

Millbrook and the Outboard Marines battled to a 2-2 tie in their Senior City Hockey League fixture before some 300 fans last night at the Brock St. rink. As the teams were late in starting, no overtime was played, each squad taking one point for the draw. It was a fast clean game throughout with the Millbrook men staging a thrilling third-period rally to sew it up after the Marines collected two counters in the first and looked to be safe with five minutes left to play.

The Outboard outfit had an edge on play in the first frame with nice passing and accurate shooting in close. Play was fairly even and speedy all through the second, both goalies booting out some hot stabs. In the third, the Millbrook crew ganged up and made it hot all the time, finally netting the tying markers near the close. There were no outstanding stars on the Marines' team, all working hard, with the defence quite effective most of the way and the forwards passing and rushing neatly. With the goalie, the first front line and Wainman and Sloan looked best.

Gets First Goal

Red Dallin tallied the first marker in the initial inning on a nice lone effort. The Marines took a 2-0 lead shortly when Howe blasted one by the net-guardian in the same stanza. There was no score in the second but plenty of close ones at either end. With hardly five minutes to go, Sloan took Spencely's pass to net a neat one, and then Sloan tied it up on Wainman's assist just before the last bell. With one of the Marines in dry dock at the end, the Millbrook boys were swarming around their rivals' cage and doing everything but sinking the winning tally. The teams:

Millbrook: Goal, Ferguson; defence, White and Spencely; centre, McCarthy; wings, Cathcart and Edmunds; alternates, Parnall, Gray, Wainman, Skitch and Sloan.

DETROIT'S WINGS HOLD MONOPOLY ON SCORING HONORS

TEAM, TWO-POINT EDGE

MONTREAL, Jan. 12—(C.P.).—Detroit Red Wings just about take over a monopoly on National Hockey League honors for the week that ended last night.

Not only did the champions step into sole possession of first place in their division, but the official league-scoring statistics shows the Wings' Larry Aurie still out in front of the individual point-getters with 23, and his linemate Marty Barry just a point behind in second place.

More than that, Aurie is the league's top goal-getter with 13 scores to his credit, and Barry is the high-ranking man in assists, having helped out on 16 goals. And to top it off the Detroit team is tops in game points with 30, two up on the leading Montreal Canadiens of the Canadian group.

In fact there's nothing left to the other teams but penalty "honors," which go to Allan Shields of the New York Americans, who has spent 63 minutes in the penalty box.

In scoring points, Johnny Gagnon of Canadiens and "Sweeney" Schriner of Amerks are in a tie for third place with 21. Gagnon's 12-goal score ties him for second in this division, with Herb Lewis third man of the high-scoring Detroit trio.

LAKEFIELD WINS OVER BEWDLEY

Last Frame In Exciting Senior City League Tussle Gives Northerners 3-1 Edge

Rallying strongly in the third period of their Senior City Hockey League game at the Brock Street rink last night before a good crowd, the Lakefield outfit took a 3-1 win over Bewdley. The Northerners were trailing 1-0 going into the final heat and turned it on strong to fairly pepper the rival goalie and bang in three counters to cinch the contest. It was a fast, fairly clean tilt all through with some good hockey dished up.

There was little to choose between the teams the first two heats. Only one goal was scored in that time, Farr tallying on a solo attempt in the middle canto. But all through the third, Lakefield pressed hard. Sloan turned in a sparkling performance in the losers' cage but couldn't hold them all out. Lennox scored first on Whitton's assist, and then Deeth bulged the hemp from close quarters. Lennox came back to 4ally again from point-blank range as the Whiteshirts swarmed around the net as if they were two goals down.

THE GOALIES GOOD

Aside from the goalies there were no particular stars. Both front Lakefield lines looked good, the veteran Buster Whitton also shining on the offence. The defence looked strong most of the way. Walker, Sloan and Farr were the pick of the losers but all of them worked hard. It was that last-period desperate continuous ganging attack by Lakefield that turned the tide in a smart puck fixture. The teams:

Lakefield: Goal, Junkin; defence, Sabatino and Whitton; centre, Chittick; wings, Charlton and Jewell; alternates, Stenner, Lennox, Pearson, Deeth and Chappell.

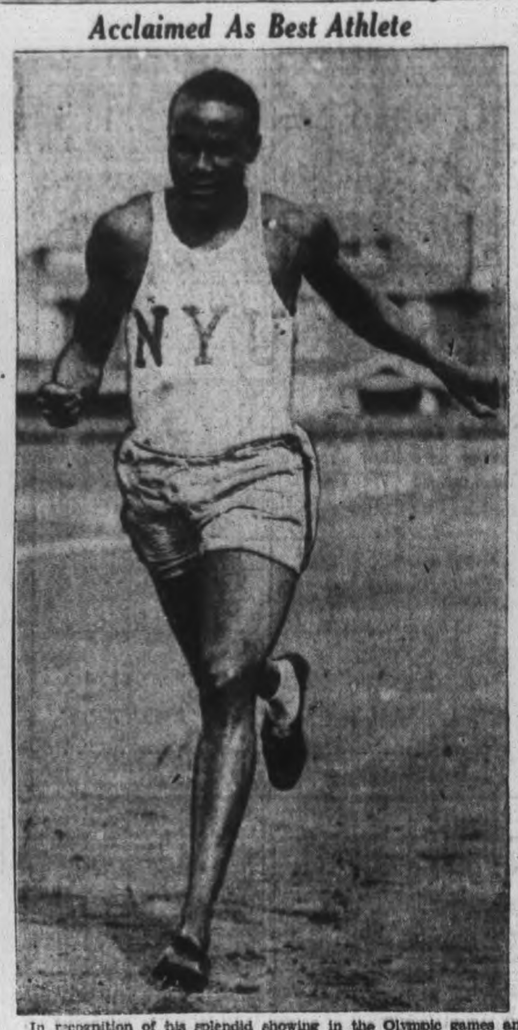
Acclaimed As Best Athlete



In recognition of his splendid showing in the Olympic games and other athletic feats throughout the year, Dr. Phil Edwards of Montreal was awarded the Lou Marsh Memorial Trophy, emblematic of his selection as the greatest athlete in Canada for the year. Dr. Edwards also won both the Norton H. Crow trophy, awarded by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, and the highest vote of sports writers throughout Canada. After ten years of campaigning on tracks in Canada, United States and Europe, Dr. Edwards is giving up the track for medicine. He is now an interne in Royal Victoria hospital, Montreal. The 28-year-old doctor was born in Georgetown, British Guiana, came to Canada and studied medicine at McGill university. He expects to return to British Guiana to practice medicine. In this picture he is running under the colors of N.Y. university, which he once represented.

Whitby Red Wings Take Cobourg 9 To 2

COBOURG, Jan. 12—(C.P.).—Whitby Red Wing defeated Cobourg 9 to 2 in an O.H.A. Intermediate B game played here last night. Cobourg led at the end of the first period, 1 to 0. Whitby netted three more in the second period to make it 3 to 1. In the last period Whitby ran in six goals and Cobourg one.

KETCHELL LASTS ONLY TWO ROUNDS WITH JOE LOUIS

ONLY 5,000 OUT

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Joe Louis of Detroit, knocked out Stanley Ketchell, of Bloomfield, N. J., in the second round of a scheduled four-round fight last night. Louis weighed 209½, and Ketchell 216.

The Brown Bomber nailed Ketchell just 31½ seconds after the second round opened.

The knockout blow was a one-foot left jab to the chin, delivered with such speed and force that the fans could hardly follow it. It was the only real punch of the fight.

Louis, greeted by a tremendous cheer from the crowd, well over 5,000 made no real effort to hit Ketchell in the opener.

The fight began slowly with Louis stepping calmly from his corner while Ketchell, apparently the victim of a bad case of fright, rushed three-quarters of the way across the ring to meet him.

Louis toyed with the Bloomfield fighter throughout the first round and Ketchell made no attempt to strike him.

After the second opened in the same fashion, Louis pushed Ketchell against the ropes and then whipped over the short, powerful jab. Ketchell struck the canvas with a thud that echoed throughout the jammed building and was out cold.

DETROIT-MONTREAL TUSSLE TONIGHT TO BE HIGHLIGHT

Two Ace Front Lines Likely To Be Pitted In Great Battle

AMERKS MEET MAROONS

There should be a pretty hockey picture in Montreal tonight if the coaches cooperate and toss the star lines of Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Canadiens on the ice to oppose each other.

Imagine Larry Aurie, Marty Barry and Herb Lewis, the world champions' great line, in a passing duel with the Habitant veterans, Howie Morenz, Aurel Joliat and Johnny Gagnon. The prospect should fill the Forum as it hasn't been filled before this season.

With 65 points the Aurie-Lewis-Barry trio are leading the league's scoring lines and you will get little argument from anyone that they are not the best attacking division in the game at the moment.

But the Canadien oldsters have compiled a record that is truly unusual and many consider their backchecking makes them more valuable than the Red Wing line. Morens, Joliat and Gagnon have 53 points, the same as Sweeney Schriner, Lorne Carr and Art Chapman of New York Americans.

Both Outfits Leaders.

If the possibility of the great lines putting their best display isn't enough to draw Montrealers to the contest in hordes there is the added attraction that the teams are current leaders of the National Hockey League's two divisions and have provided smart games in their three meetings this season.

The happy Habitants are a game up on Wings, each team has won a home game besides a Habitant win in Detroit. Neither is so far ahead in the standings that they won't be trying every minute for two more points.

Montreal Maroons play Americans at New York and Chicago Black Hawks meet Bruins at Boston in the other games tonight. None of the contests can make a change in the standings but each is important to the teams involved. A win for Maroons while Canadiens lost would put Tommy Gorman's team within two points of Habitants and Detroit can take advantage of New York Rangers' layoff to go four points up on Lester Patrick's boys.

WESTCLOX WINS OVER MAYFAIRS

Clockmen Cop Second Straight In Senior City Puck Loop By 6-2 Score

Westclox handed Mayfairs a 6-2 setback last night before a good crowd at the Brock St. rink. It was the Clockmakers' second win in as many starts in the Senior City Hockey League, and the first reverse for the Cafe Kids. Play was lightning fast till the third frame when both teams began to slow up. Numerous penalties marked this first tilt of the night, both teams checking hard and being checked up by the referee.

The East City gang got a goal in the close of the first inning and had a 2-1 edge in the second. They outscored the Mayfairs 3-1 in the last heat but two of their goals came on breakaways as the losers ganged up desperately in an attempt to whittle down the lead and sew it up. The fans made plenty of noise and got a lot of thrills and laughs out of this fracas. Tharby Parsons, Williams and Field looked best for the winners, with Calladine and Whatley flashing nice hockey in spots. Vitarelli, Hill and Courneyea stood out for the losers and Mowry worked hard.

How They Scored

Calladine got the first goal on Parsons' pass. In the second, Calladine tallied alone, and then Hill scored on assists from Gardner and Vitarelli. Field scored in a scramble after Williams took the disc in close. In the third, Vitarelli notched a nice one on Hill's assist and Parsons tallied unaided. Both Field and Calladine broke away to go in close and fool the goalie. The teams:

Mayfairs: Goal, Currie; defence, Gardner and Vitarelli; centre, Courneyea; wings, Hill and O'Leary; alternates, Mowry and Driscoll.

Westclox: Goal, Tharby; defence, Parsons and Whatley; centre, Williams; wings, Field and Jay; alternates, Calladine, Padgett, Dinesen, Thirnbeck and Stante.

Referee, Herb Payne.

Close Call For Wally Hammond When Antipodean Fielder Traps Him

England won the first two test matches of the current series against Australia without much trouble, but rain washed out the wicket for the third meeting and gave Aussie batsmen a chance to hammer away at the M.C.C. bowling. Prior to start of the international series the English side played a representative New South Wales eleven, and here are the teams in action. Wally Hammond, great Gloucester batsman, playing for England, has a narrow escape in the slips, the cluster of tense fielders under the ball indicating how close Hammond was to elimination. He starred throughout the Test series.

FRANCE ALLOWED INSPECT MOROCCO

Spanish Rebels Hope Thus To Allay Fears Of Reported German Invasion

PARIS, Jan. 12 (AP)—The French foreign office announced today the insurgent Spanish administration of Spanish Morocco had authorized French officials to visit any part of the territory and make whatever investigations of reported German troop infiltrations are considered necessary.

As a renewed indication of the lessening of international tension over the alleged increase of German influence, the Quai D'Orsay said J. Beigbeder Yatienza, the insurgent high commissioner, had granted permission for the tour of inspection to the French military attache at Tangier.

The authorization followed French protests charging illegal penetration of German troops and commercial advisers in the Spanish zone. France had demanded guarantees no German troops would be allowed to land in the territory and no foreign fortifications built.

UNIVERSITY ANSWERS

Think Haile Selassie Champion Steer at Chicago Show.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 12.—(CP).—Among the answers of Purdue University students to an education department questionnaire were:

"Haile Selassie was the grand champion Angus steer at the Chicago livestock show."

Shirley Temple is a child movie star."

That last one? Ninety per cent scores it correctly, but not a single student identified Maxim Gorky.

8 NAVAL WORKERS ARRESTED.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP).—Eight men were dismissed from the naval dockyard at Devonport to-day following discovery of "certain documents" in their possession. The action resulted after an investigation of more than 20 workers suspected in sabotage of warships and leakage of confidential information.

ALBERTA MEMBERS IN DECISIVE HUDDLE ON SOCIAL CREDIT

Aberhart Hints He Expects 11-Point Plan Will Be Adopted

NO DISTINCTIVE MONEY

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

EDMONTON, Jan. 12—(C.P.). — Fifty members of the Alberta Legislature sat down in the Cabinet Council room here Monday to decide whether a Social Credit plan for the province should be put into effect at the Legislature session to open February 25.

The 11-point plan, drafted by a Cabinet committee with John Hargrave, leader of the United Kingdom Social Credit party as technical adviser, will go before the caucus of the Social Credit members today or to-morrow.

Premier William Aberhart evidently thinks it will pass because he told the Edmonton Prophetic Bible Conference last night "we have at last come to the place where we propose to take our first, definite step toward the establishment of Social Credit principles."

At the same time, the Premier said, "each constituency must assume its full share of responsibility. I do not know what the constituencies will do that have Liberals, Conservatives or Independents, as representatives. As a rule, these politicians know nothing about Social Credit. It is good there are only one or two constituencies like this, so probably other arrangements can be made."

Judging by another statement made by the Premier, it will not be part of the plan to issue distinctive Alberta money.

"Money in modern times," he said, "is in reality a commodity itself. It is bought and sold at a varying price. It earns a return called interest. It is true that it is also used for the exchange of goods and services but that is only after it has been secured as a debt from the money monopolists.

Chained By Money Monopolists.

"May I impress upon you," he said, that we shall never get free from economic slavery if we persist in using the tools of the money monopolist which gives him a claim not on gold but on our goods and services. It is surely evident to everyone that as long as there is a private moncpoly or purchasing power, our economic liberty is wholly dependent upon the good will of the money moncpolist."

In his speech before the Bible Conference, Premier Aberhart also criticized the Federal government for its avowed intention of reducing relief grants after March 31, 1936, while unemployment figures were on the increase.

"I submit it is high time the Dominion government should fairly face the real issues as they are in the west and, I believe, in the east as well," he said.

Figures showed there were 13,865 more on relief in November, 1936, than November, 1935, Mr. Aberhart said. The increase of November, 1936 over October, 1936, was 5,491.

Insurance and other financial institutions, Mr. Aberhart said, had been attacking him and his government. "I do not know how it affects you, but the longer this persecution goes on the nearer the greater majority of our people are getting to the conviction that insurance companies, trust companies, mortgage companies and others actually constitute a menace to peace, order and good government and that they are determined to crush our people at all costs."

SMALL DAMAGE TO FALL WHEAT

Unlikely To Be Affected As Long As Water Does Not Lie On Crop

TORONTO, Jan. 12 — (C.P.). — No general damage has been done Ontario Fall wheat by recent unseasonable weather, said R. S. Duncan, Director of Ontario Agricultural Representatives to-day. His opinion was based on a scanning of crop reports dated Saturday reaching him to-day from the representatives.

"The wheat will not be affected as long as the water is not lying on the land," he said. "A repetition of thawing and freezing over an extended time might bring smothering but there is no sign of that yet."

"Recent weather has been unprecedented," he said. "We never expected the ground to be free of snow in January. Generally a thaw in this month is preceded by well-frozen ground."

Mr. Duncan said that "smothering" of wheat might result in low-lying ground where the water has no chance to get away. For the majority of farmers, however, the rains have the moisture usually given by snow.

"Fall wheat appears to be in good condition," said the Halton report. "Mild weather has favored the Fall wheat so far," the Welland County report says. These quotations are typical of the reports which mention the wheat situation.

YOUNG ESKIMO REAL ARTIST

WILL EXHIBIT WORKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (CP)—Far up in the frigid reaches of Alaska, Twok, a 25-year-old Eskimo, has turned from the usual native occupations of fishing and hunting to become the only professional artist in the Arctic Circle, Rockwell Kent, illustrator and explorer, made known in New York today.

Samples of the untutored Eskimo's work have been sent to Kent who journeyed extensively in Greenland, Labrador and Alaska. He described Twok as "unique, not only in that he is probably the only professional artist of the far north, but in that his lively range of experience and physical handicaps have made him a ranking artist, epic in his sense of perception and remarkable in his draughtsmanship."

The physical handicaps to which Kent referred, provide the background for what the illustrator calls "an original, artistic talent, arising spontaneously, without suggestion or nurture, to meet the emotional and practical needs of an individual."

The Arctic artist's Christianized Alaskan name is George Aden Ahgupuk. But to those in the tiny settlement in the interior of northwestern Alaska he is Twok.

Lives 200 Miles North of Nome

Kent "discovered" Twok when he visited Noorvik, a village about 200 miles north of Nome on the Kobuk River and about 50 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Twok confessed he was self taught and that he had begun drawing in his earliest childhood. In his early 'teens he suffered an accident that left him crippled, and, with his widowed mother and a 12-year brother to support, he turned to painting and drawing for a living.

He perfected a process of using reindeer and sealskin parchment for his canvases. Before long his drawings of everyday Eskimo activities attracted wide attention among the natives and in the end he acquired a patron in Mrs. Oliver Weaver, wife of a Nome utilities executive, who aided him by the circulation and sale of his works.

Kent said Twok's works will be exhibited at the 1937 showings of the American Artists Group, Inc.

Colored Sprinter Army Howard Dies

WINNIPEG, Jan. 12 (CP)—John Army Howard, 48, colored sprinter of 25 years ago, and a member of Canada's Olympic team at Stockholm, Sweden, in 1912, died here Saturday after a short illness.

Member of the Winnipeg North-End Athletic Club, Howard was the Dominion's outstanding sprinter from 1912 to 1915. His gangling frame and awkward style belied his great speed, but his tremendous stride carried him to the tape ahead of many of the nation's fastest athletes.

Howard served with the Canadian troops overseas during the Great War. He is survived by his widow and four daughters here.

Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY'S WARM EARS

"Come in here. Hop in here—quick!" grunted Mr. Twistytail.

"What's that you said about my ear?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Come in here before they get a dozen after us," whispered the pig.

"Dear me! Don't tell me one of my ears is frozen!" said the rabbit gentleman, twinkling his pink nose to make sure that it wasn't as cold as an ice box.

"I didn't say FROZEN, I said DOZEN," repeated the fat pig. "I said let's you and I go in here before they get a DOZEN after us."

"A dozen what—a dozen eggs?" asked Uncle Wiggily. Really, the cold seemed to have gotten his ears for he didn't listen well.

"Not a dozen eggs, a dozen Bad Chaps," whispered the pig gentleman as he pushed Uncle Wiggily toward the door of a little shop which they had reached on their way through the woods.

"A dozen Bad Chaps!" cried Uncle Wiggily. His ears were sharp enough now. They were also long and very cold. He wanted to warm them.

"Well perhaps not a dozen Bad Chaps now," admitted Mr. Twistytail. "But there may be a dozen soon if we don't hide in here. I see the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat coming. It only takes—let me see—how many more does it take to make a dozen."

"A dozen is twelve," said Mr. Longears.

"Right, you are," agreed Mr. Twistytail.

Three Bad Chaps

"There are now three Bad Chaps coming after us," went on the pig. "There's the Fox, that's one, there's the Wolf, that's two, and the Bob Cat, he's three. Three from twelve-"

"You mean three and nine make twelve," laughed Uncle Wiggily. And I think it was very brave of him to laugh when he knew the Bad Chaps were coming, don't you?"

"That's right," said the pig. "It will take nine more Bad Chaps added to the three we already have to make a dozen, or twelve. But if we hop in here quickly we may fool them."

"I'll hop, but you waddle, or twaddle as you must do, being so fat, Twisty!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily. But what place is this anyhow, where we are to take refuge from the Bad Chaps who, if they had nine more would be a dozen? What place is this?"

"Read the sign over the door," said the pig. Uncle Wiggily read:

"COLD EARS MADE WARM."

"Why, that's just what I want," he said. "My ears are so cold now they might well be two icicles on top of my head. I wonder how they can be made warm?"

"Let's go in this store and find out," said the pig. "By going in we can also fool the three Bad Chaps who may soon increase to a dozen or more."

They Go Into the Store

Quickly, before the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat could catch them Uncle Wiggily and Mr. Twistytail entered the Woodland store. As they opened the door a little bell tinkled. Out walked a cute little old cat lady.

"What is it, please?" she mewed.

"My ears are so cold," said Uncle Wiggily, seeing, through the window, the three Bad Chaps running past, never knowing he and the pig were safe inside.

"Well, you have very long ears to get cold," mewed the lady cat store keeper. "But I'll warm them for you. Walk this way, please."

But, all of a sudden, Uncle Wiggily said: "We can't ever walk that way."

"We must!" said Mr. Twistytail. "Come on!" And what happened next I'll tell you in the story after this. It will be about Uncle Wiggily and the cat's tail. But please don't ask the milk man to put pumpkins in the apple pie. He might not like to do it.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12—(C.P.)—Removal of marriage from ecclesiastical control was advocated by the Rev. Dr. Charles Francis Potter before the First Humanist Society of New York yesterday.

"To a large extent," he said, "marriage has already been dechurched by establishment of legality of civil marriage but the process of removing marriage from ecclesiastical control and influence needs to be carried to completion.

"There are many who have left their church because of its medieval pronouncements concerning marriage, divorce and birth control," he held.

LONDON, Jan. 12 — A plan is under consideration to increase the production of British-grown wheat. The proposal is to increase this maximum and thus permit a greater volume of home-grown wheat to rank for subsidy.

SCHOOL TAX LAW GIVES NEW RIGHT IN COURT DECISION

Holds Legislation Never Intended To Create Another Class Separate Supporters

ENQUIRY OBLIGATORY

TORONTO, Jan. 12—(C.P.).—Ontario government's legislation providing for a division of taxes paid by Ontario corporations for school purposes was not intended to create a new class of Separate School supporters but to give existing Separate School supporters a new right, Ontario Court of Appeal held in a decision rendered yesterday.

The judgment was in connection of findings of the court headed by Chief Justice N. W. Rowell in appeals against rulings of Judge Ian Macdonell of York County in 23 cases in which regularity of assessments of several companies was questioned.

The court ruled "Roman Catholic and Separate School supporters" as mentioned in a section of the Separate School Act permitting division of a company's school assessment in the ratio of the stock holdings of shareholders who are Roman Catholic Separate School supporters to its whole share capital, as Roman Catholics who were enrolled in some municipality of the province as Separate School supporters. The meaning of the phrase, however, was not limited to Roman Catholics residing within three miles of the Separate School.

Question of Corporations.

Dealing with a section of the statute providing for division of taxes of companies with head offices outside the province and more than half of whose stock is held outside Ontario, Chief Justice Rowell said:

"We are of the opinion that there may be corporations where by reason of the character of the business and the manner in which records are kept, the directors may be satisfied that they can ascertain which of their shareholders are Roman Catholics and which are not."

Regarding the corporations satisfied it is impossible to ascertain the make-up of their shareholders, the court held the statute imposed the obligation to make an inquiry and present a declaration after it has been made.

"We do not think that the public schools can be deprived of their rights by reason of the failure of a corporation to make the inquiry," Chief Justice Rowell said.

Where corporation assessment rolls had been completed before passing of the Act or the time it was effected, the judgment held notices had to be given by August 1. In cases where the rolls were not completed by August 1, effect should be given to notices filed up to the date of the completion of the roll.

Chief Justice Rowell said participating policyholders of insurance companies could not be regarded as members of the company.

their riot guns barked. The door was broken in the encounter, and the police sent gas bombs through windows of the building. The "sit down" strikers began throwing milk bottles and other missiles at the policemen.

No one inside the plant was hurt, although the gas drove them onto the roof of an adjoining building for a time. The casualties were among those fighting in the street.

Three Police Charges

Three times altogether the officers surged forward, discharging their weapons and releasing the gas.

The clashes extended over a two-hour period. When the lull came and fresh air had circulated through the plant, the "sit downers" returned inside. Then they discovered that the heat, which General Motors had kept on ever since the strike began, had been turned off.

All night a union sound truck shouted words of encouragement to the strikers, who shouted back and fourth and sang when the fighting had died down.

There were casualties among the policemen and deputy sheriffs who tried to rout the strikers, as well as among the striking group.

Similar to Lindberg Case

Similarities between the Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., kidnapping in New Jersey in 1932 and the George Weyerhaeuser kidnapping in Tacoma in May, 1935, were visible in the Mattson case.

To these were added the possibilities a demented person or a "chance" kidnapper had committed the crime.

Pick-up orders were out for many persons whom authorities considered possible suspects.

Prowlings about the George G. Franklin mansion and the finding of a ladder there late in November were not overlooked. The Franklins, believing an attempt was underway to kidnap their five-year-old son, John, fled to California. Their place is about two blocks from the Mattson residence. A ladder found there was sent to the F.B.I. at Washington, D.C.

The Mattsons' two remaining children, William, 16, and Muriel, 14, remained in seclusion with the family. They have not been in school since their brother was captured in their presence.

GERMANY, FRANCE TALK SETTLEMENT

In the background of the changed situation, Parliament met for its first session of 1937 to add to the easing of tension by passage of a Bill prohibiting French volunteers from joining either side in Spain.

The economic negotiations to break down German isolation and gain foreign markets and raw materials for the Reich, coupled with the exchange of mutual guarantees to isolate the Spanish Civil War and keep hands off Morocco, were considered a possible prelude to a vast political settlement.

Passage of her own strict neutrality legislation would place France in a better position to insist on Hitler's stopping German volunteer enlistments. A German promise to that effect and an agreement to participate in controlled disarmament would be an integral part, it was said, of the settlement.

Hitler must also agree, officials indicated, to renounce all territorial claims in Europe and return to world economic collaboration.

In consideration of those German concessions, which it was believed would eliminate most of Europe's most pressing problems, France would offer, it was understood, the three things Germany most definitely needs: Foreign markets, raw materials, and some of the colonies she lost at the end of the Great War.

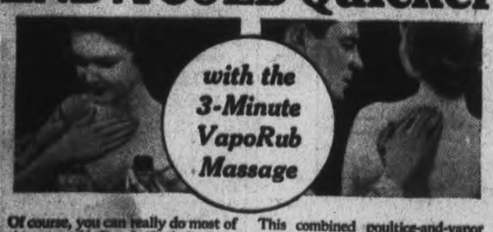
Ask Your Husband to Help You

END A COLD Quicker



Of course, you can really do most of this yourself. But he'll gladly help you end the misery of your cold.

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (between and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warmed cloth.

Already, your VapoRub has begun to bring relief—two ways at once:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat and chest.

While you relax into comfortable sleep, VapoRub's two-way treatment keeps right on working. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Now White—Stainless

Thanks to a new process, VapoRub now comes to you in white stainless form. Only the color is removed; it is the same VapoRub — the same formula and the same effective double action.

CAMPBELLFORD

MORE INDUSTRIES SHOULD BE SOUGHT SAYS MAYOR LONG

COUNCIL'S INAUGURAL

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 12—"The 1937 council should give serious consideration to the task of bringing new industries to the town and formation of a Chamber of Commerce would be an important step in this direction", said Mayor F. F. Long as he welcomed the council at its inaugural meeting held in the Council Chamber at 11 a.m. Monday morning.

The Mayor's inaugural address followed a brief devotional period of prayer led by the Rev. Harold B. Neale who joined with the council in the hope that they would have a successful year together.

The Mayor pointed out that although it was his earnest hope that the council would this year be able to clear up still more of the town's indebtedness to the Bank they must however start the year with the knowledge that the expenses for the year would be greater than those of 1936. In support of this statement he pointed out that last year the school board started the year with a balance of nearly $3000, whereas this year, through no fault of the board that body had only $1100 to begin with. A saving of $700 had been affected by the Board due to the resignation of one teacher on the Public School staff and the consequent closing of one room in the school.

Road Work Necessary.

Roads in the town needed resurfacing and the town roller would have to be put in operation adding additional expense to this year's budget as the roller was also in need of repair. The Mayor pointed out that the abnormal amount of ice which had formed on streets and sidewalks this winter had resulted in practically all the sand which the town had on hand for the purpose for sanding being already utilised and he suggested that this year calcium chloride should be purchased and mixed with the sand. In view of the frequent requests of parents that traffic should be regulated by the police at the two main intersections of the town particularly at noon when the children were coming home from school the Mayor suggested that it might be wise to go into the matter of installing traffic lights on the corners of Bridge and Tice streets and Bridge and Front streets more thoroughly.

In conclusion the Mayor welcomed P. J. Kelley who is the only new member on the council to that body and made reference to the fact that a tax sale should be held this year in order to clear up some of the property which had fallen or was falling to the town and in this connection he made special mention of the shoe factory site which if sold would leave the town free to dispose of it profitably.

Committees Chairmen

A. G. Thompson addressed the Council briefly congratulating them on their efficient work during the past year. He also made suggestions regarding the annual statement and the collection of taxes. The Mayor then appointed the chairmen of the various committees as follows: Legal, Dep. Reeve, C. H. Calver; Relief, Coun. P. M. Locke; Finance, Coun. N. A. McColl; Industrial, Coun. P. J. Kelly; Road and Bridge, Coun. J. O'Sullivan; Fire, Water and Light, F. H. Macmillan; Town Property, J. L. Dorie; and Reeve E. H. McKeel. Police Relief Officer J. Lewis Hay addressed the Council thanking the Relief Committee for their co-operation during the past year and drew attention to three flaws in the present relief administration. "Action should be taken to prevent people from the township from coming to town and unloading for the winter", said Mr. Hay drawing attention to the fact that four families had done so this year. "Another matter we have to contend with is the case where the husband deserts his wife leaving her to get relief from the town for the winter while he lives with another woman, and the last point I have to make is that of relief recipients driving cars", he concluded. The Mayor assured the Relief Officer that the Council would go into the matter thoroughly during the year and the council then adjourned till evening.

Grant Is Increased.

A delegation from the Library Board made up of Mr. E. Brunelle and Mr. H. Townsend were present at the Council's adjourned meeting with a request that the Board be granted an increase of $50 over the $1300 grant of last year, which was duly granted on motion of the council. Alex. Little and J. M. Bygott were appointed auditors for the town accounts at a salary of $75.00 each, there being only one other application.

On motion of Coun. McColl, a new by-law was read and passed governing the premiums to be paid for pre-payment of taxes. It was divulged that the town lost $600 last year due to the premiums granted so the new by-law altered the prepayment discount to ½ of one per cent per month to tax payers who pay prior to date that any respective installment falls due. Another by-law governed the removal of snow from sidewalks which must be done within ten hours of the cessation of a fall of snow in excess of two inches. The penalty for an infraction of this by-law was set at not less than $2 nor more than $10. The following were appointed to the various boards by the Council: George H. Free, School Trustee; John Gay, Board of Health; and Harry Townsend, Library Board.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LILY LAKE, Jan. 12.—Miss Alta Wilson was elected to the position of president of the Christian Endeavor Society, at the annual meeting held in the school, when there was a large and enthusiastic gathering of young people present.

A.Y.P.A. ENTERTAIN YOUNG MEN'S CLUB

Marmora Groups Enjoy Debate On Emancipation Of Women

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Jan. 12.—The Young Men's Club of St. Andrew's United Church were guests of St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. at their regular meeting held in the White Hall on Monday evening. President R. J. Scott occupied the chair for general business.

A committee was chosen to form a Badminton Club, the following names being submitted: Harold Mumby, Stewart Blake, William Bonter, Hilda Thomson, Gertrude Lumsden and Joyce Smith. The invitation from St. John's A.Y.P.A., Havelock, to be their guests next Monday evening, was graciously accepted. Final arrangements for Friday's ball were made.

A very entertaining parliamentary debate then ensued, members of the two organizations represented taking part, and Past President H. Mumby being the speaker. The subject of the debate was, 'Resolved, that the political and economic emancipation of women has been beneficial.' Miss P. Wilson, B.A., excelled as the leader of the affirmative receiving strong support from Miss H. Thompson as second speaker. William Bonter as leader of the opposition well marshalled his arguments and Stewart Blake as second speaker, well supplemented his leader's remarks.

Rather by virtue of numbers in attendance than by force of argument, the negative side carried off the honors. Side benchers on both sides of the house were given a good chance to express themselves and some diverting speeches were heard.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which refreshments were served.

AIRLINER CRASH IN CALIFORNIA KILLS 2, HURTS 11

TRAGIC SCENE IN STORM

Mountain Crack-up Brings Western Air Toll To 28 In Month

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Martin Johnson, noted explorer, died today of injuries suffered in yesterday's western air express transport crash, the second fatality among the 13 persons aboard the ill-fated airliner.

James A. Braden, president of the Cleveland, Ohio, ink company, was crushed to death between two seats when the two-motored plane pancaked on a fog-shrouded mountainside 15 miles from Union Air terminal, its destination at Burbank on a flight from Salt Lake City.

Co-pilot Clifford P. Owens and A. L. Loomis of Omaha, Neb., a passenger, were critically hurt, but none of those riding in the big all-metal craft escaped without some injury.

The big game hunter, one of 12 hurt in the crash which killed one other passenger, had suffered a concussion, fractures of both legs, multiple fractures of both jaws, fractured nose and severe shock. He was brought to the hospital early today after receiving emergency treatment last night in a Ranger lookout station 100 yards from where the Salt Lake City-Los Angeles airliner pancaked yesterday. Mrs. Johnson suffered concussion and a fractured right knee in the accident.

On Way To Lecture.

The Johnsons were to have appeared last night at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium in an illustrated lecture on "Borneo." After sponsors learned of their injury, 3,250 ticket purchasers were given refunds.

The first words spoken by Mrs. Johnson when she recovered from the shock of the forced landing on a 3,600 foot mountain ridge were: "Where's my husband? Is he badly hurt?"

Johnson was 52 years old, a native of Rockford, Ill. His travels that took him to the far corners of the earth started when he was only 14 years old. He worked his way to England on a cattle boat then and returned home as a stowaway after a walking tour of Europe.

As a cook he sailed the South Seas with Jack London on the famous vessel "Snark" and later wrote a book about the voyage.

In 1910 he married 15-year-old Osa Helen Leighty of Chanute, Kas., and thereafter the Martin Johnsons became a travelling team, taking motion pictures and guns into darkest jungle corners.

Richard Gardner, deputy county surveyor, quoted Pilot William Lewis as saying "The Burbank Station seemed tied up with other calls" and he couldn't get through; also that ice formed on the wing, he lost his course, and one motor sputtered "badly."

28 Killed in Month.

James Braden, president of Braden-Sutphin Ink Company, Cleveland, was the fatality—the 28th victim of transport plane crashes occurring in United States Western States over a month's period.

SIMPSON SUES SOCIETY WOMAN FOR SLANDER

Charges Officer's Wife Stated He Received Money In Connection With Divorce

GOING MAYFAIR ROUNDS

LONDON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Ernest Aldrich Simpson, former husband of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, has filed a slander suit against Mrs. Joan Sutherland, alleging she said Simpson received a sum of money in connection with his wife's divorce, it was learned today.

Mrs. Sutherland is the wife of Lieut.-Col. A. H. C. Sutherland.

Simpson declined to discuss the case except to confirm that notice of the suit had been issued and served on Mrs. Sutherland.

The suit, sources close to Simpson said, was the result of Simpson's efforts to quiet talk of his divorce and alleged payment of money which arose after the decree nisi was issued to his wife at Ipswich Oct. 27.

Simpson was declared to have been irritated by discussion in both the London financial district and in Mayfair.

Simpson's solicitors refused to disclose details of the suit beyond the fact notice had been served.

The action was based on alleged remarks by Mrs. Sutherland at a luncheon party in London, it was said, after the abdication of King Edward VIII.

Simpson's friends at the luncheon repeated the asserted statements to him, informed sources declared, and furnished the evidence which the former husband placed before his lawyers.

Mrs. Sutherland was described as a young society matron. Her husband is enroute to India. He served in the famous Black Watch Regiment during the Great War.

POLICE CENTRE HUNT ON KNIFE IN KIDNAP CASE

Long, Slim Blade Used In Inflicting Deep Wound In Mattson Lad's Back

BEEN KEPT SECRET

Reveal Bruises And Scratches Show Boy Fought Desperately For Life

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 13.—(CP).—Law officers hunted a long knife to-day as one of the most important clues to the identity of Charles Mattson's killer. Elsewhere it was declared there was no connection between the case and arrest of two men near Grand Forks, B.C.

The knife was used in inflicting a deep wound in the kidnapped boy's back before he was slain by a blow on the head.

Reports of the stab wound came from several reliable sources. The same sources said the wound was narrow, apparently made by a long slim blade. They said either a carving knife, stiletto or large penknife had been used.

The wound was one of the chief reasons for the autopsy performed under orders of the Federal Bureau of Investigation Monday night.

Physicians, funeral home employees and all others who had reason to view the body closely were warned to say nothing of the wound.

In examinations made Monday when the body was found, physicians discovered ample evidence to prove Charles fought desperately for his life. The body was covered with bruises and scratches and the fingers were spread as though he had scratched with all his strength.

URGE TATTOOING REGISTERED DOGS

Canadian Kennel Club Will Seek To Have Identification System Inaugurated

TORONTO, Jan. 13. — (CP).—When the Canadian Kennel Club incorporated holds its annual meeting here next month, the agenda will call for Col. J. N. MacRae, President, to suggest that after January 1, 1938, all registered dogs be tattooed for identification.

Legislation will be asked whereby a breeder may apply to the Canadian National Livestock Records Branch for identification letters or numbers for his exclusive use with which to tattoo-mark dogs born on his property.

Best place for the tattoo is said to be on the fleshy part of the flank where there is little hair.

If tattooing is done when dogs are young, and in such manner as not to cause extreme or lasting pain, the Toronto Humane Society will not interfere, J. Macnab Wilson, managing director, declared.

NAB NEGRO PORTER AS WOMAN-KILLER BATHTUB MURDER

Accused Found Wearing Shirt Missing From Victim's Apartment

FINGERPRINTS HIS

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Bathtub slaying of pretty Mrs. Mary Robinson Case came to a swift and unexpected denoucment to-day when investigators seized a 33-year-old Harlem negro and charged him with the crime.

Thirty-six hours after the 25-year-old housewife was strangled and beaten to death in her Jackson Heights, Queen's, Apartment, District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan announced Major Greene, wiry negro porter, employed in the apartment building, had been charged with the woman's murder.

Greene, arrested at his home in Harlem, New York's negro section, and taken to the apartment where Frank Case, 30-year-old hotel supply company employee, found the battered body of his wife on Monday.

Greene was kept there two hours and then taken to the Newtown Police Station. Greene's brother Henry, 23, and William Henry Johnson, also a negro, also were questioned.

Fingerprints Identified.

District Attorney Sullivan reviewed the evidence which led to the arrest of Greene.

"Fingerprints found on the panel of the door in the bathroom of the apartment occupied by the deceased have been identified as those of the defendant (Major Greene)," Sullivan's statement said.

"The bloody trousers recovered from the incinerator in the apartment house building have been identified as the property of the defendant.

"The defendant at the time of his arrest was wearing a shirt taken from the apartment occupied by the deceased and the property of the deceased's husband.

"The shoes taken from the defendant's person showed stains which beyond doubt will be identified as human blood.

Greene's arrest came a few hours after the body of the attractive housewife had been taken to Lancaster, Pa., for burial in the city where she was married November 23, 1935. Funeral services are to be held there to-morrow.

Mrs. Case waged a fierce battle with her assailant in the tiny kitchen of her apartment before he strangled her and crushed her skull with a hammer. The intruder fled after dumping her body into the bathtub which he covered with a sheet, stopping the drain and turning on the water.

Christmas Cards Joke In '33, Now $80

Toronto, Jan. 13.

THE 1933 Christmas cards sent to friends by a young floor trader on the Toronto Mining Exchange are worth $80 each today. The friends are trying to find them, rummaging through old storerooms and cupboards.

The story came out to-day without names. At an eighth of a cent a share the trader bought 5,000 shares. Each comic Christmas card was 100 shares. He didn't keep any for himself.

Now the stock is worth 80 cents a share. The trader's card outlay is worth more than $4,000—and only a few friends have been able to find their cards.

FALL-MADE CHEESE MUST BE IMPROVED TO HOLD MARKET

Dominion Officials Press For Stricter Control Of Treatment In Factories

RELATE BRITISH ATTITUDE

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 13 (CP)—If the market for Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom is to be retained steps must be taken to improve the quality of fall-made cheese or prevent the shipment of inferior cheese, the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario was told today by two officials of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

J. F. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, said there should be some legal control of the treatment accorded cheese factories and the length of time it should stay in factories before shipment.

T. J. Hicks, senior dairy produce grader, outlined his experiences in a three months' visit to the chief marketing centres for Canadian cheese in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

"It seems clear," Mr. Singleton said, "that if prices of Canadian fall made cheese are to be maintained as they should be, it will be necessary to see that this cheese is matured at a suitable temperature for a sufficient length of time before it leaves Canada, and this can only be assured by doing so in the factories.

"The price at which a buyer can sell cheese determines the price he can pay for it, and as the general attitude of United Kingdom importers is unfavorable to Canadian fall-made cheese, Canadian producers suffer."

Loss Easily Remedied

There was reason to believe, he explained, that a considerable part, if not all, of the loss occasioned by immature cheese could be avoided by improvement in quality, but that could be done only by improving the milk supply when faulty milk was responsible for defective flavor and by maintaining suitable temperatures in both making rooms and curing rooms.

Those engaged in the industry and trade in western Ontario might consider that since little cheese from

REAL ESTATE TAXES MUST BE HALVED TO START BUILDING

Lindsay Lawyer Claims Municipal Levy Totals About 45 P.C. Nation's Total Burden

75,000 HOUSES SHORT

OTTAWA, Jan. 13 (CP)—Delegates to the 19th convention of the Canadian Construction Association will end their meeting today, carrying away with them an outline of the National Employment Commission's rehousing aims and the fruits of three days discussion among themselves.

Final business session which will see election of officers will take place after delegates have heard the report of their resolutions committee which is expected to endorse the employment commission's home improvement policies.

The convention reached the conclusion yesterday that revival in the building industry can be attained only through whole-hearted response of the public, lending institutions and the industry to opportunities provided by the housing act and the home improvement plan.

Must Cut Real Estate Taxes

Cecil G. Frost of Lindsay, Ont., told the convention real estate taxes should be cut in half before any marked upswing could be expected in building. He held municipal taxes which he claimed were 99 per cent against real estate, accounted for about 45 per cent of the nation's total tax burden.

Tom Moore, member of the employment commission, said there was a current shortage of 75,000 houses in the country, resulting from an accumulated deficit growing over the last five years and that

Announcement Comes Officially From Berlin Easing War Situation

Schacht, Expected To Act As Economic Ambassador, Cancels Trip

TOO BUSY AT HOME

Deal Will Be Conducted Through Regular Diplomatic Channels

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—(AP).—A government communique officially announced to-day negotiations were under way for a trade treaty between Germany and France.

The announcement, first official confirmation of a rapprochement move between the two countries whose relations had been strained over the Spanish civil war, also stated Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of Economic Affairs, had cancelled his scheduled trip to Paris January 16.

Dr. Schacht, who was to open the German building at the Paris Exposition, had also been expected to act as Chancellor Hitler's personal economic ambassador in the trade treaty discussion.

The communique said he had notified the German commissioner for the Exposition his duties in Berlin were too heavy to allow him to be absent.

The communique added:

'German-French negotiations for a trade treaty for the present will be conducted by departmental experts."

The statement said Dr. Schacht had decided eight days ago not to make the trip to Paris.

German morning newspapers, however, had failed to deny dispatches from abroad concerning the impending visit and, on the contrary, reported the excellent impression the proposed visit had made.

Dr. Maurice Auguste Boigey said it was necessary to remain in bed twenty minutes after waking, so the blood circulation, which slows up during sleep, can return to normal.

GORDON FRASER NEW PRESIDENT TOURIST BODY

Dinner Meeting Of Newly-Formed Organization Is Held In Lindsay

FORGET SECTIONALISM

(By a Staff Reporter)

LINDSAY, Jan. 13.—Gordon K. Fraser of Burleigh Falls was unanimously elected president of the newly-organized Kawartha Lakes District Tourist Association, at the first dinner meeting held at Benson House here on Tuesday evening.

Speakers for the occasion were T. Leo Dolan, director of The Canadian Travel Bureau, Ottawa, and Jack Hambleton, director of The Ontario Publicity and Travel Bureau, Toronto, who both stressed the importance of the tourist industry from the economic standpoint, and extended congratulations to the association for the effort it plans to make for attracting more tourists to this section of Ontario.

Good Representation

Occupying the chair, Fred Overend, president of Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, extended a cordial welcome to around sixty members of the association representative of Victoria, Haliburton, Peterborough, Hastings, Northumberland and Durham counties, and thanked them for their support of the movement which had its origin in Peterborough.

Deputy-reeve John Baker also voiced a welcome to those present on behalf of the municipality, while at a later stage of the proceedings Mayor Dr. Logan made an appearance and took part in the discussion that arose regarding Lindsay's attitude towards the association.

While at one part of the meeting the old spirit of antagonism between Lindsay and Peterborough threatened to create an open rift, the proceedings concluded with a perfect understanding between the representatives of the various sections of the wide district which the association embraces.

To Advertise District

Sectionalism must be forgotten, it was stressed, and all must work towards the common purpose of advertising and boosting the resources of the entire district if the aims of the association are to be accomplished and more tourists brought in.

Newton Smale of Lindsay, who nominated Mr. Fraser for office as president, turned a neat phrase when he remarked: "The old Trent

DEFINITE KIDNAP CLUES ARE HINTED

Federal Agents Check House To House In Tacoma Area—Broadcast Description

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 13—(A.P.) Armed with definite, valuable clues, officers hunted widely to-day from northernmost Washington to the Californian-Mexican border for the kidnapper of Charles Mattson—urged on by President Roosevelt's plea that the brutal crime be solved quickly.

A man who became frightened and ran away from a news-stand was sought in the vicinity of San Bernardino, Calif.

Federal investigators displayed some interest in an unidentified man, reported to have acted "queer" while traveling on a bus ticket issued in Kelso, Wash., and whose frozen body was found in Central Missouri. He was described, however, as 60, older than the age generally attributed to the kidnapper.

The search was as intense as it was wide, Federal agents checking from house to house in the Tacoma area.

Department of Justice operatives kept secret whether they sought one or two men for the crime, but they

PILOTS GROUNDED FOR OVERLOADING

Eight Or Nine Affected By Check-up In Northern Ontario And Quebec

OTTAWA, Jan. 13 (CP).—A number of commercial airplane pilots in Northern Ontario and Quebec have been grounded for breaches of air regulations, it was learned here last night.

Officials declined to discuss the groundings, but it was learned from a usually reliable source about eight or nine pilots had suffered suspension of their flying licenses for overloading aircraft and other infractions of air regulations.

It was said the suspensions affected pilots chiefly in the northern parts of the two provinces, where large cargoes of heavy pieces of machinery and considerable quantities of other supplies are flown into mining fields.

Names of the disciplined pilots or the aviation companies for which they worked could not be learned.

BRITISH OFFICERS TO VISIT MOROCCO

Spaniards Would Quieten Fears Regarding German Military Activities

LONDON, Jan. 13 (CP Cable)—British naval officers from Gibraltar are to know the truth about Spanish Morocco. Either today or tomorrow—when arrangements are complete — the British destroyer Vanoc will put in at Melilla and land observers, afterwards proceeding to Ceuta.

The British observers will be given safe conduct Carte Blanche to proceed anywhere in Spanish Morocco to see for themselves what is being done, and to investigate the truth or otherwise of reports of German military activities.

The visit is to be paid on an invitation from Colonel J. Beighbeder Yatiensa, acting high commissioner of Spanish Morocco, which was extended through the British consul at Tetuan.

GERMANY'S HEALTH

Claim They Eat More Than British On Being Blamed For Flu Epidemic.

MUNICH, Germany, Jan. 13 (CP Cable).—British press charges that undernourished Germany was responsible for the influenza epidemic sweeping Europe drew a retort from the Voelkischer Beobachter today.

"Despite an occasional food scarcity," the paper said, "we Germans eat at least two or three times as much as our English friends. Articles and propaganda tricks directed against the new Germany are all the more ludicrous since Germany is much healthier at present than England."

Skinny Cow Turns Missourian Wrath Upon "Egg-Yolk" Artist

Murals Also Depict Jesse James Robbing Bank, Slave Owners Beating Negroes

$16,000 STATE JOB

KANSAS CITY, Jan 13.—(AP)—Missouri's civil art war centred today on Dolly, a red dairy cow, and unruffled Thomas Hart Benton, the muralist, who mixes his paints with egg yolks.

Patriotic critics said the ribs on Dolly, a figure in Benton's recently completed murals in the state capitol lounge at Jefferson City, were "entirely too skinny for any Missouri cow."

Said Benton, a leading United States "realist":

"Any real farmer knows a milk cow doesn't take on fat. I haven't heard a single dirt farmer object to the way she's painted — only gentlemen farmers who never milked a cow."

He used the yolks of 35 dozen eggs to give the paints more lasting qualities.

His first commission from his native state—the legislature appropriated $16,000 for the murals — evoked both praise and criticism, all of it intense, from the home folk.

The 47-year-old artist, centre of numerous past art controversies, was given free rein by the legislators to paint the "Social History of Missouri."

The result: Scenes showing Jesse James robbing a bank; brewery workers gulping down beer; a mother at a county political rally diapering her baby; Negro slaves being beaten by an overseer; the murder in the raucous "Frankie and Johnnie" barroom ballad; and stockyard butchers slaying a steer—near the left ear of Cigaret-Puffing T. J. (Tom) Pendergast, Democratic political leader.

Pickering Will Stick To The Village Pump

Pickering, Jan. 13.

THE result of Pickering's first municipal election over a period of thirty years, indicates that a majority of the members-elect of the new Village Trustee Board are opposed to a proposal to install a waterworks scheme for the municipality at an estimated outlay of $35,000. As a result the old village pump is likely to retain its ancient glory, while water taps will have to wait for at least one year. It was the proposal to proceed with the water system that resulted in an election, when candidates lined up for and against the plan.

FIND 16 SKELETONS IN POMPEII RUINS

Bags Of Gold, Silver Coins Lie Nearby In Discovery Near Old Theatre

POMPEII, Jan. 12.—(AP).—Roman history of the early Christian era unrolled before modern Italy today with the discovery of 16 skeletons of victims in the destruction of Pompeii in 79 A.D.

They were entombed in lava from the erupting volcano, Mount Vesuvius, and buried for almost 1900 years near this city that rose on the ashes of the destroyed original Pompeii.

Two of the skeletons were of children. Personal belongings, strewn nearby, included two bags of gold, silver and bronze coins; metal bracelets and pins in a jewel casket.

The skeletons and trinkets were taken from a block of solidified lava within a few paces of the Pompeian amphitheatre as excavators were seeking to unearth a clear outline of a great gymnasium and swimming pool which ancient Pompeii is known to have possessed.

Tory Hill Lad Hunts Bunnies Winds Up Riding Bucking Bear

Bruin Heads For Wilberforce Country In Hurry After Having Slumber Disturbed

LAUGHS AT SNARE

LINDSAY, Ont., Jan. 13.—(CP)—Alfred Switzer, 10 year old school boy of Tory Hill, 60 miles north of here, while on a rabbit hunt in the bush woke a large black bear from its winter slumber, rode its back for a short distance and lived to tell the story.

Alfred was setting snares for rabbits near McQues bridge when he noticed a hole under a brush pile. Looking in he thought he saw a buck rabbit. Setting the snare at the entrance he climbed on top of the brush and began to jump thinking he would frighten the animal from its lair. Things began to happen. The brush pile rose in the air and started off bodily. It wobbled backwards, forwards and then sideways. Out from under it came not a rabbit but a big black bear who wasn't sleeping as soundly as he was supposed to be at this time of year. When the snare proved too light to hold Bruin, Alfred waited just long enough to find out which way the bear was going—he had already decided to go in the opposite direction.

Alfred got some friends to back him up with guns and a couple of dogs and he went out to meet Bruin again. The bear, had decided he had friends to visit in the Wilberforce district. The hunters tracked him for about five miles and returned home.

BAN AIR RIFLES

Stratford Chief Claims Boys Do Too Much Harm With Them.

STRATFORD, Ont., Jan. 12.—(CP).—Children should not be allowed to have air rifles, Chief of Police R. J. Beatty said to-day.

'Any parent who buys young boys of 11 and 12 an air rifle ought to go and be examined," he said. "Those guns are too dangerous in hands of children."

Chief Beatty has seen young boys with air rifles shoot at dogs, hens, pigeons "just for the fun of it." He added, "Those pellets can do too much harm."

Governor Orders Army Of 2,000 Men To Show State Is In Full Control

Calls Session Of Company And Union Envoys In His Office

HOLDS UP WARRANTS

Orders For Strikers' Arrests Based On Charges Of Kidnapping, Property Destruction

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 13 (AP)—Gov. Frank Murphy, of Michigan, determined to effect "an immediate and peaceful termination "of the General Motors strikes, called today for a meeting of company and union representatives in his office at the capitol.

The Governor, whose previous endeavors to arrange a joint parley failed, dispatched letters to the chiefs of each side as four regiments of Michigan National Guardsmen converged upon Flint, scene of bloody rioting Monday night.

Murphy requested William S. Knudsen, General Motors executive vice-president, and Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, each accompanied by two associates, to meet in Lansing tomorrow with the Governor and James F. Dewey, United States government labor conciliator.

Delays Warrants

Pending the outcome of this conference, Gov. Murphy requested Joseph Joseph, Genesee County (Flint) prosecutor, to withhold service of "John Doe" warrants for the arrest of the several hundred strikers remaining in the Fish Body No. 2 plant here, outside of which a score of persons were injured in the riot.

The warrants, charging kidnapping, vicious destruction of property while rioting, felonious assault and criminal syndicalism, were issued by two municipal court judges here last night.

The warrants were signed by Detective Lieut. Ray Martin and issued by Judges Edward Mallory and Frank Cain. Before the governor asked that service of them be delayed Sheriff Thomas Wolcott had said it would begin within 24 to 48 hours.

Wolcott said the kidnap charge was based on alleged seizure of company guards by the strikers during the riot.

While the 126th infantry of the National Guard was arriving here Gov. Murphy revealed three other regiments were being mobilized. He said this would make approximately 2,000 troops available for duty in this industrial community of 165,000. The other regimenta are the 119th field artillery, the 106th cavalry and the 13th infantry.

State In Control.

"This movement of nearly 2,000 men is to demonstrate that the state will be supreme," Murphy said. "The troops will see that property is not damaged, that there is no rioting, that no persons are endangered and that the laws are obeyed. The National Guard was not sent to scare anyone."

Gov. Murphy, saying the parties to the labor crisis had failed to get together because of objections raised by each, declared it was the state's duty to bring them together because of the great numbers affected by the strike and its resultant factory closings.

MAN DROPS DEAD IN HASTINGS STORE

William H. Fowler, Colborne Tobacconist, Victim Of Heart Attack

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Jan. 13.—The third sudden death to happen in Hastings since December 20th occurred at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon when William H. Fowler, wholesale tobacconist of Colborne dropped dead in Perrault's store. Mr. Fowler who was in his eighty-first year who has been calling on local business places for the past forty years was in the act of making his regular calls when seised with the fatal heart seizure.

He had walked across the main bridge to Mr. Perrault's store, transacted his business and took a couple of steps and collapsed. When Mrs. Perrault and Mr. Fowler's son Harry who were in the car out in front got to his side he was dead.

A number of business men spoken to by The Examiner were greatly shocked at his sudden death. "Billie" Fowler by his honest dealings had won an enviable reputation for himself not only in Hastings but in all the other villages and towns in the district he called upon.

Coroner Dr. C. C. Armstrong was called and deemed an inquest unnecessary. The body was taken to Colborne.

GRAND FORKS, B.C., Jan. 13—(CP).—Royal Canadian Mounted Police to-day held for alleged illegal entry into Canada two men convicted yesterday of being aliens in possession of loaded firearms and fined $20 each.

Police said the men, giving their names as Leonard Dahl, 31, and William Bailey, 44, had a revolver, two rifles and a shotgun all loaded, another unloaded rifle and a quantity of ammunition when arrested Monday night on a snowbound highway 30 miles east of this border town 225 miles east of Vancouver.

British Columbia police stated the arrests were routine business of the border patrol and had no special significance insofar as Canadian authorities were aware. State of Washington police said the arrests had no significance to them at present.

CAMPBELLFORD

FOURTH FORMERS PROVIDE PROGRAM

Enjoyable Meeting Of Campbellford High School Literary Society Held

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 12. — A very interesting and varied program was presented to the High School Literary Society by the students of Fourth Form on Friday afternoon last. The program opened with a chorus by the students of Fourth Form entitled "Sing Baby Sing" after which the minutes for the preceding meeting were read by Gerald Mitchell.

Jack Carr was elected critic for the meeting following which Margaret Black rendered several popular song hits on the piano. A dramatized reading by Miss Vera Wood was received with much enthusiasm, while a vocal solo of a rather humorous nature entitled "I Never See Maggie Alone" caused a riot of laughter. Other numbers included girls and boys choruses, a piano solo by Wilsey Phillips, and a reading "Mixed Prescriptions" by Margaret Black. One of the highlights was the Novelettes Swing Band which introduced several entirely new instruments into the realm of music. This number was introduced by a step dance by C. Duncalfe. The president of the society, Jay Anderson acted as chairman

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 13 (C.P.). — Declaring that the quartette appeared to require confinement in a place "where escape is not so easy," Judge R. L. McKinnon in County Court to-day imposed sentences on four young Ontario Reformatory prisoners who attempted to make a break on December 23.

Nick Manelli, and George Simpson were given terms of three and a half years in Kingston Penitentiary, George Dixon received two years less a day determinate and two years less a day indeterminate in Burwash Reformatory, and Lawrence Reese received two years less a day determinate and 21 months indeterminate in Burwash.

NO CURE FOR LOVESICK

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 13 (AP). — Lazy university freshmen can be prodded into studying and sick ones can be treated, but when they fall in love watch out for those "flunks," Junior Dean Charles W. Reeder of Ohio State University's School of Commerce observed today.

There's no known preventive for the cardiac "disease," he said.

"Although students seldom admit it, their love affairs share with lack of study and poor health the blame for failing class work," said the dean.

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 37

"IT BAFFLES ME...." Graham kept on repeating to Selden as he went along the dim corridor of the Severinge crypt wherein the lights had not been turned on. He seemed a broken man, and had no more fight left in him after the bloodhounds had followed the scene of Sylvia's coat to the crypt.

"Where is Lady Severinge?" he asked of James at the gateway. "This place is like a house of the dead."

"Her ladyship has not yet returned—she went out this morning."

"She's either gone to see that fellow Colindale, or she knows more about this affair than we think," Graham grumbled. "You'll follow this up, Selden?"

"I shall do so at once," the detective replied. "We are to have Hucks here as a night watchman shortly."

Graham wrinkled his brows, puzzling out what the connection could be, but shrugged his shoulders and made for the door.

"Will you take the car, sir?" James asked Grahm politely. "I will phone the chauffeur."

"I think I will. 'Pon my soul, this incident has upset me. I suppose it's that damned crypt."

James had gone to the phone, for the garage was with the stables on the other side of the lake.

"I suppose it is no good asking you, Colonel, to tell me who killed Sir Henry Severinge?" Selden said very quietly.

"Asking me? What the devil do you mean—how should I know? I thought it was the job of the police to find that out. What a piece of impertinence!"

Selden was undisturbed by the outburst. "Why did you want to keep Reid at your house last night? Please don't tell me the tale of his being nervous—he's not that type. Believe me, it is serious."

The Colonel remained silent, and Selden saw that an inward struggle was going on in his mind. Perhaps he might have spoken, but the sound of the car coming round the drive by the lakeside for him and the bright beams of the headlights seemed to influence his decision. He laughed harshly, and held out his hand, quite unexpectedly.

"I'll think it over—if I can I'll tell you. I believe you are trying to do your best; I only hope you are successful."

Selden stood and watched him go, heaving a sigh. "What a fool!" he said, not bitterly, but with regret.

In the meantime James had returned. "If you don't mind, sir, I'll close the doors—I generally do at sundown." James stood beside Selden, deferential as ever, but with an uneasy expression that did not escape Selden.

"Do so by all means."

The doors were drawn across, bolted with heavy iron bars, and then James turned a huge key in the lock and put it in his pocket with an air of satisfaction.

"Feel safer now, eh?"

"Why yes, sir—there are a number of valuables in the house. If you will excuse me, sir, I'll just go round as I always do to see that the shutters are properly fastened."

"Quite so, James, but before you do that, will you tell me where I can find Miss Lawrence and the children, or must I investigate the library and the way from there to the organ in the chapel myself?"

James was struck all of a heap, as the saying goes. He shrank back against the wall and stared at Selden.

"I'm not a thought-reader or a Sherlock Holmes, but I saw your face, when we passed the library door, and it gave the show away. Also, Mrs. Holden told me about that curious organ loft without an entrance, and the hollow panels at the end of the library."

The staring eyes of the butler left the face of the detective, and a queer smile came to him.

"I've been puzzling ever since the day of the funeral where I had seen the lady before, and heard her voice—it was clever, sir, if I may say so."

"Then you will tell me—it's quite safe with me, you know."

"I intended doing so, sir, but waited till Colonel Graham had gone. You see, Mr. Selden, we were expecting Mr. Reid to come back and I was waiting up, but the car sent a message to say that he was staying at Colonel Graham's house, and that frightened me——"

"Why, James—why were you frightened?" Selden asked insistently.

The butler showed signs of confusion. "I don't quite know—it was a very dark and cruel night. I told Miss Lawrence, and she was scared at being alone, I left her in her room, but later on she rang for me, and told me she could not be there with the children. She was very much afraid something would happen, and seemed convinced that Mr. Reid would come back, and that something had gone wrong. She put a light in the window, and asked where they could hide for the night. I took them to the old organ loft—there is a room behind the organ, as you guessed

"It is a fairly large room, but when the inspector had gone I intended letting Miss Lawrence have the key of the library, and they could go in there." He paused suddenly and a look of horror grew on his face. "But the bloodhounds! they passed the library door, and went to that place."

"I am afraid I staged that," Selden said with a grin at the astonished butler. "When I heard that Colonel Graham was going to employ the hounds again, I knew that a refusal would be suspicious. So I took the precaution of getting a coat of Miss Lawrence's, which fortunately she had left behind, and trailed it all along the whole way to give a scent so fresh that the hounds could not fail to follow. But the difficulty was that it had to end somewhere, and the gates would not do, for, of course, the scent would go on over the bridge. I had to devise, on the spur of the moment, something so dramatic that the Colonel would have no further ideas of following. I chose this method and it was successful. I wanted to shake the Colonel into telling me something; but that," he added sadly "I failed to do."

"Well, I never," James said, nearly saying something stronger and unsuited to a butler.

"Now the question is the next move," Selden remarked briskly. "The children can't remain here—that's quite certain."

"You think there is still danger even here in this hiding-place?"

"There's danger everywhere. A real getaway to London or elsewhere is impossible, because our friend Hutchins has taken steps and every effort is being made to trace them. I must think it out, but for tonight they had better remain where they are. I shall stay here for the present."

"Yes, sir; but you will want some food."

"I think I will wait for Lady Severinge—she can't be long, and I want to talk to her."

"Very good—I'll lay for two,then. You'll excuse me, sir, but I must go and see about getting some food for Miss Lawrence and the children."

Selden watched him go, and then walked into the central court, where he sat down on the old seat by the chapel wall.

* * *

Colonel Graham's guess was correct. Lady Severinge, distracted at the disappearance of the children, apparently with the connivance of their governess, and by the fact that Reid on whom she had leant for support was in bed with fever, had sought the help of the one man whom she thought she could trust. She phoned Eric Colindale and arranged to meet him at the market town of Grinfold. She would not take the car, for even the chauffeur might talk. She boarded a bus, and waited at the "Wheatsheaf" in the square.

Colindale already showed signs of his altered conditions and unrestricted life. His face had a bloated appearance, which the hard life in the open air had kept under control. He was none too pleased at being summoned back from London, as Hilda had been afraid to tell him the reason on the telephone.

They sat in a small room facing the market square, while he listened to her story at first with impatience, but later with interest. His vanity was flattered by her obvious trust in his judgment, and her distress. The pose of a strong man suited him admirably. Hilda had found that she could not manage without him, and when in trouble depended on his sound advice and his good strong arm. Such thoughts coursed their way through his mind as he listened.

"What do you want me to do?" he asked at the conclusion of the recital.

"I want to get out of it all, Eric," she said imploringly. "That house will kill me, I'm certain, and now that the children are gone I don't know what to do, because if something has really happened to them the allowance will, of course stop, and we shan't have anything to live on."

He hadn't thought of that—this was serious. Already he was in lack of funds and had meant to ask Hilda for money.

"It would be madness to leave just now, Hilda. In any case, the children can't have gone far; we don't live in a kidnaping country, and who in the world is going to murder them? It's stupid—like the babes in the wood with a wicked uncle thrown in."

"The detectives seem quite useless, Eric, and what is worse, they don't seem to be making any effort to discover the murderer."

STILL HOPE FOR HONEST THOUGHT

Ottawa Women Not Discouraged By Municipal Body's Opinion

OTTAWA, Jan. 13 (CP)—Faintly amused, slightly disgusted and considerably depressed—but not discouraged—was the attitude of the Ottawa Business and Professional Women's Club, in an official statement after the Central Council of Municipal Associations had delivered itself of the opinion that female civic employes should not receive more than $1,200 yearly.

"We are amused because it is a time-honored custom not yet outgrown for us women to show signs of mirth when the gentlemen are ridiculous," the statement said. "We are slightly disgusted because we are amused. We are considerably depressed because we are reminded that the present unsatisfactory state of affairs in this man-made world is due to a great extent to fallacious reasoning, needless ignorance, dull understanding—in a word stupidity.

"In the Central Council of Municipal Associations we have an organization that for many years has been studying municipal affairs, we supposed, and educating its members to be bigger and better citizens. It now proves its grasp of municipal problems by contending that $1,200 should be the maximum salary of female civic employes...

"While we are depressed, we are not discouraged. In spite of a great deal of evidence to the contrary, the Business and Professional Women's Club still refuse to believe that all men talk and act in this way. But we would suggest that it is time that the members of these organizations which are nibbling at big problems should actually do a little honest thinking and intelligent studying."

PREDICTS WANE OF SWING TUNE

But Tricky Music May Have Lasting Influence On Dance, Expert Says

SHORT-LIVED EXISTENCE

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 13 (CP)—The popularity of "swing" music likely will wane within a few months, Mrs. Montie Beach, president of the Dancing Masters of America, says, but the tricky tunes may have a lasting influence upon ballroom dancing. "It seems that swing dance music, an apparent novelty which probably will begin losing popularity within a few months, may have some influence on the manner of dancing the waltz and fox trots," she says.

Mrs. Beach, first woman president of the dancing masters and only person ever elected to that office four consecutive terms, said laymen, music, college youth and motion pictures had originated most of the dancing steps in recent years.

"Most steps originate with laymen and are perfected by the masters," she says.

SPECIAL SERVICE AT UNITED CHURCH

Children Of Sunday School Are Addressed By Rev. S. A. Kemp

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 13.—At the close of the Sunday school session Sunday afternoon, the children occupied the front pews for a special service conducted by Rev. S. A. Kemp. Special hymns for the young were sung. Psalm 34 was read responsively by the pastor. The choir rendered a number, "In the Service of the King." Mr. Kemp chose for the topic of his address, "The Animal Tendency of the Human Heart," using a colored chart to illustrate the human heart, which proved interesting and helpful and held the children in wrapt attention. Mr. Kemp summed up his address by stressing the important fact of a prayerful lip, watchful eye and bridled tongue in order to clear up all bad habits.

350 Carats Vanish As Jonker Is Cut

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).

WHAT remains of the big Jonker diamond, twelve smaller but more beautiful stones, rested on a black velvet-covered board in a Fifth Avenue office today.

Harry Winston's job of cutting up the great diamond was over. Behind him lay months of critical study and anxiety, and gone were 350 carats of diamond, vanished into air. The Jonker diamond weighed 726 carats in the rough. The total weight of the dozen stones is 375 carats—the rest was lost in the cutting and polishing process.

Using a six-mule team and wagon, rescuers toiled all night to bring out the injured during a snow storm. The big ship struck a foothill in murky weather 10 miles from its terminal destination, rolling along a slope for 20 feet.

A tragic picture greeted first arrivals at the crash scene, four miles from the Olive View sanitarium—a semi-conscious pilot mumbling incoherently into a radio no longer working; every occupant "piled up on someone else."

The scene was detailed by Richard Gardner, deputy county surveyor, who said he found Pilot William Lewis in the mail compartment, pistol in hand.

"His leg broken, he was looking out of the compartment, a gun in his hand," Gardner said. "He had just fired a shot to direct rescuers to the scene.

Passengers Piled in Heap.

"I pulled open the cabin door. My eyes fell first on the dead man, James Braden. His body had fallen over Mrs. Osa Johnson and she was asking for someone to help lift him aside. She herself apparently was suffering from a broken leg.

"Most of the passengers were conscious. The seats were all smashed and everyone seemed to be piled up on some one else.

"I recognized Martin Johnson from pictures I had seen of him. He was delirious and was screaming from pain and shock.

"The stewardess was the heroine. Although suffering from a broken ankle, she limped about trying to help out all the others and cheer them through the ordeal."

had definite clues to guide them toward the man who played the principal role.

Father Thinks Several Involved

Dr. W. W. Mattson, father of the boy, who strove in vain to pay the $28,000 ransom demanded, indicated in an anguished cry he believed there was more than one kidnapper when told the battered and frozen corpse found near Everett, Monday, was that of his boy, he cried:

"I feared it. I feared when they pulled that boy out into the night that something like this would happen."

Close friends, however, have intimated only one kidnapper was involved. Paul Sceva, spokesman for the family, invariably referred to "the kidnapper" or "he."

Searchers sought a man who answered this description:

Weight, 145 pounds; height 5 feet 7 inches; complexion, swarthy; hair, black; beard, black; eyes, brown; speech, with slight accent; voice, deep; age, about 38; when last seen he wore dark trousers, a blue blazer and a light cap.

Authorities suggested that in all cases of suspects investigators obtain if possible samples of the man's handwriting, his fingerprints and his shoe prints.

Liberal Party Attended by Hundreds.

The favorite phrase of the amateur reporter: "A good time was had by all," describes very well the reaction of the six or seven hundred people who attended the big Liberal party in the Canadian Legion Hall on Tuesday evening. The dancers and card-players were there from the city and the district and all the townships, hundreds of them, and every one had a shake of the hand from the Liberal member, J. J. Duffus, who stood on the outer landing of the dance hall to welcome the guests, while the stalwart figure of P.C. Jack Deannard lurked in the background to make doubly sure that nothing untoward should happen to mar the pleasure of an extremely well-conducted party.

For the first time in many moons, the spacious dressing-rooms were incapable of holding the outer garments of the guests, and the ground-floor lounge was pressed into service as a cloakroom. Outside, automobiles stretched in unbroken lines on either side of the street from George to Aylmer and beyond, while cars parked in angle fashion pressed their noses against the front of the Armouries, across the way.

In the big hall, where the guests danced to music played by "Red" Moncrief and his orchestra, with Bert Jones as "caller-off" for the square numbers, and Bruce Sargent as floor manager. A reception committee included Mrs. J. J. Duffus, Mrs. C. R. Banks (president of the Ladies' Liberal Association), Mrs. J. D. Devell, Mrs. R. Bugg, and Mrs. W. H. L. Mellis. The affair was held under joint auspices of the trio of Liberal associations representing the men, the women and the young people of the party, with the president of the men's club, Alex Elliott, and the president of the young people's association, Cyril Rice, actively interested in the arrangements of the evening, all assisted by capable committees.

Upstairs, card games were played at 45 tables, 35 being devoted to euchre and the balance to bridge. The bridge prize, which was drawn for, went to James Cullen, and euchre prizes were won by Mrs. W. Brotherstone and Joseph Minicola.

Dr. J. F. O'Brien was in charge of the bridge games, assisted by Dr. H. N. Young, while Maitland Wells looked after the euchre tables. Members of the committee from the Men's club included Howard Quinn, James Lundy, Jacob Low, F. Whatley, W. H. L. Mellis, T. Doughty, and the president, Alex. Elliott, who also acted as chairman for the program of brief speeches which formed an interlude in the entertainment of the evening. The committee of ladies included Mrs. C. R. Banks, Mrs. Jeffrey Dinsdale (social convenor), Mesdames P. J. Carroll, W. J. Armstrong, H. O'Keefe, W. H. Mellis, Ted Crowe, M. MacLean, Susan Elliott, S. Todd, G. Farrance. The Young People's club committee was comprised of Miss Dorothy Whatley (convenor), and the Misses Myrtle Gilman, "Gerry" McAuliffe, Eunice Barnes, Messrs. Clarence Laine, Earl O'Toole, and Ovril Rice, president.

Included in the list of those present were various stalwarts of the Liberal party: Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C.; F. D. Kerr, K.C.; W. F. Burke, K.C.; T. J. Carley, K.C.; and Reeve Charles Tanner of Lakefield.

Later in the evening, supper was served expeditiously by an energetic group of assistants, and the evening was also enlivened by a 15-minute interval devoted to brief speeches by Hon G. N. Gordon, K.C.; F. D. Kerr, K.C.; and Reeve Charles Tanner of Lakefield, all of whom remarked with pride on the general enthusiasm for the Liberal cause evidenced by the large gathering. J. J. Duffus, M.P., also spoke, remarking on his pleasure at seeing so many of his friends and helpers gathered together for a pleasant evening. Alex Elliott, president of the Men's Liberal Association, was in the chair.

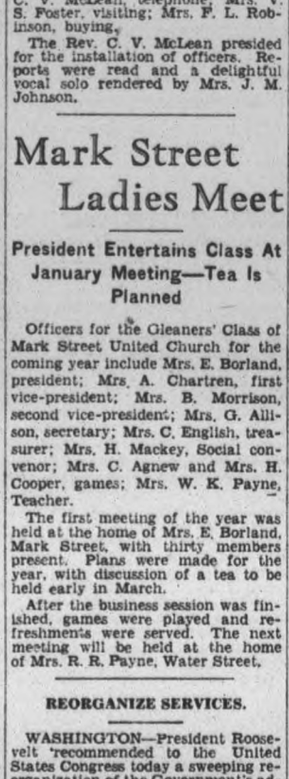
Fashion Service



Here's a cute and new looking Dalmatian peasant dress of Tyrolean cotton print. It has a red rick-rack braid trim. It has a peasant apron, too, and it's included in the pattern.

The high waisted fitted bodice and gathered skirt is such an adorable fashion for chubby little girls. The puffed up sleeves and the Peter Pan collar are plain white cotton.

Plain cottons are also precious for this quickly made dress. Navy blue cotton poplin with red rick-rack and white sleeves and collar and apron is an adorable scheme.

The apron pattern may be used for other dresses.

Style No. 3379 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 4 requires 1¼ yards of 35-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting and 7 yards of braid for dress; and ⅝ yard of 35-inch material with 1⅝ yards of braid for the apron.

ST. JOHN'S LADIES HOLD MEETING

Members Of Auxiliary Hear Of Growth Of Their Order

At the meeting of the Evening branch of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Church, held in the ladies' parlor of the parish house on Monday evening, Mrs. W. E. Conway gave an interesting paper on the growth and endeavors of the Auxiliary.

Fifty-two years ago, the movement began in Ottawa with the gathering of seven ladies in a meeting called by Mrs. Tilson. Now, the society has expanded across the continent and has a membership of over 100,000, in a remarkable achievement by women working under the text, "The Love of Christ Constraineth Us."

The devotional services of the meeting were conducted by the rector, the Rev. W. P. Robertson. Miss Agnes Stout presided. Splendid reports were presented by Mrs. J. Collis, secretary; Mrs. McIlwaine, treasurer; Mrs. Bryitt, Extra Cent a Day; and Mrs. H. Burrows, Dorcas.

Four bales were packed and despatched by the branch; Christmas gifts were sent to Warsaw; donations were made to various institutions, and 17 quilts were made, during the year.

During the business discussion, it was arranged, if possible to have Mrs. Butler (on furlough at present from the Arctic), as speaker on February 8.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by Miss E. Clementi and her committee.

JUNIOR WELFARE LEAGUE.

The Junior Welfare League is a comparatively new organization, having been in existence only three years. The object of the league is general welfare work in the city of Peterborough. The chief work undertaken is the assistance of families who, owing to the economic crisis, have been only able to obtain part time work and are reluctant to approach the municipal authorities for help, and yet in many instances they are not as well provided for as those receiving direct relief from the municipality. Many of these families have to face the winter inadequately clothed and lacking some of the necessities of life. The members investigate the circumstances of these cases and render what assistance they can, such as providing milk and cod liver oil for the children. They also prepare clothing, such as layettes, underclothing, woollen sweaters, mittens, etc., and make over many articles of used clothing.

The League would appreciate any donations of used clothing, especially children's, and by telephoning 660 these will be called for.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

O BLEST retirement: friend to life's decline,
Retreat from care, that never must be mine,
How blest is he who crowns in shades like these,
A youth of labor with an age of ease;
Who quits a world where strong temptations try,
And, since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly. —Goldsmith.

Dear Friends:

Sometimes we try to battle things out, even altho' we feel they are getting the best of us, fraying our nerves, distorting our judgment, and clouding our vision so much that we can no longer see straight, and then indeed is a good time to run away from these things.

I often used to wonder why our Lord went away for certain periods, but now I know. He had to get away from all the troubles He was constantly hearing and seeing, and always He came back refreshed.

But we think we are so much wiser, so we decide to stick it out, even altho' we are at the breaking point, even though we are so utterly fatigued that thinking becomes an effort, and rest is impossible.

When I was a girl, I heard lots of talk about doctors who sent their patients away for a sea voyage, but I know now how utterly wise they were, and I think many nervous break-downs could be avoided if more people would run away from their troubles, even for one day.

You see, when you are looking at a tall building from a distance, it doesn't look so awfully big, but the nearer you come to it the larger it looms on the horizon, and when you stand directly under it, it's shadow enfolds you, so that when you look up it seems enormous.

So it is with our troubles, the nearer we stay to them the larger they seem, and when we look up we see that they have darkened the sun for us, so that we look at life through a dark shadow.

But, when we get away from them for a spell the sun of common-sense shines in and illuminates the dark spots, and we see that all this shadow and darkness is mainly caused by someone else's selfishness, and when we are not under the influence of these people we get a grip on ourselves, our nerves stop jittering and making us afraid of our own opinion, and we get fresh strength to cope with them on our return.

Some of us have a habit of spending ourselves on others, and if they do not spend themselves on us, we do not get replenished, and it acts on our body in the same way as spending money acts on our pocket-book, we become empty, so of course it is up to us to see that we do not become extravagant by spending ourselves too much.

In my work as a psychologist, I have found myself as if I had been vacuumed, because the person who needed help drew everything they wanted from me. And the same thing can happen in our daily life. We can let those about us draw our substance from us so much, that we become utterly depleted, and it is only in getting away from everything that we can get what we would say refilled again.

You have to realize that there are the givers of this world, those who give love, and time, and labor, and understanding, and consideration, everything in fact that they can give.

And there are the takers, who take all as a matter of course, giving nothing in return. If you keep pouring from a full vessel, it will not be long before it is empty, and if we keep pouring from our heart and spirit, they also will become empty, so that if those to whom we have given all this will not help to refill us by giving in return, we must get away until nature does its work for us.

And so, I would suggest that if your life is becoming intolerable due to your troubles, try getting away from them for a little while. If you cannot get away for a day, go for a few hours anyway. Mingle with others, even altho' you feel in no mood for talk. Go to a movie, or have a nice leisurely meal at a restaurant, or have you hair done, or buy yourself some small thing you have long wanted, and in the meantime stop thinking of others so much and think of yourself a bit.

The selfish ones do not need this advice because they do not require anyone to tell them what to do in pleasing themselves. But to the givers, and to those who carry other people's troubles, I would say that it is just as much a sin to be too unselfish, so get a more even balance even if you have to go away to get it. More Later.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Slow at Learning

In Flint, Mich., there are thousands of workers on strike. As a rule they are making parts or bodies for automobiles, but for some days they have been doing nothing.

They have been getting no wages while idle, and the company which employs them has been getting no output. On that basis each seems to be losing.

Trouble came as it generally does, and the soldiers were called upon to come and keep order. The soldiers had gas bombs and guns and they used both. There was no profit in that either. Neither was there wages nor output.

Fourteen people were shot, several of them seriously and policemen were injured. Nor was there any production or wages in that either.

This tired old world is slow to learn and in Flint it has been giving a painful exhibition of that fact.

Making Money on Sunday

Ald. Quinn of Toronto says he intends to start a move to make it possible for tthe ball team of that city, representing Toronto in the International League, to play games in Toronto on Sunday. It is claimed the team cannot make a go of it on the old basis of playing on week days. We read there is quite an investment in property and a number of folk are interested as they desire some return on their money.

After reading a good deal about the property and past difficulties we find it is stated "Sunday baseball would not only revive local interest in the game and in the local team, but would also swell the baseball club's revenues and restore its finances to a more stable basis."

Baseball is purely a professional consideration in this case. The men who are playing at it make their living that way; to them what is called play is actually the day's work. They are working just as surely as those folk who hasten off to factories or stores, so it cannot be argued on the basis of playing at something or other on Sunday. It is a straight business proposition, and the games on Sunday are desired so that the people who have invested their money in the business can secure some adequate returns. Their desire is to use the rest day of the week to make money. We do not believe Toronto will fall in line, and we can think of no good reason why it should.

Some Council Resolutions

Peterborough City Council believes there are sufficient beverage rooms in this city now, and a motion presented to council by Ald. G. N. Gordon, seconded by Ald. McIntyre has so placed the municipal body on record. The advantage of such a motion is that if the Liquor Control Board receives application for added licenses in this city it will know the City Council is already on record as being opposed to any addition to the existing list. With that resolution the Examiner agrees.

Another resolution from Ald. Gordon did not succeed. His belief was there should be no pay for aldermen, and Ald. Glover was prepared to agree, and Ald. Sloan was, in part, but with the suggestion that the council consist of five members who should be paid $200 per year. At present aldermen are paid $5 per meeting, but nothing for committee meetings. Other members of council were opposed to the idea. As we see it, the plain question is: "Why shouldn't they be paid?" Employees who work for the city in any capacity are paid; the city pays for goods which it purchases, so why should those who are entrusted with city management and whose time is taken at the rate of a good many hours each week be singled out as those who should receive nothing at all? The rate paid here is indeed very moderate and we do not believe any member of council has yet found being an alderman a profitable undertaking from the standpoint of revenue.

The Municipalities Know

Hon. Norman McL. Rogers, Minister of Labor, speaking to the Canadian Club in Toronto, said federal grants to the provinces for the purposes of relief would be substantially reduced this year, although such a reduction would not be made operative during the months of January, February and March. Mr. Rogers said reports showed business was better, and therefore more workers were being absorbed. The improvement being shown in municipal tax collections and the improved financial position of the provinces were cited as reasons why the readjustment of contributions should be made downward.

It is only a few weeks since another report was given out at Ottawa which showed that the number of persons on relief in Canada was actually greater at the end of 1936 than at the close of 1935, and that the increase might be as high as 12 per cent. It was known to be at least 8 per cent.

On the same day the report of Mr. Rogers' speech appeared there was a report from Oshawa telling of the initial meeting of the city council for the year 1937. The council of 1936 had suggested that the tax rate for 1937 should be 55 mills, an increase of nine mills, and Mayor Hall said such a move was impossible. His view was that the council must at once approach the government "for financial assistance to carry the heavy relief burden." The council of 1936 left an overdraft of $82,000 to be handled, and it is reported that much of it is due to relief costs.

If relief costs are cut to the provinces by Ottawa then the provinces are likely to pass the cut in total or in part to the municipalities. They have power to do that, and in the race to balance their own budgets would probably refuse to assume the added cost out of provincial revenue. Municipal councils are just as anxious as any other governing body to reduce their relief expenditures, but they are living closer to the situation than either provincial or federal governments. They operate the relief departments, and they know the people who are on relief; they have occasion to interview them personally and they know exactly what can or cannot be done. We believe it would be better for both provincial and federal governments to pay more attention to municipal reports and to base the extent of their monetary assistance upon them. When a municipal relief office in any well organized and properly conducted community says the time has come for a scaling down in expenditure that report can be accepted as correct because it comes from people who are close to the scene of operation.

Smashing a Family

Never before have we heard of Raffaele Zingarri, but it seems he has been tossed around a good deal, and is now in line for a long trip back to his native Italy. Zingarri came to Canada from Southern Italy in 1912, and in 1918 he went to United States; in 1928 he was married in Buffalo. Three years ago he applied for citizenship papers in United States and admitted he had once gone to Crystal Beach, Ont., on a factory picnic. That admission is believed to have resulted in his deportation to Canada soon afterward. He had been working in Lackawana, not far from Buffalo, and his wife and eight children reside there.

After being sent to this country he found a job in Welland, although he was not able to cross over to visit his family. Canadian immigration authorities last summer arrested Zingarri and began an investigation of his case. When he was released at Welland a few days ago immigration authorities from United States took the man to New York and there he will be deported to Italy, a land which he left 25 years ago. No reference is made to what will become of the man's wife or his eight children, and it is not likely that the United States government will expand its generosity to the extent of providing an ocean trip for the wife and mother and eight children.

Yes, to be sure, we must have some sort of law and regulations to see that people cross and recross our international boundaries according to custom, but we fail to recognize equity or plain justice in regulations which put husband in Italy and leave wife and eight children in United States because the husband happened to cross a boundary line at the wrong time.

Few Kidnapped Children Live

Dr. William J. Mattson of Tacoma, Wash., has been hoping for the restoration of his boy, Charles, a bright lad of ten years who had been kidnapped. A ransom of $28,000 had been demanded and the father was ready to pay it. Probably he would have given all he possessed for the return of his son, but payments of that kind are not easy to arrange, as the kidnappers fear there will be a trap. When Dr. Mattson heard a report of the finding of the naked and beaten and frozen body of a boy he hesitated to believe it could be Charles, and insisted on going himself to make certain. He was driven some 50 miles from his home and saw what had been reported. It was Charles. The doctor is reported as being now in a stunned stupor, while the boy's mother "just crumpled." That of course is all correct. For two weeks they had been living on a mixture of intrigue and hope.

From the first it would be known that the prospects of the child being returned alive were not bright. The history of kidnappings in United States makes that plain. Cases which have received nation-wide attention show that adults have a better chance of being released than children or babes, and the reason for that is adults are present in person in the hands of their captors and can negotiate themselves. Of 15 cases where the kidnappers took a baby or a child, records show that 12 were dead or never found. As far back as 1874 the case of Charles Ross of Germantown, Pa., attracted attention. Large rewards were offered but he was never found. The case of Baby Hencks of Chicago, (1911) was never solved. The same with Catherine Winters of Newcastle, Ind., (1913) and in 1915 Ginny Glass disappeared in Jersey City. In 1917 Baby Lloyd Keet of Springfield, Mo., was found—slain. In 1919 Billy Dansey of New Jersey was kidnapped, and his body was afterward found in a swamp. In more recent times there was the Lindbergh case, and now Charles Mattson is added to the list.

Theory is that the kidnappers have no intention of killing a child in the first place. They know they must work fast for fear police will find their hiding place. Each day spent in negotiation or trying to arrange for a meeting with a go-between adds to their danger. If they felt they could go safely and collect their ransom there would probably be few murders. When the situation becomes too hot they seek to get rid of the child, and in the methods they adopt the real nature of the kidnapper is revealed. He is generally brutal and crude, and leaves all the marks of one who has been in extreme haste. Kidnapping is now a capital offence in United States and that is as it should be.

The records also show that little money has ever been paid to the kidnappers of babies and children. Large sums have been handed to men who have agreed to act as the go-between, but the actual amount turned over to the kidnappers and the number of cases in which the baby or child have been returned in safety are both comparatively small in number.

WEE ANGUS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Wee Angus says in years ahead, in mornings I can lie in bed, and I'll have him to thank; he is not thinking any more, as how he'll run the corner store, instead he'll own a bank.

¶ He went down there he says with Dan, who had to see the banking man, and he watched people come; no person had to hurry there, it was a pleasant sort of air, no person had to run.

¶ And people just wrote on a pad, and showed the dollars that they had, and all of them seemed rich; and some put dollars in their jeans, and they were men of wealth and means, it ran without a hitch.

¶ Wee Angus has it settled now, for him no farm or sheep or cow, nor twitch grass wild and rank; no little store just down the street, where he'd sell prunes and things to eat, he's going to own a bank.

¶ And when he opens up the door, then I won't have to work no more, a pleasant thought indeed; and I won't worry on the rent, nor will I come to my last cent, I'll never be in need.

¶ I fear Wee Angus is too rash, I asked him what he'd use for cash, to fill a tub or hat; he looked a little troubled too, and then admitted kind of blue—he hadn't thought of that.

Hitler Playing Nice Little Game

(From the Montreal Star)

WEEK-END cables brought the very interesting report from Berlin that the Official Gazette in Berlin announced a Portuguese - German agreement effective as from December 18 last, in which Portugal abrogated all her rights to German property in her own territory and also in colonies acquired under the Versailles treaty, and agreed to return to Germany all such properties which Portugal has not already liquidated. This is said to be regarded in Berlin as possibly forecasting co-operation with Portugal in the exploitation of Angola, or Portugese West Africa, and a reorientation of Portugese foreign policy, replacing her traditional friend and ally, Great Britain, by Germany, Italy and the Spanish insurgent regime.

There have been rumours for some considerable time past that Germany was dickering with Portugal about securing footing of some sort in Portugese West Africa, but the Portuguese Dictator last spring was not prepared to consider the idea favourably. It is quite possible that the agreement announced in Berlin may have been concluded, however. It would not envisage any territorial concession, but it would permit of German capital being used to help Portugal in the development of Angola. At present Portugal is relying upon British and Belgian capital.

Angola has an area of 476,000 square miles and a population of 4,600,000. Inland there is a broad mountain belt of great fertility and wide savannahs intersected by wooded river valleys. The present staple exports are coffee, rubber and wax, in the order named. In 1934 the value of those exports was over ten million dollars. The country's wealth has been hardly scratched, however, and it is capable of great exploitation, particularly in regard to rubber, of which Germany is in great need.

The strategic position of Anglo assumes definite significance if the reported agreement proves to be a fact. It is bounded on the north and north-east by the Belgian Congo, on the east by Northern Rhodesia, and on the south by South-West Africa, which was captured from Germany by British South African troops during the war. One Berlin despatch says that Hitler is raising a political and military uproar on the borders of French-controlled Moroccan territory in the hope that he can induce Paris and London to buy him off with agreements that will give him a nucleus for German African colonies. He is, it is reported, seeking the return to Germany of the Cameroons and Togoland, which were divided between Britain and France in mandates after Versailles. The two together would give him territory covering nearly 330,000 square miles with a population of roughly 4,784,000, producing rubber and palm oils, and capable of very large development. Two small Spanish colonies, Spanish Guinea and Hernando Po, lie next door, and might, it is thought, be bought without much trouble.

But Hitler is not going about the business of securing colonial territory in a manner that is likely to persuade Britain to help him. If he gets any such concession, it will not be by way of threats or of such transparent games as he is reputed to be playing today. The last thing in the world Britain is likely to do is to consent to give him any mandated territory under pressure. Doubtless in the German press the wish is father to the thought that prompts such suggestions. But in that case the German press is doing the German cause no good at all, but harm.

CASE FOR WEST.

(Vancouver Sun)

THE people of the Prairie West are in somewhat the same condition of mind today as those of the Maritimes were a dozen years ago. They have had a hard time economically. They have suffered from drought and windstorms and fungus and insect plagues. They have had to accept low prices for their staple product. With wheat selling at 25 cents a bushel at the elevator, they have been expected to keep the engagements made when wheat was $1.25. For reasons that seem obvious to them, and which they think should be obvious to anybody, they have not been able to keep their engagements. They have not been thriving on their distress; they have been suffering, and their standard of living has gone down until, as the Governor-General has put it, they are living below the standard of civilization for a modern community... It is not only for the sake of the West that something should be done. The West is the market place of the industrial East. As the Edmonton Journal points out, the East never got into its stride industrially until the West opened up, and its industries have suffered since the West's purchasing power has dwindled. It would be well for the whole country to get at the bottom of the difficulty and work out some new plan. After all, the country can not hope to make much progress if only part of it is on its feet.

A FRENCH GUESS.

(L'Oeuvre, Paris)

ROOSEVELT'S re-election has not been greeted with a welcome everywhere. For instance, it has undeniably created a certain amount of uneasiness in Great Britain. It is well known in London that President Roosevelt is immensely popular in Canada. It may well be that at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, to be held next year in London, the Canadian representatives will insist on closer co-operation of their country with the United States in order to satisfy Canadian public opinion. This may seriously affect Empire relations, as Canada will then gradually fall under the influence of the United States.

Never-Never Newspapers.

From the London Times.)

IT IS curious how almost invariably inept are attempts to portray, on the stage or the screen, anything connected with the press. The most elaborate structure of verisimilitude rarely survives the appearance of a journalist among the dramatic personae. That obstrusive notebook, those obsequious or offensive manners, those artless questions—by how wide a margin (as perhaps a few of the audience suspect) do they fail to reflect reality.

Londoners recently had an opportunity of seeing an American film depicting the career of Florence Nightingale, in which the hero—in sofar as it had a hero—was the Times war correspondent in the Crimea. He was a splendid specimen of the stage journalist. We saw him as he followed Miss Nightingale round the terrible wards at Scutari, writing his despatches as he went along. Leaning gracefully against a wall, he dashed off his impassioned phrases with unfaltering fluency and in a copybook hand.

Small wonder that his revelations convulsed the British Cabinet, composed though it was very largely of Americans. Small wonder that crowds gathered outside the office of this journal, which were labelled, in case there should be any mistake about it, The London Times. Our correspondent was a model of his kind.

Most dramatists and most filmproducers have odd ideas about the style in which newspapers are written, and it is very rare to hear a character read any extract from the press in a form in which it could conceivably have been published in real life.

From this criticism American films are partially exempted, for they frequently show us a front page whose appearance, though improbable is not impossible. Sometimes they even overdo it. The lavish columns devoted to events which are relevant to the plot are flanked by news items which, although wholly unconnected with the film, distract our curiosity. They do not look, from the glimpse we have of them, particularly interesting; indeed the director of the film has probably done his best to make them dull. But there they are, plausibly recording news of an imaginary world—a world which, since we have not been invited to imagine it, is even something less than imaginary. They hint intriguingly at the existence of a cosmos of sub-puppets, and our attention strays for a moment from the actors on the screen to their alleged contemporaries.

They are, in most cases, our contemporaries too; yet they live in a world whose current history is—from its press at any rate—not to be identified with ours. It is impossible not to cherish a vain and irrational hope that one day the editors of these so non-committal journals will rebel against their creators and, regaining their sense of proportion, dismiss the heroine's predicament, in a paragraph and give us some really important news from Cloud Cuckooland.

No Reason For High Hat.

(From the Monetary Times.)

WITH NINE months of the fiscal year past it would appear that Mr. C. A. Dunning, Finance Minister of the Dominion, is likely to keep the deficit of the country this year within the limit he named in his budget speech last spring, when he budgeted for a deficit of $100,000,000. This is gratifying insofar as it goes, but it must be kept in mind both by our legislators and the people of the country that while this will mark a step in the right direction, there is still a long way to go before our finances will be on a sound basis.

In the first place the result aimed at this year, if attained, will leave the budget still unbalanced by $100,000,000, which is quite a tidy sum of money even when you say it quickly. There is still a balanced budget to achieve. The Government announced its intention "to end in the shortest practicable time the era of recurring deficits" and this intention is one that will receive the support of everybody, but it cannot be attained without hard work. Revenues are increasing, but that is no reason why expenditures should not be scrutinized closely until they are in a reasonable with the income. Then it must be borne in mind that a balanced budget is only a present, but not the ultimate aim. The ultimate aim is to bring about a condition that will make it possible to pay off a part of the national debt. It is not likely that it will ever all be paid off, but it should certainly be reduced to more reasonable proportions in relation to the population, so that the burden of interest charges will not be as heavy, as they are now at $138,500,000 in the last fiscal year.

The reduction of the deficit to $100,000,000 and the balancing of the budget when it comes, while satisfactory in a degree, will not be achievements to justify the Government or the people getting "high-hat," as long as there is a little debt of around three billion dollars outstanding.

Fathers Come Into Their Own.

(From the Brockville Recorder and Times.)

A REALLY worth-while innovation is reported from San Francisco, where a special room for the accommodation of prospective fathers is to be incorporated in the plans for the maternity wing of a new hospital. It will be, we presume, of sufficient size to permit continuation of the floor-pacing which is associated with waiting for the verdict, and suitable reading-matter is to be provided on the future care of the baby, particularly as to bathing and dressing. Nothing, however, is said about the equipment of these quarters with smelling-salts or the odd tot of liquor for use in the event of dual or triple births being announced.

Because fathers are usually the "forgotten men" of the maternity wards, we hail this innovation with delight. Fathers are customarily considered to be in the way when a birth is in the offing. They were just tolerated by women relatives of the mother and by the doctor and nurses in attendance. In consequence of this, they are usually shoved into any vacant room or cubby-hole which may be available and there left pretty much to their own devices, waiting and worrying and pacing for the news that takes so long to arrive. Nobody seems to think that fathers under these circumstances are worth much consideration. But there would seem to be a movement under way to permit them to come into their own, and we hail the father's room as something which has been long overdue and which ought to be incorporated in any new maternity unit which is built.

It is a happy thought, too, on the part of the San Francisco people to put such suitable reading-matter at the disposal of the waiting fathers, for nowadays most of them are expected to be thoroughly conversant with everything that has to be done for their offspring, not excluding the rather frequent change of clothing that is required. By all means, they should be placed in possession of the latest and most scientific information bearing upon the all-important question of caring for the child, because very often they have to look after it when the mother goes to the movies or a tea-fight or bridge. But it is just a question if the state of mind in which fathers customarily find themselves when they are usually expecting the worst from the operating-room will permit them to absorb much of the information thus made available.

THOSE CONTRACTS.

(Windsor Star)

THE MATTER has been carried to what is sometimes referred to as "the foot of the Throne." The Judicial Committee of His Majesty's Privy Council will decide the validity of the legislation. But Mr. Hepburn does not want to take a chance on an adverse decision. He is racing ahead of the legal men of London by calling the M. L. A.'s together on January 19 to pass further legislation, bolstering his cancellation of the power contracts. The chances are he will win this race, though a Tory filibuster may delay him. But it is really only a preliminary canter. The so-called "power barons" will doubtless challenge Mr. Hepburn's proposed legislation in the law courts. This case, too, may find its way to the foggy banks of the Thames. In the great power war there seems little hope of being out of the trenches by Christmas—next Christmas, or even the one after that.

NATURE HELPS.

(Oshawa Times)

WHEN nature takes a hand in assisting mankind she usually does a good job. Others would go further than that and say the Divine Creator does things well. Three years ago Canada had millions of bush a of wheat which was at the mercy of world buyers. But today the wheat situation is changed. It is a seller's not a buyers' market and prices have gone soaring.

Nature has taken a hand in the wheat market and short crops in Germany and Italy are reported with the result that these two countries are importing wheat. There was a time when Italy could and did produce more wheat than the country could use. It might be unkind to say that both these countries have been so engrossed in the manufacture of war munitions and other preparations that the agricultural side of the economic question has been neglected. However the fact remains that field crops are short and Canada is in a position to supply most of the demand. The disposal of 100,000,000 bushels between now and the next crop arrives will give a great impetus to the general prosperity of Canada and there is every indication that the export of this amount of wheat will be made.

The west has had several lean years but with the prospects of better prices what the wheat areas need next year is a good crop. The people of the west are living in hope and with one extra good year, followed by average years, the west should come back into its own.

SHE HAS A PROBLEM.

(Montreal Star)

FOR YEARS past New Zealand has been regarded as the most advanced unit in the British Empire in the matter of experimental legislation. During 1936, however, she has crowded more experimentalization into her administration than ever before, and the results are being watched with close interest by the other component parts of the Empire as well as by foreign countries. In order that her objectives may be more clearly understood, it is necessary to bear in mind that New Zealand is in more ways than one in a unique position, economically speaking. She has a population of one and a half million which is no longer growing through immigration; she is dependent more than any other country upon external trade, since she concentrates her economic activities mainly upon four closely related agricultural products,—butter, cheese, meat and wool, which constitute virtually her entire export, while the bulk of her imports are manufactured goods. In value of exports per head of population she leads the whole Empire.

TRINITY AUXILIARY INCREASES BUDGET

Increase Of Ten Per Cent. In Remittances Made By Elizabeth Parker Auxiliary

"Missionary work among women and children" was the theme of a very interesting meeting of the Elizabeth Parker Auxiliary of Trinity United Church, which was held on Monday evening in the ladies' parlor.

Bible passages on the topic, "Jesus Among the Women," were read by Mrs. C. R. Pogue, Miss Esme Thomlinson, Mrs. B. V. Moore and Mrs. H. Clifton. A paper read by Mrs. H. Beatty dealt with the relative position given to women by the different religions of the world. In none other than Christianity is her place any but a very low one. A prayer by Mrs. A. Ray Brown completed the service of worship. Several stories and extracts from missionaries' letters were read from the study book, "Men and Women of Far Horizons," by Miss Edith Preston.

Reports for the year just completed showed that splendid progress has been made. The treasurer reported that $318 had been remitted, an increase of ten per cent. Twenty-five visits were made by the strangers' committee and 18 bouquets and three additional floral tributes were sent out. An increase in membership was also noted.

At the close of the business session the officers for the ensuing year were installed. Out of respect for the memory of the late president, Mrs. A. Parker, who passed away recently and who had held that office for over twenty years, the election of a president has been deferred until a later date. Officers elected were: Honorary President, Mrs. R. F. Downey; First Vice-President, Miss Olive Armstrong; Second Vice-President, Miss Ila Giles; Recording Secretary, Miss M. Edwards; Corresponding Secretary, Miss E. Thomlinson; Treasurer, Miss W. Skuce; Temperance Secretary, Miss M. Sargent; Envelope Secretary, Miss E. Preston; Flower Secretary, Mrs. W. Derry.

A social half-hour with Miss Edith Preston, Miss Myrtle Sargent, Mrs. H. Beatty and Miss Helen Henry as hostesses brought the evening to a close.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 13. — Reports of plans afoot in Great Britain to accumulate food reserves in the event of war did much on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday to stimulate late rallies in wheat prices. The close was ½ cent lower to unchanged. Prior to the pre-closing recovery movement, selling induced by a lessening of political tension abroad had sent prices more than 1½ cents lower.

Helpful to the reaction also was a pick-up in Canadian wheat export sales. It was estimated 300,000 bushels had been sold for immediate shipment, with a similar quantity sold for movement at the opening of navigation on the Great Lakes.

Interest in high grades of wheat enlivened cash-grains trading. May barley advanced to a season's high price of 85¼ cents to highlight operations in coarse grains, where the trend closely followed that of wheat. Barley was up more than 2 cents.

Canada Cement Pays Dollar Share Dividend

TORONTO, Jan. 13.—Indication of the improvement in the affairs of Canada Cement is found in official action by which a dollar dividend has been declared on the preferred stock, payable March 30, to holders of record February 28. Official word adds that the financial statement for the fiscal year ending November 30 has been considered and approved, and it is assumed the preference declaration has been based on the year's advance.

Latest word on actual earning position in 1936 was to be found in connection with redemption of the 5½ per cent. first mortgage bonds at 104 in November. It pointed out that for the eight months ending July 31, consolidated profits from operations were $1,329,063 before depreciation, bond interest and income taxes, compared with $963,108 for the corresponding period of 1935.

Saving on interest charges on the latest bond issue, brought out in September and dated November 1, to replace the old 5½ per cent. issue, will be held over until the current fiscal year.

Latest official report, on operations for the 1935 fiscal year, showed earnings of 19 cents a share on the 6½ per cent. preference stock. Back in 1928-29, earnings were $7.62 a share. Preferred arrears amounted to $39.25 a share on November 30. Following announcement of the $1 declaration, stock market action locally lifted the issue to a new high of $106⅛.

G-Men Begin Intensive Hu nt As Kidnapped Boy Found

All the strength of the United States G-man forces were turned loose in a hunt for the kidnapper and slayer of 10-year-old Charles Mattson of Tacoma, Washington, when the boy's battered and lifeless body was found in the snow 50 miles from his home. Held back while the lad's father, Dr. William Mattson, sought to contact the kidnapper and affect safe release of his son, the forces of city, state and federal law swept into the hunt with a grim determination to find and punish the brutal slayer. At the LEFT is one of the experts at work. John E. Flint, police fingerprint expert, studies a cup from which a man who resembled descriptions of the bearded kidnapper drank coffee in a Seattle restaurant. At the RIGHT is a picture of the slain boy.

CONVERSION CASE HEARD IN COURT

Judge Smoke Reserves Judgment In Case Against Roger McMillan

The decision of Judge Sheldon Smoke was deferred until January 26 when trial of Roger McMillan of Norwood on a charge of theft by conversion had been concluded in the County Criminal Court Tuesday afternoon. Two further charges of a similar nature are to be pressed by the Crown on that date.

Evidence to show that McMillan, as employee and collector of William A. Richardson, Norwood insurance agent, collected $10 from E. J. Fitzgerald of Otonabee on August 18, 1936, and, remitting $5 to the Richardson agency, failed to account for the remaining $5, was adduced by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. Mr. Fitzgerald testified to having paid McMillan the $10 and stated he was given a receipt for it. Elizabeth Douglas, bookkeeper at the agency office, identified a ledger entry indicating receipt of $5, but swore she had no knowledge of the remaining $5 being paid. She said, under cross examination, that such an entry would normally be made in the office day book, but might have been made directly into the ledger if Richardson were present. Richardson denied any recollection of having received the money in question from McMillan.

Called to the box in his defence by his counsel, T. J. Carley, K.C., McMillan admitted having received the $10 from Fitzgerald and said he remitted it to the firm, but could not recall whether he had given the money to Richardson or to Miss Douglas. He sometimes gave collections to Richardson at the employer's home when he would return from his collection rounds in the evening, he said. J. E. Thompson, clerk of the Division Court at Norwood; Sam. H. Buck, reeve of Asphodel, and W. H. Montgomery, former Peterborough County warden and 1935 reeve of Norwood, gave character evidence, all swearing McMillan to have a good reputation for honesty.

Addressing Judge Smoke when the evidence was in, Mr. Carley suggested the accused gave the $10 to Richardson at his home, and that Richardson deposited $5, forgetting the other $5. He suggested also that the prosecution was pressed by Richardson in order to queer McMillan's reputation, Richardson fearing that McMillan would get a certain other insurance agency for Norwood which he himself was seeking. The normal course for Richardson to have taken in the matter would be first to confront McMillan with the accusation that he had failed to account for $5 rather than seek immediately to lay a charge, he said.

Crown Attorney McElderry submitted it was a clear case of theft by conversion.

A charge of converting $5 of $10 received from John Morgan of Warsaw and a charge of converting sums of $10 and $2 received from Allan Hayes and Lorne Lonsberry of Otonabee are still to be tried.

the shortage left Canada with building requirements of $347,500,000 in houses alone.

Mr. Moore said also of 59,000 families on relief in cities having populations of more than 25,000, nine per cent live in one room and 11 per cent in two, regardless of the sizes of the families.

He based his estimate of the housing shortage on the premise there are about 2,000,000 houses in the country with average life of 50 years, so that each year about 30,000 houses should be replaced. During the last five years, he declared, not more than half that number had been built annually at an average cost of $3,300.

The need, both for greater use of the Dominion Housing Act and extension of financial aid to provide low-rental houses, is an immediate requirement," he declared.

Mr. Moore said the commission had reached the conclusion it must look to a revised unemployment service in its low-range view of the employment problem to obtain the best results.

Plan Working Out.

He declared public response to the Home Improvement Plan had been "exceedingly encouraging" and noted that in the first month of its operation 2,500 loans were approved for a total of $1,000,000. He saw no difficulty in eventually finding use for the $50,000,000 available to the public under the loan scheme.

The commissioner said in the last 10 years practically no houses of a type which would rent for sums within reach of the worker earning comparatively low wages had been built, "with the result that overcrowding in unsuitable quarters has become prevalent in practically all cities," constituting "both a menace to health and safety."

GORDON FRASER NEW PRESIDENT TOURIST BODY

Waterway Association backed the motor boat route, and backed the wrong horse. This association is backing the motor route and we feel we are backing the right horse."

Declaring that as director of The Canadian Travel Bureau he had for the past three years been trying to bring about the formation of such organizations as The Kawartha Lakes District Tourist Association, Mr. Dolan complimented the executive, and believed the Association would result in a great increase of tourist traffic to the district.

He described the tourist trade as "Canada's greatest export industry" and said it took precedence over wheat, newsprint, etc. He was all for such group organizations for the obvious reason that it would stop petty jealousies and rivalry between neighbouring towns and communities and would consolidate them for the common good.

Offers Support.

"So far as the Canadian Travel Bureau is concerned", Mr. Dolan declared, "this Association can be assured of the bureau's wholehearted support. My outlook as director is naturally national and you cannot expect the bureau to do it all for you, but we will cooperate with you."

He urged the members of the Association to grasp the idea they are not working for Lindsay alone, nor for Peterborough or any other individual community but in the interests of the entire Kawartha district, and reading from some of the comments of United States tourists, he asked them to bear in mind the necessity of keeping Canada as a distinctive recreational ground. "Keep it strictly Canadian. Do not Americanize it", he stated.

Mr. Dolan discussed with the Association the fish and game phase of the tourist industry and stressed its importance from the tourist standpoint. He believed that Mr. Taylor, deputy minister of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries is fully alive to the needs of fish culture and restocking of Ontario waters.

Acknowledges Cooperation.

Mr. Hambleton referred briefly to the booklet issued by the Ontario government for the years 1936-37 as the finest ever put out, and he felt the Kawarthas "got a break" from the publicity standpoint. He acknowledged the cooperation he had received in this regard from James J. Dorris, secretary-manager of Peterborough Chamber of Commerce.

He was glad to see the formation of the Kawartha Lakes District Tourist Association and he hinted that there is a strong possibility of the Ontario government taking moving pictures in this district as part of its tourist publicity program.

Endorsing all that had previously been said about the urgent need of the conservation of game and fish and the restocking of Ontario waters Mr. Hambleton commented on water levels. Declaring that if the Hydro Electric Power Commission is going to be permitted to raise and lower water levels from four to eight feet as had been unofficially reported, he spoke of it as being a matter for immediate action on the part of the Association and said the support of the Ontario Travel Bureau could be counted on in any representations that might be made to the government.

Anglers Represented.

S. R. Alger, president of the Ontario Association of Anglers assured the organization of full-hearted support. He agreed that the matter of water levels was a matter requiring immediate action.

William Newman, M.L.A., congratulated the organization and endorsed Mr. Dolan's plea to "keep Canada Canadian." He assured the Association of his enthusiastic support.

Other speakers included Fred R. Marshall, former game and fisheries officer for Peterborough County; Wallace Harvey, president of Peterborough Fish and Game Association; Bruce McNevin, M.P., Victoria, Walter M. Fowlds of Hastings, old stalwart of the Trent Waterway Association, T. H. Stinson, K.C., Lindsay and others. Messages of regret were received from J. J. Duffus, M.P., and T. P. Lancaster, M.L.A.

NEW YORK DRAWS ON OLD ENGLAND FOR GOOD SHOWS

Canadian - Born Talent Has Part In Successes of Broadway Stage Plays

SUCCESSFUL ON ROAD

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (CP) — Amidst returning prosperity, Broadway finds itself at the turn of the year with a dearth of plays of its own, and turns to revivals and whatever it has been able to import from across the seas.

Few revenue-producing plays have the native stamp. Big names are the chief magnet for the increasing flow of gold to the box office. For the first time in several years, two Hamlets are playing to packed houses. Nazimova brings back Ibsen in modern settings, and the D'Oyly Carte company from England since late summer has been doing the Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire.

There has been a fair representation of Canadians in the successful shows this year. Walter Huston's reception on the road in "Othello" foreshadows a successful run for the Torontonian on Broadway. Helen Trenholme, former star with the Montreal Repertory Theatre, has a supporting role in Victoria Regina which, after a summer recess, has resumed with no prospect of an early closing.

Florence McGee, formerly of Oakville, Ont., is on the road in that successful play "The Children's Hour." Lucile Watson of Ottawa is starred with Wilfred Lawson and Eva Le Gallienne in "Prelude to Exile," which deals with one of Richard Wagner's love affairs. Constance Tompkinson from Nova Scotia, who had a part in the spring success, "Libel," has gone to London.

Brenda Bennett of Winnipeg is singing the sharply-articulated songs of the Savoy operas with the D'Oyly Carte company and if the public had its way probably would continue to do so indefinitely. But the D'Oyly Carte people will be on the road very soon ,then back to London for the spring season.

A feature of the year has been the large number of biographical plays produced, some very successfully. Helen Hayes, portraying Queen Victoria in a sparkling series of vignettes from the Queen's life, continues to gross around $20,000 weekly after 350 performances.

Maurice Evans had no luck in his study of Napoleon, nor Henry Hull as Edgar Allen Poe, nor George Curzon as Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish home rule leader. But the trend continues. Wilfred Lawson, a distinguished personality of the London stage, at present is appearing in a play dealing with the life of Richard Wagner, and the early future promises Ronald Colman as Byron.

Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence have come from London with a series of the former's one-act plays, and are doing three a night before delighted audiences. This troupe set something of a post-depression high when they opened with a box office top of $11 a seat for the first night.

Of the two Hamlets much is being written. John Gielgud, for several years London's most popular shakespearian actor, appears to be drawing the more serious audiences, while the women flock to see Leslie Howard in the other. More Shakespearian entertainment is provided with the opening of the Canadian, Walter Huston, in Othello. But Shakespeare may well be indifferently received on Broadway. Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale kept open but a week or two in Othello and MacBeth. The Lunts in their own rollicking interpretation of "The Taming of the Shrew" had a good run.

One play that continues to pay its way, however meagrely, is "Tobacco Road," dealing with the sharecroppers' squalid life in the Southern United States. It is now in its fourth year, in second position in the list of Broadway's longest-run shows. "Abie's Irish Rose" is still far ahead.

Among shows now in their second year are Sidney Kingsley's "Dead End," a play anent New York's tenement life and the comedy "Boy Meets Girl." The season is quite short on musicals, with Jimmy Durante in "Red, Hot and Blue," and Fanny Brice in a new edition of the Ziegfeld Follies providing the best entertainment along this line.

FALL-MADE CHEESE MUST BE IMPROVED TO HOLD MARKET

that area was exported value of such cheese as were bought and sold for export, was the basis price of cheese made at the same time and not exported.

It would appear that there should be some adequate legal control of the treatment cheese received in the factories and the length of time the cheese should stay there before being placed in boxes for shipment, he said.

The only control of shipment of cheese while still too immature, continued Mr. Singleton, was that the graders might refuse to grade such cheese, but this control had not been effective, and as yet the only action which had been taken had been to defer grading.

Shipped Day After Removal

Cheese, in some cases, was shipped from Ontario factories, the day following its removal from the hoop. Canada's greatest competitor in the cheese market in the United Kingdom was New Zealand, and while Canadian cheese might reach United Kingdom in from 12 to 14 days. New Zealand cheese would require about as many weeks to reach the same market. Yet the shipment of cheese from New Zealand was controlled by stringent legislation.

In New Zealand every owner or manager of a registered dairy in which full-cream cheese was manufactured was compelled by law to keep cheese manufactured during August and September on the shelf not less than 21 days before packing it or coating it with wax or allowing it to be packed or coated with wax for sale or export. During this period, the cheese had to be turned upside down once a day.

With respect to any cheese manufactured during any other month than August and September, the period of retaining the cheese on the shelf was not less than 14 days.

Even Temperature Kept.

Further, the owner or manager of the dairy was compelled to cause the air in every curing room containing cheese intended for removal within a month after its manufacture to be maintained at a temperature of not less than 55 degrees.

Mr. Hicks said the object of his British tour was to interview importers, wholesalers and distributors of Canadian cheese, to investigate complaints as to quality, and to secure information beneficial to the cheese industry of Canada.

With regard to complaints in Great Britain about immature fall-made cheese, Mr Hicks said it was evident that action taken in Canada during the fall of 1935 to have the Canadian fall-made cheese show more maturity when shipped had good results, as it was stated that October and November Canadian cheese were better than in previous years.

There were still in the United Kingdom some large importers who would not take a chance on October make. They claimed that the cheese did not break down properly and usually developed a bitter or other objectionable flavor, also the importers maintained their customers did not want it.

Mr. Hicks said he had explained to the importers the effort being made to improve the quality of Canadian fall-made cheese and also that the Canadian exporters were co-operating with the Dominion dairy and cold storage branch to improve the texture of the fall-made cheese by holding it in the warehouse at a higher temperature.

Trial Shipments Fair.

He had examined several shipments of the 1936 early October cheese in London, Liverpool, and Manchester and most of it appeared to be of fair quality. The importers stated that October cheese quality was satisfactory.

It was too green to pass an opinion as to how they would develop, but some was mouldy and appeared to have either been placed in wet boxes or exposed to heavy rain during transit. Other cheese had too much moisture and showed a weak, pasty texture and was breaking down too fast.

PAINS ALL OVER HIS BODY

Kruschen Made Him Feel a New Man.

Read the experience of this man who had rheumatism so badly that at times he was prevented from working:—

"About 10 months ago," he writes, "I suffered terribly with rheumatism and neuritis. The pains were all over my body and some days I could not even get up from bed to go to work. A friend visited me and suggested that I should try Kruschen Salts. I did so, the result being that the pains seemed to gradually disappear. I have been going to work ever since without a break, thanks to Kruschen Salts, and I feel a new man."—A.R.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

BOARD IS ASKED TO REMOVE CHILD FROM 'DIRTY' HOME

Doctor Hesitates To Return 13-Month-Old Child To Its Home

MAGISTRATE EXACTING

"The whole thing is too mixed up for me," declared Dr. R. F. Nott, a member of the Board of the Children's Aid Society, who, after making a plea for the removal of a child from a house that he termed "unfit for even a cat or a dog to live in," was met with argument against the feasibility of such removal, from both president and superintendent of the society, both basing their arguments on the fact that the magistrate requires so much, and so powerful, proof in such cases, as to make it almost impossible to remove a child from any home where it happens to be placed.

The regular meeting of the Board took place on Tuesday afternoon in the City Council Chamber, with the president, the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, in the chair.

At the conclusion of the regular business session, Dr. Nott brought to the attention of the Board the case of a 13-months'-old child that is at present in Nicholls Hospital and which he hesitates to return to the house from which it came. It is the baby boy of an unmarried mother who left it with these people who were designated as "filthy and immoral." The woman was at one time in court on a bigamy charge, according to John Edgar, who, however, declared that, to sustain a charge of immorality, the magistrate requires the evidence of someone who was present at the time the immorality was in progress, also that a neglect charge must be well proven also.

Rev. Dr. Barr, agreeing, said: "You must have evidence that it is a neglected child. That is one thing that we face in trying to make a child a ward: the necessity of someone going before the magistrate and giving that proof. And even then, the magistrate requires the evidence in black and white."

Dr. Nott: "What right have these people to this child?"

Mr. Edgar: "The mother handed it over to them."

Dr. Nott: "But surely you can't hand around children like bananas or oranges, to anybody—not in a decent country. I shudder to think of that child going back to that place."

Rev. P. J. Kelly was of the opinion that the fact that the woman in the house had been up for bigamy at one time and had, according to Dr. Nott's statement, lived with three men at one time or another, would be sufficient grounds for making a charge of immorality. Mrs. J. J. Lynch was also of the opinion that the child should be taken away from its present home.

The matter was left to John Edgar, for investigation.

Routine Business

The report of the superintendent, submitted by Mr. Edgar, showed a total of 21 children in the Shelter at the end of December, with 9 cases in the investigation report and one new case and one closed, during the month. One complaint was investigated and 8 children were made wards of the society.

In the Society, 89 children were under care at the first of December and 88 at the end. They were disposed as follows: Shelter, 19 wards and 2 children not wards; Free homes, 36; Adoption Probation, 3; Wage homes, 11; in institutions, 2; other societies in the city and county, 13. There were no new cases under the Unmarried Parents' Act.

One of the items of business was the consideration of a letter which Rev. Dr. Barr had received from Alderman Walter Stocker, a Board member, and which the former thought it was unnecessary to read in full. It was moved that the letter be received.

It was decided that no official of the Shelter should leave the city without the permission of the president or Mr. Edgar.

Rev. Dr. Barr remarked that the society was well within its allowance during the past month. It is allowed 75 cents per diem for each ward, whereas its expenditure in December was 70.55 ,a saving of almost 4½ cents per day.

The list of December donations was read by Miss Muriel Morrison, as follows: City of Peterborough, $25; Dr. G. W. CHIROPRACTOR

'Twas nobody's fault—just my folly,
I lifted a heavy weight,
I injured my spine and my shoulder,
Then suffered for months—but wait.

He took the pain out of my shoulder,
By working upon my spine;
He put the vertebrae into place,
And now I'm feeling fine.

I had long heard of chiropractic,
But little knew what it meant;
"Experience is the best teacher,"
That's why I'm thankful I went.

A LIVE CATTERPILLAR

As another sign of the unusual spring-like weather conditions Bobbie Currie, Water and London streets, a pupil at the Central School captured a live and up-and-going caterpillar in the grass on Waterford street this morning. ICE HOUSES FILLED

SCARES OFF INTRUDER

Householders might do well these nights to see that their doors are securely fastened. A Gilmour street resident arrived home Tuesday night around 10 o'clock in time to scare off an intruder who had made his way into the rear of the house. He had evidently just arrived for nothing had been disturbed when the sound of the owner's key in the front door gave the alarm and the man made his escape through the back yard.

HUNTING RACCOONS AT NIGHT ILLEGAL

Unlawful To Discharge Gun At Night Where Game Usually Found

Racoon hunters who do their shooting during night prowls in the woods are committing a serious infraction of the Ontario Game and Fisheries Laws. "Coon" hunters may not know this fact, but ignorance of the law fails as an excuse.

Section 37 of Part 7 of the Game and Fisheries Laws of the province states, "It shall be unlawful for any person to discharge any air-gun, gun or fire-arm in any locality where game is usually found between sunset on Saturday night and sunrise on Monday morning following or between sunset and sunrise at any other time."

This fact was mentioned at a recent executive meeting of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association. "It is too bad that persons who engage in hunting and fishing don't take the trouble to study the game and fish laws," was the comment of a veteran sportsman member of the association. "It often saves serious trouble."

It follows that the only legal method to hunt "coons" at night is to tree them and then club, which was admitted to be a very crude and inhumane method.

However, wild life of most kinds has become so scarce in the district that it was suggested at the same executive meeting of the Fish and Game Association that it might be necessary to close hunting for everything but rabbits and foxes for several years. This would not affect the deer which have been increasing in numbers in this district in recent years.

The question of a closed season may be further discussed at the annual meeting of the association Friday evening in the Chamber of Commerce. Many problems touching the conservation of fish and wild life will be discussed at this important session.

Mercy Flight Saves 35 Miners From Starvation

Snowbound for nine days in the Panamint range of mountains in California, with food running low, and with six-foot snowdrifts blocking efforts of rescuers, 35 miners in an isolated mining camp in Inyou county were saved from possible freezing and starvation when a California National Guard aeroplane dropped more than 600 pounds of supplies and provisions for them. The aeroplane is seen in the UPPER LEFT hand corner as it swept over the snowbound camp and dropped its burden. At the TOP RIGHT are shown National Guardsmen pilots packing the machine for its mercy flight.

KIWANIS CLUBS EXCHANGE IDEAS

Peterborough And Lindsay Executives Hold Joint Meeting

CLUB COMPETITION

LINDSAY, Jan. 13.—A fine spirit of Kiwanis co-operation was evidenced Monday night when a number of members of the Peterborough Club sat in with the executive of the Lindsay club at a business meeting. A large number of problems were discussed, the chairmen of Peterborough committees exchanging ideas with the chairmen of Lindsay committees, with a view to improving the work of both clubs and accomplishing something worth while in the year 1937. The Peterborough visitors included: President Al. Sharpe, Vice-President Jack Pettit and Kiwanians D. Fitzgerald, Ed. Smith and Jack Comstock. President J. W. Deyell of the Lindsay Club presided.

Among matters discussed was the forthcoming Musical Festival to be held in Victoria County in May, details of which are being worked out by the Victoria County Musical Festival Association. This event promises to be one of the educational features of the year's work.

Peterborough members announced that that Club intended sponsoring an Inter-Club attendance contest between Oshawa, Belleville, Peterborough and Lindsay and that a handsome shield would be offered for competition. The competition is to start this month. Various matters concerning attendance were discussed and it was definitely decided by the Lindsay Club (as already decided by the Peterborough Club) to enforce the attendance rule. Any member missing four consecutive meetings will be automatically dropped from the Club.

Members of the Peterborough delegation reported that the Electric City Club planned to establish a Potato Club and a Junior Farming judging competition in Peterborough County.

In boys work the Peterborough Club intends fostering the idea of a new wading pool for kiddies. The Club boys work is centred chiefly around the Jackson Camp for boys.

Visitors from Peterborough also urged the Lindsay Club to co-operate with the Ministerial Association in the matter of religious education of the youth of the town.

Tourist Expects To Find Comforts William Newman Tells Association

(By Staff Reporter.)

LINDSAY, Jan. 13.— In lauding the rare beauty of his own constituency which he presented as a section of Ontario which is rich in large unspoiled areas of mountain and forest scenery, William Newman, provincial member for Victoria and Haliburton, had some constructive criticism to offer the members of the Kawartha Lakes District Tourist Association.

Speaking at the first dinner meeting of the Association held at Lindsay on Tuesday night, Mr. Newman urged the need of hotel and summer resort owners, particularly in the more isolated sections, providing adequate comforts for the tourists. He particularly stressed the importance of proper toilet conveniences and baths, and said contrary to popular opinion the American tourist expects to find the same comforts to which he is accustomed at home.

As a case in point he mentioned that up near Wilberforce last summer he knew of American tourists who paid ten dollars a cake for ice, which had to be shipped in. They used ice at the rate of two cakes per week.

That he said was a condition that should not exist, and so soon as he had finished his own ice-cutting he intended to send his ice cutting machine to Wilberforce district and have them lay in a stock of ice for the convenience of American tourists next summer.

There is plenty of ice to be obtained in the winter, he said, and all that is required for proper storage is a shed and lots of sawdust. "Why," he asked, "should tourists be asked to pay ten dollars a cake for ice?" It was most unreasonable and just one of the things that tended to keep people away from a district that has been fully endowed by nature with unsurpassed scenic beauty.

MISSION CIRCLE OF ST. JAMES' MEETS

First Meeting Of Year Is Held At Home Of Miss Zetta Wood

The X.L. Mission Circle held its first meeting of the New Year Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Zetta Wood, Lansdowne Street.

The newly-elected president, Jessie Martin, was in the chair. A brief New Year's message was brought by Connie Wagar, who used the word ""Circle" to symbolize the ideals toward which the members might strive, and which included Cheerfulness, Interest, Realities, Consecration, Learning and Enthusiasm.

The Scripture lesson, read by Mrs. R. Kitchen, was in keeping with this theme.

At this initial meeting of the year, business, of necessity, occupies a large share of the program and plans were laid for adopting a more definite budget each month. A membership drive was also outlined, and meetings arranged for the remainder of the year. Delegates to the Presbyterial meeting were appointed in the persons of Mrs. A. Roseborough and May Welch. A letter of sincere thanks from Mrs. Wagar, the advisory president, for the gift of a lovely jar and bouquet of roses at Christmas was read by the corresponding secretary.

Educational phases of missionary endeavor in many fields were dealt with in an enlightening manner by Jean Hammond, who told many interesting illustrations of the fine work being accomplished. Using the map, the speaker referred to the various countries under discussion.

A happy hour of social fellowship followed, when contests were enjoyed. A delightful lunch was served by the hostesses in charge, Misses Jean Rose, Jennie Smart and Mrs. R. C. Searles.

PERSONS UNKNOWN WHO BURNED CROSS

No Further Developments In Cross-Burning Incident Are Reported

Provincial police and Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., report that no further developments in the cross burning incident, which is believed to have been an attempt on the part of some person or persons unknown to scare G. Woodcock 62-year-old North Dummer resident out of the district, Woodcock was recently aroused at night to find a burning cross outside his house. Police are disinclined to believe the incident has any connection with the Ku Klux Klan. The Klan has seldom been heard of in this district since in March, 1926, a man who represented himself to be organizer of the K.K.K. for the British Empire with full authority in Peterborough, Millbrook and other local centres was given at Cobourg 18 months in Ontario Reformatory. Charges under which the accused was convicted and sentenced arose out of alleged threats to publish defamatory libel.

ALD. GORDON LAUDS LIBERAL MEMBER

Congratulates J. J. Duffus On Activity In Arranging Conference

Alderman G. N. Gordon met with a nice reception, when, introduced by Alex Elliott, chairman, he addressed the guests at the Liberal party on Tuesday evening, in an interlude devoted to a few brief speeches by prominent members of the party.

Mr. Gordon congratulated J. J. Duffus, M.P., on his activity in arranging a conference to consider new quarters for the Post Office, Customs House, Trent Canal and Weights and Measures services, owing to crowded conditions in the present buildings.

Mr. Gordon said: "Toryism frequently gets itself mixed in with the ideas of both parties, so that the leaders develop a reactionary complex which prevents them from seeing in the true light what are really the rights of other people, and also prevents them from realizing their obligations in sharing with those less fortunately placed than themselves."

Mr. Gordon termed as a first-class example of this tendency, in Alderman Stocker's "Keep off the grass" signs in the parks. These public parks were really intended for the purpose of providing air and rest for their patrons, and a place where children might play on the grass, while the conception which deprived people of these rights was contrary to our established forms of democracy.

FROGS PLENTIFUL RICE LAKE AREA

Frogs' Legs Served In Toronto Come From Rice Lake Marshes

Frogs' legs which are served so expensively in Toronto hotels come from this district, although few residents of Peterborough may be aware of this fact.

The ways of the frog-hunter are not known to many, and he may be said to have one of the strangest occupations plied in the district. Night is when he works and a flashlight is the main tool of his vocation. The marshlands of the Otonabee and Rice Lake are his stamping grounds.

However, complaints have been received that the activities of the frog hunters have spoiled the duck shooting at Rice Lake for hundreds of duck hunters during the past several seasons. The lights of the busy frog hunters along the marshes night after night so frighten the ducks that they refuse to spend their nights at Rice Lake, once their favorite resting place.

If the frog hunters will only stay off the marshes during the brief duck shooting season, the hunters will be satisfied.

This matter forms a big problem for duck hunters, it is understood, and will probably be discussed at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association to be held in the Chamber of Commerce at 7.30 Friday evening. The Department may be asked to pass regulations for this district making the use of lights by frog hunters illegal during the duck shooting season.

The Rambling REPORTERS

THEY WERE ALL THERE.

"A lot of them voted C.C.F. at the last election," declared a voluble gentleman at the Liberal party in the Legion Hall on Tuesday evening. He indicated members of the orchestra with a wave of the hand. "And look at him! He's a red-hot Conservative," pointing to another assistant of the evening. "And over there is the nephew of the Conservative member down in Havelock." "That leaves the Stevenites out of the picture," said his listener. "No, I can spot a couple of them too," asserted the talkative guy.—C.L.M.

A STRANGE CONNECTION

There seems to be little or no connection between the full dress headgear of His Majesty's Brigade of Guards and the lordly moose that roam the forests of New Brunswick. But James W. Geraghty of this city claims his native province owes the sport of moose hunting to British army authorities. When he spent his youth in N.B., Mr. Geraghty declares there were few if any moose. Moose and bears are not found together and the latter had the upper hand. After the British army council placed large orders for bearskins which practically rid N.B. of its black bears and provided the picturesque headdress of the British Guardsmen, the moose had a chance to propogate and did so.

YOUTH IS GIVEN ONE-YEAR TERM

John Callaghan Is Sentenced—Pleaded Guilty To Robbery

WOODCOCK SENTENCED

"I am taking into consideration the fact that you are only 19 years of age. I do not know if you are determined to lead a life of crime, but I trust this may serve as a lesson to you," declared Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this (Wednesday) morning in sentencing John Callaghan to one year determinate in Ontario Reformatory, with an indeterminate term not to exceed one year.

Callaghan, first of a quartette of prisoners to appear on remand before His Worship, pleaded not guilty to charges of breaking and entering and theft at Schneider Brothers store, and not guilty to a further charge of breaking and entering and theft at Childerhose radio store, on his original appearance last week. This morning, however, he changed his plea to one of guilty.

Alexander Smith, 21, said to be formerly of Cobourg appearing on a charge of receiving goods alleged to have been stolen from Schneider Brothers, was further remanded on a plea of guilty until Friday morning.

Volney Woodcock, on a plea of guilty to a charge of breaking and entering and theft at D. Florence's junk yard, was sentenced to three months' determinate with an indeterminate term not to exceed three months. Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., read out previous convictions including three months at Guelph for breaking and entering and 30 days for chicken stealing.

Facing a similar charge of breaking and entering and theft at the Florence junk yard, Dennis Plumpton on a plea of guilty, was further remanded until Friday.

Intimating that he proposes to place Plumpton on suspended sentence His Worship asked the youth if his father would go on his bond.

"I don't know," Plumpton replied.

"Aren't you living with your father?" the magistrate queried.

"I was," Plumpton said, "but I don't know whether I will be in the future."

It was stated on Plumpton's behalf that he has no previous convictions, and that he was led to commit the offence charged by his companion.

TOWN IS HAPPY.

TRENTON, N.S., Jan. 13 (C.P.).—Business is booming in the steel and car plants of this little industrial town and the town councillors are happy. A good many unemployed have found jobs in the last three months and in that time the town's relief costs have been reduced 65 per cent.

AGED BELL RINGER ST. JOHN'S CHURCH DIES AT HIS HOME

John Butcher For Half a Century Rang Bell At St. John's Church

INTERESTED IN MUSIC

For half a century the bell ringer at St. John's Anglican Church and active in numerous musical interests during his long residence here, John Butcher passed away at his home, 301 Burnham street, to-day. Succumbing after a slow decline in his health. He was 86 years of age.

He was born in Warminster, England, in 1850, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Butcher. When 14 years of age he came to Canada and joined a brother in farming near Lakefield, but soon gave up life on the farm to move to Peterborough.

Employment in the Auburn Woollens and the old Rogers' Flour Mill preceded his taking the post of sexton and bell ringer at St. John's Church, a post from which he retired in 1932, after serving just six months less than 50 years.

Music His Interest

Music was his chief interest. For many years he was organist at St. Luke's Anglican Church. He played also the piano, violin, flute and piccolo, and at one time directed an orchestra of his own organization here. Over a long period he played in the 57th Regiment band and served with the old Fire Brigade band.

Mr. Butcher was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters (Peterborough Court). He and Mrs. Butcher, who survives him, celebrated the 62nd anniversary of their wedding on September 30, 1936. They spent their entire married life at the home at 301 Burnham street.

Besides his wife, surviving Mr. Butcher are two sons, George R. Butcher and Alex. Butcher of this city, and three daughters, Mrs. John Scott and Mary A. Butcher of this city and Mrs. A. J. Tovey of Unity, Saskatchewan. One sister, Mrs. R. Carr, resides in Rochester.

The funeral will be held Friday from the late residence at 2 o'clock to St. John's Church for a service at 2.30 o'clock: Rev. W. P. Robertson and Rev. G. J. Bousfield officiating. Interment will be made in Little Lake Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

CALDER. — In loving memory of Alex. F. Calder, who departed this life, January 13, 1935.

Not dead our Dear One, though his days with us, on earth below are done.
The real life, in Paradise, the Higher life, is just begun.
From weary suffering, bravely borne, in God's good time came sweet release
And an entrance to the bright abode of Life, and Love, and Joy, and Peace.
He has reached that far off country where Life's glorious river flows:
Where the inhabitant no more, nor pain, nor death, or sickness knows.
With us, while life's brief span is spared, must the sad sense of loss remain
While his, beyond our farthest thought, the great, immeasurable gain.
The Christian's hope he firmly held; he knew no other trust or plea
Than Christ, The Saviour of the World, Who died for all on Calvary.
He kept the Faith, to Saints once given, waged nobly well life's strenuous strife.
And won, the victor's promised prize, a crown of everlasting life.
He honored God, His Day, His House, to worship in His Courts; his joy
Now in the Temple of the Skies, His Service is his blest employ.
His life by others might be read, as an epistle written clear.
The world was brighter for his smile; without him, oh, how lone and drear.
To us he never shall return; yet at Heaven's open pearly gate,
To give us gladsome welcome home, Dear Alex. will unwearied wait.
And that last raptured meeting will, more than a thousand-fold repay
All the bitter pang of parting, where the shadowy Jordan lay.
The narrow path, which led him home, so safely to Celestrial Bowers,
A path, that leads no foot astray, Thy Grace to follow, Lord be ours;
We never can forget him, though he's now with kindred souls, in realms of bliss
And they err, who deem he could forget, or be, of us, one hour remiss.
Until the Resurrection morn, he sleeps 'neath Warnar's sacred sod.
Where, forbidding life beyond the tomb, the flowers, he loved so dearly, nod.
We miss him sadly more and more with every morn's returning sun,
Still from our aching hearts would say: God gave, and took; His Will be done.

—S. Calder.

PETERBOROUGH WINTER SPORTS COMMITTEE

MORE TURF DOINGS DURING PAST YEAR THAN EVER BEFORE

Renewed Track Activity With More Races And Bigger Purses Sets New U.S. High

15,435 RACES RUN

By COL. MATT J. WINN
President of the American Turf Association

CHICAGO, Jan. 13—(AP)—The 1936 horse racing picture was a bright one From Seattle to Miami, and from Los Angeles to Salem, N. H., there was more racing activity than this country had ever before seen. Here and there was a dark spot, but the whole was one of increased attendance and larger mutuel play.

The extent of the sport can be realized when it is considered that over $12,500,000 was distributed to the horsemen during the United States season, with 15,435 races run over recognized tracks. Probably the most significant trend of the entire year was the raising of added money stakes events back to their predepression values. Leading the way was the Kentucky Derby, which carried $40,000 in added money last May, an increase of $10,000 over the previous renewal. When the Derby is run Saturday, May 8, at Churchill Downs, it will be endowed with $50,000 in added money, bringing it back to its highest previous value.

New Sensation

The year 1936 saw a new riding sensation, Basil James, from Sunnyside, Wash., come up to take the United States championship. It saw a new leader in the owners' ranks, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Oak Park, Ill., who finally reached the top with her extensive Milky Way farms stable. But it saw the same trainer, young Hirsch Jacobs of Brooklyn, again distance his field, shattering all records as he saddled an average of better than one winner every two days.

From a technical standpoint, the 1936 racing season was above average in the thoroughbreds which campaigned most successfully throughout the year. There was no shortage of good three-year-olds, though it was a sorry blow to the division when Morton L. Schwartz' Bold Venture, after winning both the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, went wrong and had to be retired for the year. His retirement left another new year-owned colt, William Woodward's Granville, undisputed king of the three-year-ols.

Machine Shop Wins C.G.E. Shop Contest

Machine Shop took a 6-1 victory over Induction Motors in their C. G. E. Shop Hockey League contest at the Brock Street Rink last night before a fair-sized crowd of rooters. It was a lively tussle on rough ice, with the winners having an edge all through. Good combination or puck-carrying was practically impossible owing to ice conditions, but some fair hockey was dished up by individual players. Murduff and Jamieson scored twice each for the victors, with Magee and Pearson getting the others, and Jones an assist. G. Young tallied the lone Induction marker. The two goalies were good, while Magee, Jamieson, Murduff for Machine Shop, and Schultz, G. Young and Hedley of the losers were outstanding. The teams:

Referee—Red Creighton.

King Edward In Tie With Midget Beavers

Beavers and King Edward battled to a 2-2 midget draw in a good Southend Hockey League contest last evening at the Sacred Heart rink. The teams appeared well-matched and dished up a fast, scrappy brand of puck play throughout. Some nice hockey was shown at times with fair combination on either side. Wade and Hallihan scored for Beavers while Jamieson got both for the school squad. The teams:

Beavers: Goal, Mattucci; defence, Brioux, Wade; centre Heath; wings, Henwood, Stanley; alternates, Jones, R. Clark, L. Clark.

Referee—M. O'Brien.

Ready For Action

Paul Dean must consider that his pitching arm has rounded into shape, because he is applying for reinstatement on the active player list. The St. Louis Cardinal pitcher's arm went bad during last season and failed to respond to treatment. He is seen here in a characteristic pose.

LINDSAY CURLERS WIN DISTRICT CUP

Defeat Peterborough 40 To 18 In Finals—Seven-End Scored On Lindsay

LINDSAY, Jan. 13—(C.P.). — A feature of the play for the District Cup Tuesday was the tie (after 16 ends) between rinks from Peterborough and Fenelon Falls, Peterborough winning after playing two extra ends, 31-29. Another feature was the scoring of a 7 end by Thurston's rink of Dunsford against Bruce of Lindsay. Bruce, however, won the game. In the first draw Dunsford beat Bobcaygeon, Lindsay beat Lakefield and Peterborough defeated Fenelon Falls. Lindsay also defeated Dunsford and won the District by defeating Peterborough in the finals, 40-18.

St. Peter's Beaten By Canuck Midgets

Canucks took a 5-1 victory over St. Peter's in a midget Southend Hockey League game last night at the Sacred Heart rink. It was a speedy affair all through with both teams dishing up a hard, smart brand but the Canucks having an edge on territorial play most of the time. They had a better passing game and were more dangerous at finishing plays in close. Cauley and Nicholls tallied twice each for the victors with Jones scoring the other one. The lone students' goal was garnered by Garvey. The teams:

St. Peter's: Goal, Bascino; defence, Crary, Dundas; centre, Rochetta; wings, Corkery, Smith; alternates, O'Donnell, Garvey, Prete, Rex, Hickey.

BOWLING IN JANUARY

Hastings Men Complete Game On Green, Setting Up Record.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Jan. 13. — Two local lawn bowlers, Dr. W. N. Campbell and H. B. Wilson established some kind of a record on Monday afternoon when they bowled a game of Scotch doubles. Bowling on the green on January 11 is certainly a record for the local club.

Fig. 1, Fig. 2, Fig. 3

Fig. 1 shows correct low crouch, fig. 2, correct half crouch and fig. 3 erect running position.

15.—Bent Knee Positions.

Correct bent knee positions — as we pointed out, the basis of correct skiing — can be divided into three classes, upright, medium-height and low. Each has its certain uses.

The great advantage of assuming these positions is that besides allowing the maximum amount of 'give,' they impart maximum of elasticity to every part of the body. All the joints being slightly bent, the elastic muscle relaxation provides the greatest scope for reaction and reflex to the jolts and strains of skiing they are called upon to withstand.

It is not the amount of bending to which the joints are subjected, but the flexible and elastic state of the muscles, that decides how good the position of the body is. Figure 1 shows the correct low crouch for running position, with knee well bent. The very object of body carriage in skiing is to combine with stability and balance the maximum amount of elasticity.

The best effect of this combination can, of course, be only obtained when muscles and joints are in good condition physically, so that they execute immediately and automatically the counter movements necessary for maintaining or regaining balance as you ride your skis downhill or across country.

Represent Canada In Tennis Tourney

ROSS WILSON DOUG. CAMERON

Due to his splendid showing in the national championship last year when he reached the semi-finals, the only Canadian to do so, Doug. Cameron of Vancouver, has been chosen to represent Canada at the International Tennis tournament in Buenos Aires instead of Jack Brawn, who was formerly nominated. Cameron, the brilliant Vancouver boy, will be accompanied by Ross Wilson of Toronto, when they journey south for the tennis tournament.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

(C.J.P.)

THE "UP-AND-ATOM" boys open their loop this evening at the puck orchard on the Rue Brock, said circuit being the Junior City Hockey League. There are five entrees in the league but the powers that be simply could not figure any way for more than four teams to collide tonight so one will have to sit on the sidelines for the nonce. Canucks and All Saints start the fireworks at seven, followed at eight by the Monarchs and St. Peter's School squads. Tigers are idle. The two City Loop tussles—both should be lively and classy.

* * * * * *

AND THE Senior City Leaguers—yeah, the Blood and Thunder boys—go back at it tomorrow (Thursday) p.m. in the Brock. Outboard Marines will endeavor to sink the Mayfairs at seven bells or shortly after; Bewdley and Westclox clash at eight or thereabouts; and Millbrook meets Lakefield around about nine o'clock. The large crowd that saw these teams battling it out Monday night will be back with a flock of their friends, if they have to tuck Junior under the quilts early and rob his bank! We hear Bewdley has protested Lakefield's last win, claiming Buster Whitton played O.H.A. for Belleville this winter. Protest Committee of Herb Payne, Bill Prindible and Vince O'Connell will consider the kick as soon as all information is available.

* * * * * *

LOCAL COLTS, quite subdued after being hobbled in Belleville the other twilight, worked out at the rink last night. They play in Tweed this e'en and expect the bolstered Tweedsters to be tough to take on their own ice, but the young Petes will be anxious to take out that Quinte defeat on some one. We will have to try to go along as no local puck team this year has lost an out-of-town tussle yet with us on hand. How many? Well, we made one trip, anyway—if you gotta get technical! Down to Trenton.

* * * * * *

OUR INTERMEDIATE Petes are practising hard every evening for their game with the Trenton Fliers here Friday. It stands out as a puck natural. These are the only "A" teams in the group and both are good. The Airmen should be in better shape after going through the Kingston district loop early this winter with but one loss. However, they'll run into plenty of opposition here day after tomorrow, and we sort of look for a local win. If you like sitting down at your hockey matches, don't stall around too long before reserving a seat as this tilt ought to pack 'em in.

* * * * * *

LADIES' BASKETBALL League opens at the Y.W.C.A. on Friday evening with four contests. C.G.E. Juniors and Westclox start things off at 7.45; followed at 8.15 by Westclox Seniors and Marconi; at 9.00 by the George St. Juniors and St. John's; and finishing up with "Y" Quakers and C.G.E. Seniors at 9.45 of the clock. If you like gals' cage contests, drop in and look the lasses over—they play good basketball. The players are advised to be on the floor ready to begin play at the times specified. Rules are going to be enforced this year, and don't say we didn't whisper you a warning.

* * * * * *

JUST TWO C.G.E. Shop Hockey League games were run off at the Brock last night. The third one, and the one listed for tonight, will be held some evening next week. Meantime, regular games will be held there on Saturday, weather permitting. The ice was choppier than a Channel crossing but the boys dished up two lively numbers last eve before a fair crowd. Fractional Motors took a 3-1 victory over the Office lads, while Machine Shop jolted Induction Motors 6 to 1. The hockey wasn't exactly N.H.L. calibre but no N.H.L.-er ever worked harder than these factory puckists. Quite a few ladies fair sat around and cheered the gladiators on in the glazed arena.

* * * * * *

ELSEWHERE TONIGHT is published the schedule of the School Hockey League. Six teams start it off Saturday yawning at All Saints' rink, first tilt being at nine bells. Schedule runs to the middle of February and then top two teams have a home-and-home serial at the Brock to settle the winner. Lots of fun in this loop and the ice game taught to youngsters by the teacher-coaches, who often turn in also as referees. The boys battle hard for berths as much prestige by classmates is attached to a hockeyist in the School League—'tis the thrill of a lifetime.

* * * * * *

STRIKES US there is quite a paradox presented in a puckster's appearance. In motion, he is as graceful as a swallow skimming about on a summer's evening; but standing still on the ice he is a sight to shock a souse onto the wagon! Balanced precariously on thin steel blades, his heavily-padded legs look like a bad case of varicose veins if not a leakage of the heart. Above are summery shorts and then heavy sweaters with jutting pads on his shoulders and unsightly epaulets that have slipped to the elbow. And darned if he isn't bareheaded and wiping the sweat off his brow with huge gauntlets on his hands! He goes out there and battles bitterly for no pay, and then staggers into the dressing-room muttering: "Aint a man a fool!"

* * * * * *

UP AND down Sports' Rialto: Lindsay intermediates took a 9-0 win over Port Perry last gloaming . . . . Bun Kingdon's shoulder is okay but for a bad bruise which'll keep him out of hockey a game or two . . . . Crowe will likely take his place as a forward in Tweed tonight . . . . Church and Southend Loops' results are in tonight . . . . Trenton Fliers play in Belleville tonight; Quinte juniors are here Monday; and the Petes play the Fliers in Belleville next Tuesday . . . . Blewett will be playing for Lakefield in the Senior City League instead of with the Colts . . . . They're having trouble trying to get their senior ball club organized again in the town of Peeney Mills . . . . Shorty Burgess will handle the local juniors in Tweed tonight while Frank Buckland will put the Petes through a two-hour drill here . . . . This weather may be cutting in on hockey but it's also cutting down the winter, what?

WHITBY JUNIORS TRIM LIONS 6 TO 1

Bowmanville Scored Their Only Goal In The First Period Of Game

WHITBY, Jan. 13. — Rus Hatch's Flying Cadets romped to an easy victory here last night when they defeated the Lions of Bowmanville 6-1. Bowmanville scored their only goal in the first period, Cameron getting it. Dafoe of Whitby proved the outstanding goal-getter, scoring four, Vipond and Dilling getting the others. It was a rough and tumble affair on slow ice. This is the first junior game in the local Arena in six years, and local fans are looking to this team to win the Lakeshore Group.

Bowmanville — Brerton, Woodward, McKnight, Cameron, Sheehan, Hallman, Rice, Wetheridge, Ames, Wiseman, Hooper.

Referee—Max Reesor of Markham.

George St. Bantams Defeat All Saints'

George St. Bantams took a 10-3 win over All Saints in their Church Puck Loop scrap last night. The winners, class of their section, had little trouble in this game against younger opponents. Routley, Parnell and Hamilton starred for George St. and could have run the count higher had they been used more. The Anglicans were handicapped by mediocre goal-minding, Wade fanning frequently in the first frame. Lacheur made a better job of it later. Morley and Ackford—who got their three goals—shone for All Saints. This puts Bert Hamilton's team on top. The teams:

Referee—D. Charlton.

By HERB MARTIN

Our boys fared rather badly in the final game at Lindsay, Tuesday. They went along in the afternoon against Fenelon Falls and finally won out in the water, after two extra ends. In the evening, with more water on the ice, our boys were no match for their opponents. All day Tuesday we were wondering how they could have good curling ice in Lindsay when our own ice here was not fit to play regular schedule games on, let alone important provincial matches. As we said before, why all the rush with these games? There will be cold weather yet, and lots of it.

Just now, we don't know what to think about the playing of the Neill Trophy for Thursday. No doubt the executive will meet to-night and make a decision. In the meantime, we would advise our local skips to get their rinks together and be ready to start at 9 o'clock in the morning. Keep in touch with the rink, and we may be able to give some definite answer.

The ladies' section met Tuesday and drew up their rinks for the coming season. They intend to commence play for the Gibson Trophy on Monday afternoon with this draw:

Mrs. Waddell vs. Mrs. Sanderson
Mrs. DeGraw vs. Mrs. Turner.

Personnel of Ladies' Rinks

Mrs. Purvis, Mrs. M. Comstock, Mrs. J. Morris, Mrs. R. Waddell (skip).

Office Loses Tilt To Fractionals 3-1

Fractional Motors yanked out a 3-1 verdict over Office in an exciting C.G.E. Shop Hockey League fracas last evening at the Brock Street Rink. The fans were treated to good and bad hockey as play became disorganized at times on rough ice which interfered with puck-carrying and passing. The pace was hot most of the way and the checking close, and at times quite heavy. Field, Jobe and Bailey scored for the winners as Williams notched the only Office counter. Whatman, Field and Jobe were the pick of the Fractional squad; and Murphy, Tollington, and Rooke looked best for the white-collar crew. Jay was kept busier in the nets than his rival, Clarke, as the Motormen proved more dangerous on close-in tries. The teams:

Referee—Red Creighton.

Lakefield Pucksters Defeat Young's Point

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 12. — When the Young's Point youngsters ran up against T. W. Chaplin's band of hockey fiends in the Lakefield Rink on Monday afternoon, they received a 6 to 4 trimming at the hands of the Lakefieldites. Brown's boys put up a good battle, but the local team kept the lead through the biggest part of the game. Schelcher, on the Lakefield team, put up a real hard fight and scored one of the winning goals. The other goals were tallied by McFadden (1), R. Millage (2), and Earnshaw (2).

HAWKS TROUNCE BOSTON BRUINS

4-2 Victory However Leaves Them Still Deep In League's U.S. Section Cellar

ONE DISPUTED GOAL

BOSTON, Jan. 13.—(CP)— Undaunted by the absence of their top scorer, the Chicago Black Hawks turned on Boston last night for their first National Hockey League win of the season against Bruins, but the 4-2 victory still left them deep in the league's United States' sectional cellar.

One of the smallest crowds of the season, 9,000, saw the game, Chicago was without Paul Thompson, their leading scorer.

The Bruins outplayed their rivals from start to finish and kept their five mobile players charging most of the time. Those aggressive tactics, however, were wasted against the visitors who rammed in the first counter early in the opening period and then devoted all their efforts to nursing their lead.

Glen Brydson and "Mush" March each scored twice for the winners. The former's initial tally was an earned affair, but all of the others resulted from breaks that came against the attacking home forces, whose counters were supplied by "Red" Beattie, in the first session, and Ray Getliffe during the finale.

The Black Hawks protested the Beattie goal, claiming it struck the crossbar of Mike Karakas's cage and remained out. The goal umpire agreed and refused to flash the red light for it, but the referees overruled him, thereby starting an argument that delayed the game for almost five minutes.

AMERICANS END LENGTHY SLUMP DEFEAT MAROONS

Whitewash Montrealers 4 To 0 To Climax 12 Defeats In 13 Starts

11,000 FANS TURN OUT

The victory before 11,000 fans brightened a record of 12 defeats in 13 starts and landed the crippled Amerks within one point of the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs. Maroons, at the same time, dropped three full games behind Montreal Canadiens.

Americans, who had absorbed seven straight defeats up to last night, came to life suddenly. They took the lead in the first period on Tommy Anderson's hot shot from the penalty circle, but did not seem destined to finish clear-cut winners as Maroons battled every inch of the way.

But the winners broke loose in the second frame and outplayed the big red team. Twice Amerks scored in this period. Lorne Carr tallying off passes from Sweeney Schriner and Art Chapman, and "Happy" Emms finding the net on a penalty shot after Cy Wentworth had tripped Nels Stewart, who was in scoring position.

Maroons opened up wide in the last frame and this gave the New Yorkers an opportunity to break away for their fourth goal which went to Chapman when he darted in to rap Schriner's rebound into the Montreal cage.

Americans — Goal, Chabot; defence, Murray and Shields; centre, Chapman; wings, Schriner and Carr; alternates, Graham, Stewart, Cotton, Klein, Jenkins, Wismean, Lamb, Emms, and Anderson.

Referees—Stewart and Dye.

First Period.

He injured his hand on a piece of glass, which severed tendons and arteries in his wrist.

Griffiths formerly attended Vaughan Road Collegiate Institute and came to Queens last fall, being regarded by Coach Ted Reeve a sure regular on the 1937 senior team. Last fall he coached the Queens junior O. R. F. U. team. His father is Edward Griffiths of Toronto.

OSHAWA DEFEATS PORT HOPE 6 TO 1

Rowden Rams Home Four Of Victors' Goals To Keep Team Tied With Whitby

OSHAWA, Jan. 13. — Oshawa Coca-Cola's stayed in a tie with Whitby Red Wings for leadership in the O.H.A. Lake Shore Intermediate B grouping when they defeated Port Hope Ontarios 6 to 1 here last night. Oshawa had a big margin in territorial play over their slower rivals. Only erratic shooting and splendid goal-tending by Cancilla, in the losers' net, held the score down.

Rowden was the spearhead of the Oshawa offensive, the methodical centre-ice star tallying four of their counters, combining with the veteran Hap Hammel on three of them. The Port Hope squad checked hard throughout, but Oshawa's hard-hitting defence of March and Osler made the road to the Oshawa goal a rocky one. The game was a cleanly played contest throughout, with the large Oshawa ice surface appearing to handicap the visitors.

Port Hope—Goal, Cancilla; defence, Record and Crossett; centre, Rowden; wings, Smith and Roach; alternates, Cameron, Jackman, Phillips, Pillsworth, Hagerman.

Oshawa — Goal, Peterson; defence, March and Osler; centre, Rowden; wings, Hammel and Sargent; alternates, Young, Hooper, Barnes, Goodchild and McDonald.

JACKSON HOLDING FIVE-POINT LEAD

Tops Markle In League Scoring With 33 Points—15 Goals, 18 Assists

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 13 (A. P.). — Puck-shooters of the International-American Hockey League have been getting nowhere fast in their efforts to displace Art Jackson of Syracuse as the leading scorer in the loop.

Official statistics released to-day gave the star of the Salt City team 33 points, 15 goals and 18 assists, for a firm hold on top place, five points ahead of his teammate, Gus Markle, who ran second.

Scorers in the league's Eastern Division looked to Keating of the Providence Reds as their leader. He had 26 points.

COBOURG JUNIORS DOWN PORT HOPE

Fans Take Hand In Battle As Visitors Pile Up 7 To 4 Score

PORT HOPE, Jan. 13.— In a lively O.H.A. junior engagement here last night, with the two-town rivalry standing out, Cobourg defeated Port Hope 7 to 4. The match was played on a sugary surface, but play was fast throughout.

R. Good, a Cobourg referee, was given a rough passage, when in the third period a number of fans jumped on the ice, but the play proceeded after the goal umpire was changed.

The visitors led at the end of the first period 2-1, Maher and Bell scoring for Cobourg and 'Battleship' Hills for Port Hope. Leetham and Gallagher added a pair for the winners in the middle frame and Edwardson got a lone counter for Port Hope.

In the third session, Ball, Gallagher, and Maher were the Cobourg marksmen, while Zealand and Friar got the local tallies.

For Cobourg, Maher and Gallagher were outstanding, while for the homesters Hills, Pemberton, and Rowden looked good.

TWEED

IMPORTS BOLSTER TWEED'S JUNIORS

Town's Intermediate Squad Get In Shape For District Battles

TWEED, Jan. 13.— Following a stiff workout on Monday night, the Tweed juniors announced that they had a new second line-up to replace the first when the need arose in future games. Six new players were taken on, and with these, the old-line-up expects to go places, or try to hold the leaders down. Havelock, Marmora and Madoc contributed players for the new line-up, and they have had considerable experience in school and intermediate hockey. Ice conditions have considerably improved over the week-end, and with another twenty-four hours of cold weather, a good playing surface will be ready for the tilt on Wednesday night with the fast stepping Peterborough team.

On Tuesday night, the Intermediate town league took the ice for their first practise, and as they are experienced veterans in the game, they literally tore up the ice. Mickey Maguire with Frenchy and Baldy Leal will be the main line of this team, with Goalie "Shirt" Thompson. About twenty prospects turned out for the first practise, and within a day or so, the second team will be announced and ready to take on the old boys from the neighboring centres, and here's hoping that the old rivals, Madoc, will be able to enter the circuit, and give an exhibition of the blood and thunder games of yore.

For the first time in years China will engage foreign experts to assist in railway construction.

CANADIENS TAKE AN EASY VICTORY FROM RED WINGS

Relentless Backchecking Campaign Holds Detroit To 4-1 Score

BOOST LEAGUE LEAD

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—(CP). — Smothering Detroit's offensive with relentless backchecking, Montreal Canadiens defeated the Red Wings 4 to 1 last night to widen their Canadian section lead in the National Hockey League once more to six points.

Canadiens won easily after overtaking an early Detroit lead, shot by Ebbie Goodfellow, with the help of Marty Barry and Johnny Sorrell after 13 minutes of the first period. They evened the game when George Mantha scored a "break" goal four minutes later, and never were threatened after that.

Despite defeat, Detroit held to its two-point lead over the idle New York Rangers in the United States' section.

Rookie George Brown scored what proved to be the winning goal midway through the second period, deflecting Babe Seibert's long shot past the pudgy Norm Smith. A few minutes after that, Johnny Gagnon fired a snap, pivot shot from 35 feet and Smith didn't see it until it was in the net.

Joffre Desilets finished off the night's entertainment for 6,500 fans with a solo goal in the last minute. He broke from a five-man Red Wing rush and moved the puck around Smith easily after forcing the net man to make the first move.

Detroit— Goal, Smith; defence, Goodfellow and Bowman; centre, Barry; wings, Aurie and Sorrell; subs, MacDonald, Howe, W. Kilrea, Pettinger, H. Kilrea, Bruneteau, Kelly and Roulston.

Sport Spice

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP). — Here's news: Art Cohn, sports ed. of the Oakland (Calif.) Tribune, writes: "I saw Maxie Rosenbloom make a monkey out of fat, clumsy Kingfish Levinsky and I doubt if Joe Louis could lay a hand on Maxie in 20 rounds"....Bill Werber is happy.... Connie Mack has promised to turn him loose and let him run this year ....Bill says those who think the tall tutor is too tight on salary questions are all wet....add superstitions: You can't hire Maurice (Big Clipper) Smith of Villanova to walk forward into a stadium....he always backs in....This will give you an idea of what New York baseball writers (a hard boiled lot) think of Eddie Brannick, Giant secretary: Jerry Mitchell wrote in the Evening Post: "He has more friends than Santa Claus."

The Joe Louis knockout wallop astounded Buffalo fans....incidentally, Joe reveals in the Nickel Magazine out to-day he plans to retire after winning the heavyweight title and defending it once....All of which, he thinks, may come to pass in less than a year....The New York Yale Club has its best wisecrackers primed to give Larry Kelley what the boys call "de woiks" at to-night's dinner to the Yale gridders....Ossie Solem may be called on for double duty at Syracuse....They haven't got an athletic director up there and since Ossie held down that job at both Drake and Iowa, he may be asked to take it over as well as coach the football team.... The old maestro, James J. Johnston, is personally supervising Bob Pastor's training for the Joe Louis bout.

Golf pros now in California are burned up at the new Southern California ruling which prohibits them from receiving advice from caddies ....Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, is the latest riser in the sports mob....He never leaves the hay until 4 p.m.....The Phillies have a hot prospect in young Hugh Mulcahy, up from Hazelton, Pa., with the sling-shot delivery.

The Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team is insured for $326,000..Bing Miler decided to retire to the role of coach for the Red Sox because he didn't make good as a pinch hitter last season...(is his face red?).. and the guy used to be the best in the biz....Bob Pastor's ambition is to become a newspaperman....He thinks all they do is stand on the corner and hand out free passes.

MASS EXECUTIONS SPREADING TERROR THROUGHOUT SPAIN

208 Rightist Hostages Victims Of Mob Orgy—Captured Seamen Slain

DISSENTION IN BILBAO

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, France, Jan. 13.—(AP).—Mass executions on land and at sea sent a wave of terror along the warring basque coast of Spain to-day.

At Bilbao, capital of the Basque Regional Administration supporting the Spanish Socialist Government, 208 Rightist hostages were reported blown to bits or hacked to death in a mad mob orgy.

At sea, said advices reaching Bayonne from Bilbao, the captain and mate of the Spanish insurgent freighter Virgin Del Carmen, were executed for "piracy" in connection with the killing of the crew and passengers of the government ship Galerna last Saturday. The Virgin Del Carmen's officers were condemned by a Bilbao court. The number of victims aboard the Galerna, a Trans-Bay of Biscay steamer, was not announced, although one was said to have been the Basque Journalist Jose De Aristimundo.

At Bilbao the mob executions spurred tension between the Basque Nationalists in control of the Regional Government and the Anarchist elements which likewise support the Spanish Government, but want direct and violent action against Fascists.

The Cabinet of Juan Aguirre remained in power, but reports from Bilbao said some of his ministers were threatening to resign because of dissension.

The unrest was reported spreading to Santander, further west on the Bay of Biscay in Northern Spain.

Basque spokesmen insisted, however, there was no danger of the conflict opening the territory to the insurgents.

Diplomatic sources said most of the 208 Rightist prisoners were killed by mobs of extremists who stormed the prison and blew them to bits with hand grenades.

Miss E. Stephenson Is Elected President Of New Organization

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LIFFORD LINE, Jan. 13. — On Friday afternoon, January 8th, a group of those particularly interested in school welfare, gathered at Lifford Public school for the purpose of considering the advisability of forming a Home and School Club in this school section.

Mrs. Fred Bowen, of Newcastle, district organizer, who was expected to be present to present information regarding home and school clubs and to organize if deemed advisable, was unavoidably prevented from coming owing to unfavorable weather and road conditions. In her absence the teacher, Miss E. Stephenson, led in the discussion, giving informative details from literature received from headquarters. After consideration it was agreed to form a club with the following officers in charge of the work:

President—Miss E. Stephenson.
Vice-President — Mrs. Walter Neals.
Secretary—Mrs. Charles Staples.
Treasurer—Georga Tims.
Pianists—Marjorie Page and Marguerite Neals.
Membership Committee— Walter Neals, Harold Page, Lavergne McKinley, Mrs. Gibson Lowery and Miss Leona Lang.
Programme Committee — George Tims, Lawrence Staples, Kenneth Henderson and Misses Vera Strachan and Eileen Peters.
Social Committee— Mrs. Gervin Mulligan, Mrs. Percy Preston, Mrs. Clare Staples, Mrs. Lloyd Staples and Miss E. Lathangue.

It was arranged to hold the initial meeting in the school house on Friday afternoon, January 29th, when it is expected a guest speaker will be present and an interesting program provided. In the event of roads being blocked for motor traffic and lack of ample accommodation for stabling of horses, Mrs. Gervin Mulligan kindly offered the use of her home for the meeting for the previous Thursday evening. The Social committee are arranging to serve luncheon for this particular meeting.

Lifford school has the distinction of being the first in North Manvers to organize a home and school club.

Mr. Faulkener, well driller of Omemee, was also present and with members of the school board, made a survey of the school grounds for the purpose of ascertaining the possibility of finding water. It was found that it could be secured almost anywhere on the school property. An estimate of the cost of drilling a well was submitted by Mr. Faulkener and left for the consideration of the ratepayers.

MAYOR DESIRES POWER DEFINED

Riverside Official Refuses To Take Seat Until He Finds Out

RIVERSIDE, Ont., Jan. 13.—(CP) — Until the Ontario government "defines clearly" what power the mayor of an insolvent town has, George A. Scott, newly-elected mayor of this Windsor suburb, will not occupy the regular mayoralty chair. He prefers to sit at a table beside the town clerk.

Mayor Scott refused to take the mayoralty seat at the inaugural meeting of the 1937 Riverside council last night. As other members did not desire to "talk to an empty chair," the session was adjourned until Wednesday.

It was the first time in the town's history that the mayor's chair, on a raised platform, has been vacant at a council meeting.

"In order that just what prerogatives I have as mayor of an insolvent town that is under the jurisdiction of the Provincial government will be more clearly defined," was Mayor Scott's repeated explanation of his action.

"Riverside became insolvent in 1932 and went under control of the province," Mayor Scott said. "Although town council surrendered its prerogative the organization was maintained. Cause of friction in the past has been an attempt by council members to retain their prerogatives after surrendering them.

"The logical thing is for the Mayor to assume that the whole control rests with Provincial authorities until the apparent misunderstanding as to what part of our prerogative we have lost and what part we have kept has been removed," Mayor Scott contended.

SEES RIVERS DWINDLING

Naturalist Thinks Glaciers Lose More in Summer Than They Gain in Winter

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—(CP). — If the Rocky Mountain glaciers continue melting, in the opinion of Dan McCowan, Western Canada's rivers will have dwindled "almost to nothing" in the next 50 years.

The glaciers, which the Banff naturalist described as the "reservoirs" of the Prairies, are decreasing slowly, McCowan told the Montreal Women's Club yesterday.

"The climate is changing in the Rockies," he said. The glaciers are losing more in the Summer than they gain in the Winter. If this continues, rivers like the Saskatchewan will have dwindled almost to nothing in 50 years. The only thing we can do is to plant more trees to conserve the moisture."

HOUSEWIFE SLAIN LEFT IN BATHTUB

New York Killer Uses Hammer, Steals Wedding Ring, $15 In Cash

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP).—Slaying of a 25-year-old housewife whose beaten and strangled body was found in an over-flowing bathtub sent police on an intensive manhunt today.

The body of the victim, Mrs. Mary Robinson Case, clad only in silk underwear and stockings, was discovered by her 30-year-old husband, Frank, when he returned to his apartment early last night.

Bloodstains in the kitchen gave evidence that Mrs. Case battled violently with her assailant and officials suggested she possibly was slain there and her body carried to the bathroom. Her skull was fractured from a blow by a heavy object, and her throat bore imprints that police checked today in an effort to obtain fingerprints of her attacker.

Stains on the door of a chute in the hall led police to search the incinerator in the basement. There detectives found a bloodstained machinists' hammer ,two empty pocketbooks identified as Mrs. Case's and a worn and stained pair of trousers.

Detective Ryan said Case told him his wife had about $15 in her purse yesterday morning. This was missing as well as her platinum wedding ring.

Dr. Grimes said the woman had not been attacked.

Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE CAT'S TAIL

"We can't, I tell you, We can't" whispered Uncle Wiggily.

"Can't what?" asked Mr. Twisty-tail, who, not being as clever as was Mr. Longears, had to think more slowly.

"We can't walk that way—the way the cat lady asked us to," went on the rabbit gentleman. "If she expects me, or even you, to walk the way she is walking it just can't be done."

"Why not?" asked the jolly fat pig. "I'll tell you if you listen, Twisty."

So the pig listened while the dear, funny, little cat lady, who kept a store for cold ears in Woodland near the Orange Ice Mountains, walked toward the back. The two animal gentlemen waited.

And while they waited you may remember what happened just before this. Uncle Wiggily's ears got cold all of a sudden as he and the pig were walking in the woods. Suddenly they reached the cat lady's store and went in just as the three Bad Chaps ran along trying to catch them. But the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat were fooled, I'm glad to say.

Couldn't Walk Like Cat

"Well, I'm listening," said the pig. "Go on, Wiggy."

"We can't walk the way the cat lady is walking because she had her tail straight up in the air like a puppy dog's fish pole," said Uncle Wiggily. "We can't stick our tails up that way. What's to be done about it, Twisty?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," grunted the pig. "Take your tail, for example."

"I don't want anybody to take my tail," said the rabbit. "All I want to get is something to put on my ears to warm them."

"I'll get to your ears in a minute," grunted the pig. "But take your tail for example—"

"My tail isn't an example," said the rabbit. "You must have at least two numbers to make an example and my tail is only one."

"Oh, well, for instance, to illustrate, to show what I mean!" said the pig gentleman, sort of impatient like. "Now you can't stick your tail up in the air like the cat lady's, can you?"

"Certainly not," admitted Uncle Wiggily. "My tail is too short."

"And I can't stick up my tail," went on the pig. "It's all twisted up in a curl like the one the little girl had."

Mixes Up Rhymes

"I know," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "It was in the middle of her forehead. And when she was good she was very good, but when she was bad she had to go sit on a tuffet."

"You're thinking of little Miss Muffet," laughed the pig. "But the principle is the same. However, as you said, we can't possibly do what the cat lady asked us to do—walk this way—I mean the way she is walking, with a long tail stuck up in the air."

"No," agreed Uncle Wiggily, "we can't. Everything will be spoiled, I suppose. Oh, dear!"

"What are you gentlemen waiting for?" mewed the cat lady, suddenly putting down her tail. "For warm ears walk this way, please." And since her tail was down Uncle Wiggily and the pig could walk that way, which they did, until, all of a sudden, the cat lady mewed: "Hush!"

So the two gentlemen hushed at once. And something happened.

If the bottle of ink doesn't play in the snow and make it all black like licorice candy, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's cold nose.

MARKSTAY, Ont., Jan. 13 (CP). — The Municipal Affairs Department has advised Hagar Township to hold a second nomination meeting to select candidates for the 1937 Council, Eugene Moores, township clerk, announced to-day.

He said he had a communication from H. L. Cummings, Deputy Minister of the Provincial Department, stating Government authorities do not see any reason to intervene and carry on local affairs for a community "which shows no interest of its own."

BOYS ARE ARRESTED

Trio Jailed Because Stolen Car Near Their Shack—Council Turns On Police.

TORONTO, Jan. 13.—(CP).—Investigation of the arrest of three boys "taken from their home in the middle of the night and lodged in jail" was decided yesterday by East York Township Council.

"The Magistrate and Crown Attorney decided there was not sufficient evidence and dismissed the charges," Reeve John Warren told the council. "The boys were picked up because stolen license plates were attached to a car outside a shack used as headquarters for the boys' athletic activities. They knew nothing about the plates. These boys did nothing wrong and should not have been locked up."

Rooster Runs Fox Into Load Of Shot

Orangeville, Ont., Jan. 13.

A ROOSTER is almost a match for a fox, according to the story told to-day by Hugh Hewston, Mono farmer.

From his window, Mr. Hewston saw a fox come from the chicken pen with a large rooster in its mouth. He turned to get his gun, the fox meanwhile running up a small nearby hill.

Halfway up the hill the fox stopped, dropped the bird to get a firmer hold on it. Jumping out of reach the rooster ruffled its feathers, tossed its comb, and charged point-blank at the fox's head.

The fox jumped backwards, just in time to stop a double charge of buckshot from Mr. Hewston's gun.

Want George Street Extended Through Exhibition Grounds To McGill Street

INAUGURAL MEETING

North Monaghan Council is very anxious to have a road opened through the Exhibition grounds from the southern end of George St. to McGill St., to remain open except during the time of the Exhibition when it would be closed for traffic, following the practice adopted in Toronto where traffic passes through Exhibition Park at all times except during the actual period of the Canadian National Exhibition.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Splendid Cough Remedy Easily Mixed at Home

It's So Easy! Makes a Big Saving. No Cooking.

To get quick relief from a distressing cough, mix your own remedy at home. Once tried, you'll say it's your favorite cough medicine, and it's so simple and easy.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a compound containing Norway Pine in concentrated form, well known for its prompt action on throat membranes.

Put the Pinex into a 16 ounce bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ounces of very efficient remedy, and you get four times as much cough medicine for your money. It tastes fine and never spoils.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is splendid. You can feel it penetrating the air passages in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Worst Flood In History Resident Of 24 Years' Experience Declares

PORT HOPE, Jan. 14.—One of the worst floods in the memory of the town's oldest inhabitants—and Port Hope is no stranger to floods—today isolated the shopping district, forced schools to close, caused families to evacuate their homes and created general confusion.

The Ganaraska River normally a quiet meandering stream, is in angry mood. Overflowing its banks very early this morning before it was yet daylight, the turbulent river slopped over into the business section inundating basements and causing unestimated damage to stock. It seeped into the fire hall, and threatened the occupants of the houses in the lower lying sections of the town.

Traffic Detoured

An Examiner reporter paying a flying visit to the lakeshore town this morning to secure flood pictures which appear elsewhere in this edition was met at the northerly limits of the town by a couple of flagmen who were halting all inward-bound traffic. A large detour sign barred the main highway into the centre of the town.

Receiving permission to keep right on instead of being forced to make the detour, The Examiner representative proceeded south. He was again halted at the foot of the hill just beyond the point where the road forks in the vicinity of Marshall's Mill.

Here the way was definitely barred by the angry flood waters. Amidst the jam of auto traffic and people, a furniture van owned by W. F. Pennington was hurriedly being loaded with the household effects of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Harwood and family.

Located on the east bank of the raging Ganaraska and fronting on to Mill street the house was surrounded by water on three sides. It was swirling around in the basement on a level with the top step and was rapidly gaining in height.

Forced From Home

Mrs. Harwood (the former Valetta Bayliss of Peterborough) and her husband had already left the house. They sought the comfort and security of a son's house, located on higher ground.

PORT HOPE BUSINESS SECTION MAROONED BY FLOOD WATERS

General views of the extensive flood at Port Hope, which is one of the worst in the memory of the town's oldest inhabitants, and unprecedented at this time of the year, give some idea of the extent to which the Ganaraska River has overflowed its banks. The layout shows: 1, Marshall's Mill looking west from Mill street; 2, The fire hall and lower section of Mill street looking south from the Harwood residence which the family was forced to evacuate; 3, The fire hall marooned in a lake of flood water as seen from the south window of the Harwood home; 4, Ontario street looking south towards the business section.

RAGING WATERS START FLOODS DOZEN CENTRES

12-Hour Rain Sends Rivers Higher Than Usual Spring Freshets

MANY MEN ON GUARD

Dams Are Threatened — Farmers Regard Low Temperatures As Boon

TORONTO, Jan. 14—(C.P.). — Roar of swollen waters to-day roused Ontario's dozing Weatherman and rain-darkened skies echoed the rumblings which broke in on mild and indifferent weather conditions.

Month-long quiet was transformed overnight into a situation of looming destruction in Eastern and Central parts of the province. Rain fell for almost 12 hours in Eastern and Central Ontario. At Port Hope, Toronto, St. Catharines, Peterborough, Belleville and Kitchener the threat of floods was felt.

The Ganaraska River raged at Port Hope after rising to flood downtown residences and business establishments preventing hundreds of men and women from going to work and keeping at least 300 children from schools.

Don Overflows

In Toronto district, the Don river and Etobicoke creek were pushed and over their banks by heavy rainfall last night.

The river flooded railway tracks in part of Toronto East and the water spread across a low-lying district by Leaside viaduct filling cellars and basements.

Etobicoke creek raged and threatened Brampton business section. Part of Toronto-Woodside Highway disappeared under a foot of water from the flooded west branch of the Humber river.

The Moira river at Belleville rose more than two feet after all-night rain, and residents of the district who last year experienced the worst flood conditions in a half-century again saw water pouring over Coleman's flats on the west side of the city. The flats are the low-lands of Belleville, and no immediate danger was seen.

Employees Stand Guard

The River Speed, at Guelph, boiled under pressure of heavy rains and public works employees stood guard at points along its banks where danger threatened.

One Man Taken To Hospital Unconscious After Being Swept Down Roaring Ganaraska

GARAGE COLLAPSES

300 Children Unable To Reach School, Factory Marooned, Merchants Move Stocks

PORT HOPE, Ont., Jan. 14—(CP)—Snatched from the rushing Ganaraska River, Roy Croft, a shoe store manager, was taken unconscious to hospital today, first near-victim of a flood whose waters spilled over downtown Port Hope. The river overflowed its banks during the night.

Croft, walking along a washout on the Canadian National Railways tracks, was thrown into the river when a loose tie gave way as he stepped on it. He was carried down the stream, finally holding to a clump of bushes which formed a small island. Men ashore threw him a rope and dragged him to safety.

Hundreds of men were prevented from going to work, at least 300 children were kept from attending school and business was paralyzed by the flood. At noon the wall of a garage owned by George Caldwell collapsed and a motor car moved out into the five-feet-deep water in the downtown section.

The flood was at its worst only a few blocks from Lake Ontario, into which the Ganaraska empties. Heavy rainfall yesterday and last night swelled the stream north of Port Hope and the narrow river bed was unable to hold the rushing waters.

Washout On Peterborough Line.

More than 100 feet of Canadian National Railways line were washed out on the Port Hope-Peterborough branch. The washout occurred about a quarter-mile north of here.

Downtown business was stopped. A few merchants went to their stores early, hurriedly moving stock on lower shelves to a safer place as cellars filled up and the rushing waters started to cover floors at street level. But these merchants were marooned. They couldn't get home for lunch.

Scores of others, fearing last night the river would flood as it did last spring during an ice jam, had moved stock out of danger and were unable to reach their business places. Absence of ice kept damage to property and store equipment lower than in the 1936 flood. Children living in the east end who attend Central public school stayed at home. They would have had to walk in water several feet deep to reach school. Classes went on, however, for pupils living in the dry sector. The school, situated on a hill, was not in danger of being flooded.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (A.P.). — Bert Acosta and Gordon Berry, ace American aviators who fought for the Spanish Government forces in the Civil War, to-day were served with subpoenas to appear before the Federal Grand Jury when they returned aboard the French liner Paris.

Federal agents boarded the ship at quarantine and served the subpoenas, which required immediate appearance. They went directly to the Federal Building from the pier.

Assistant Federal Attorney John Dailey announced several days ago he was investigating the recruiting of United States citizens for service in Spain, and would attempt to learn from Acosta and Berry who had signed them on.

TRENTON-WOOLER BRIDGE GOES OUT

Flooding Trent Paralyzes Traffic On Highway—Myers Creek Over Banks

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 14—(C.P.).—The Trent river at Trenton swollen by torrential rain throughout the night rose in miniature flood today, filling tributary creeks to overflowing. The Stinson Mill bridge on the Trenton-Wooler road was washed out to-day, paralyzing traffice over this highway and making passage to Wooler impossible from Trenton except by way of Frankford. Myers creek has also overflowed its bank and all low-lying lands in the northern part of Trenton town is inundated and there is between two to three feet of water in the C.N.R. subway on the Trenton-Wooler highway.

Damages of half a cent were awarded Leslie Turkington against a policeman who arrested him at Brighton, England, on a charge of fraud for which he had already served a sentence.

Beggars Use $12,000 Car To Travel In

Korneuburg, Austria, Jan. 14. KARL Karasek and his wife, Anno, who begged while travelling in a car worth $12,000, were sentenced to two and three months' imprisonment respectively here for "shameless exploitation of the charity of the public."

Karasek admitted in court that he and his wife also owned a villa worth $5,000, two apartment houses in Vienna worth $45,000, and stocks yielding an income of $60 a month. Their system was to stop the car outside towns, dress in rags, enter the town and beg from door to door. The average collection was from $5 to $7.50 a day.

Karasek told the Judge they bought the car to save railway fare.

MOIRA RIVER RISES 2 FEET AFTER RAIN

Belleville's Retaining Wall Prevents Repeat Of Last Spring's Flood

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 14. — (CP).—The Moira river, scene of the worst flood in the history of this city last March, has risen some two feet with a strong current, the result of an all-night rain, one of the heaviest experienced in this district during the past year. The river is open far above Corbyville but there is no immediate danger of the same results as last spring. A rebuttment wall, some eight feet high, holds the water within its bed.

The rain, however, has caused considerable flooding of Coleman flats on the west side of the city and some houses have water in their cellars, while storm sewers throughout the city were worked to full capacity to carry off the surface water. The Public Works Department were busy all night keeping them open.

Creek Rises 6 Feet.

BROOKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 14. — (CP).—Heavy and continuous rains during the night caused the west-end creek to rise about six feet above its normal level, inundating the water front spur line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and also flooding two or three small traffic bridges.

Farmers reported all low-lying land to be flooded.

PARLIAMENT HILL HIVE OF ACTIVITY FOR OPENING DAY

Unseasonable Mildness, Rain Falling Surprise Western Members

C.C.F. HOLD CAUCUS

OTTAWA, Jan. 14 (C.P.).—Parliament Hill bustled to-day with great activity. The lengthy recess over, Senators and Commoners were hurrying and scurrying around as last-minute preparations for the opening of Parliament went forward. Evidences were that both Houses would contain a representation larger than usual for the opening day.

The weather in Ottawa was unpropitious. The atmosphere was thick, with rain falling early. Ice-covered streets and veritable lakes marked the roads leading to Parliament Hill. The unseasonable mildness of the day surprised Western members who had left their homes in zero temperatures.

Their first duty to-day was to swear allegiance to King George VI.: and as they arrived they repaired to the House of Commons where the oath was administered by the Assistant Clerk of the House. The ceremonies were brief.

Members renewed friendships and discussed general conditions in their own particular parts of the country. One learned that on the Prairies, in Manitoba, the drought area was extending northward, that in the Maritimes the fishermen were still receiving small returns for their products. CHEESEMEN WILL HAVE ACT CHANGED

Marshall Promises Statute To Cover Points Patrons' Group Ask

TORONTO, Jan. 14—(C.P.). — Ontario Dairy Act may be amended to give the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association some of the rights it exercised under the now inoperative Federal legislation, the Natural Products Marketing Act.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Ontario Agriculture Minister, said yesterday after receiving a deputation from the association that he would instruct departmental experts to draft a statute to cover some of the points asked by the deputation.

Under the Marketing Act, the Patrons' Association levied an assessment on cheese factories of five cents for every 100 pounds of cheese. This financed the association and its work in the interest of the producers. Since the act has been inoperative, many cheese factories have quit paying the levy and others say they will continue to pay it only if all do.

"There was remarkable success under the former legislation," said Mr. Marshall. "My idea is to give the association some authority to carry on. We will not pass any legislation as drastic as the Marketing Act."

On the deputation were President A. W. McIntyre, Finch, of the Association; Vice-president R. H. Mayberry, Ingersoll, and Secretary-Treasurer A. L. Joss, Belleville.

FIND CHILDREN ALMOST DEAD

Homesteader Unable To Pay Doctor Delays Call Until All Ill

1 PNEUMONIA, 2 FLU

RIMSEY, Alta., Jan. 14—(C.P.).—Three children of an impoverished homesteader in brush country, 20 miles west of here battled for their lives in hospital today—victims of ailments attributed to virtual starvation.

Dr. John Byers brought the sisters to hospital here after answering the call of a desperate father, Gustaf Zins, whose anxiety for his ailing children overcame his reluctance to call a doctor—a reluctance caused by his lack of money to pay for medical attention.

At the Zins homestead, some 90 miles southwest of Edmonton, Dr. Byers and Constable George Fordham of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police found seven children practically starving and almost naked.

Lillian, three, had contracted pneumonia and was bleeding from the mouth, the doctor said. Herta, seven, and Alvina, 11, were suffering from intestinal influenza, prevalent in the district.

Feather "ticks" provided the only covering for two beds in the house and no blankets were available to wrap about the children" for the 20-mile trip here. The father gave his coat, the mother her sweater, and with the automobile rug and Dr. Byers' own coat, the seriously ill children were covered for the cold journey.

Husband Missing 25 Years Throws Snag Into Will Case

Thought Dead, But Shows Up As Wife's Second Spouse Seeks Her Cash

$20,000 INVOLVED

HALIFAX, Jan. 14 (C.P.). — Outcome of a hearing to set aside a $20,000 will was uncertain to-day following the sensational appearance of a witness believed to have died more than a quarter of a century ago.

A will drawn up in 1912 by Mrs. Sarah Giberson of Halifax, whose body was found in Halifax Harbor last June, left $20,000 to the Salvation Army. Blanchard Giberson of Andover, N.B., her second husband, and Mrs. Lorna Abbott of Forbes Point, N.S., sought to have the will set aside.

Harry Crocker, a 60-year-old retired sailor with tattooed arms and chest, appeared at the hearing yesterday and told an astounded court he was the undivorced first husband of the deceased.

Tears rolled down the veteran mariner's cheeks as he recounted the story of his marriage to 20-year-old Sadie Davenport in 1899. The Fleet was in at the time and he said "it was love at first sight."

Crocker produced documents to prove his identity and marriage. Leaving the Navy, the couple took up residence in Brixton London, he said, but four years later his wife and child returned to Canada. "I never saw or heard of either of them again," he declared.

Crocker said he had come to Halifax "to see justice done" and had no thought of a possibility he might fall heir to part of the estate.

True To Brahminism Widow Cremates Self

Lucknow, India, Jan. 14 (AP).

Her act, the rite of Suttee, was once the custom of bereaved Brahmin wives, but has become almost extinct under British rule.

4 CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMING HOME

Son 10, Saved Badly Burned—Mother Found Outside Delirious

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., Jan. 14.—(AP).—Four children were burned to death and a fireman was seriously injured when flames destroyed a small frame house here early today.

The victims were Violet, 15; Rita, 11; Jean, 7, and Martha, 3, all children of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Petrilia. A son, Bobby, aged 10, was rescued with night clothes and hair aflame as he stood against the front door trying to escape from the flaming home.

Charles Lavarnway, 33, an Ogdensburg fireman, was injured when he fell off a ladder while fighting the fire.

Mrs. Williams said she found him pounding his fists against the front door, trying to escape. She said she broke a window in the door to open it and snatch him to safety.

The father, operator of a small restaurant and taxi business, had gone to work when the fire started.

Firemen said they discovered Mrs. Petrillia delirious, outside her home, unable to explain how she escaped.

The bodies of the four children were found lying crossways on a bed only a short distance from a window leading to a small shed down which they might have crawled to safety.

Scotland Found Wandering, Drifting Towards Ireland

Observatory Reports Great Britain "Bending In Two," Somewhere In Kent

ENGLAND, EUROPE JOINED

GLASGOW, Jan. 14.—(AP). — Scotland was reported to-day by an official of the Glasgow observatory to be drifting toward Ireland and America—at the rate of more than eight feet a year.

Thomas Tannahill, a member of the staff, said their calculations showed the mainland had shifted westward 600 feet in the last 70 years.

England, he explained, has not joined in the movement and, consequently, Great Britain is apparently "bending in two."

Describing the observations which led to the discovery, Tannahill said: "In 1865 Glasgow's longitude west of Greenwich was 17 minutes 10.55 seconds.

"This value was accepted as correct until radio made possible the regular transmission of Greenwich time signals.

"Our observations now show, however, our longitude is in the neighborhood of 17 minutes 11.25 seconds west of Greenwich—the difference represents a real change in longitude.

"Were Scotland accompanied by Greenwich in its meanderings the prospect would not be quite so alarming, but unfortunately Greenwich is being left behind.

"This must be taken to indicate Britain is attached to Europe only in the neighborhood of the Channel, and is turning slowly somewhere in Kent so that the northern part of the island is moving westward while the south remains stationary."

PORT HOPE BUSINESS SECTION MAROONED BY FLOOD WATERS

General views of the extensive flood at Port Hope, which is one of the worst in the memory of the town's oldest inhabitants, and unprecedented at this time of the year, give some idea of the extent to which the Ganaraska River has overflowed its banks. The layout shows: 1, Marshall's Mill looking west from Mill street; 2, The fire hall and lower section of Mill street looking south from the Harwood residence which the family was forced to evacuate; 3, The fire hall marooned in a lake of flood water as seen from the south window of the Harwood home; 4, Ontario street looking south towards the business section.

RAGING WATERS START FLOODS DOZEN CENTRES

12-Hour Rain Sends Rivers Higher Than Usual Spring Freshets

MANY MEN ON GUARD

Dams Are Threatened — Farmers Regard Low Temperatures As Boon

TORONTO, Jan. 14—(C.P.). — Roar of swollen waters to-day roused Ontario's dozing Weatherman and rain-darkened skies echoed the rumblings which broke in on mild and indifferent weather conditions.

Month-long quiet was transformed overnight into a situation of looming destruction in Eastern and Central parts of the province. Rain fell for almost 12 hours in Eastern and Central Ontario. At Port Hope, Toronto, St. Catharines, Peterborough, Belleville and Kitchener the threat of floods was felt.

The Ganaraska River raged at Port Hope after rising to flood downtown residences and business establishments preventing hundreds of men and women from going to work and keeping at least 300 children from schools.

Don Overflows

In Toronto district, the Don river and Etobicoke creek were pushed and over their banks by heavy rainfall last night.

The river flooded railway tracks in part of Toronto East and the water spread across a low-lying district by Leaside viaduct filling cellars and basements.

Etobicoke creek raged and threatened Brampton business section. Part of Toronto-Woodside Highway disappeared under a foot of water from the flooded west branch of the Humber river.

The Moira river at Belleville rose more than two feet after all-night rain, and residents of the district who last year experienced the worst flood conditions in a half-century again saw water pouring over Coleman's flats on the west side of the city. The flats are the low-lands of Belleville, and no immediate danger was seen.

Employees Stand Guard

The River Speed, at Guelph, boiled under pressure of heavy rains and public works employees stood guard at points along its banks where danger threatened.

One Man Taken To Hospital Unconscious After Being Swept Down Roaring Ganaraska

GARAGE COLLAPSES

300 Children Unable To Reach School, Factory Marooned, Merchants Move Stocks

PORT HOPE, Ont., Jan. 14—(CP)—Snatched from the rushing Ganaraska River, Roy Croft, a shoe store manager, was taken unconscious to hospital today, first near-victim of a flood whose waters spilled over downtown Port Hope. The river overflowed its banks during the night.

Croft, walking along a washout on the Canadian National Railways tracks, was thrown into the river when a loose tie gave way as he stepped on it. He was carried down the stream, finally holding to a clump of bushes which formed a small island. Men ashore threw him a rope and dragged him to safety.

Hundreds of men were prevented from going to work, at least 300 children were kept from attending school and business was paralyzed by the flood. At noon the wall of a garage owned by George Caldwell collapsed and a motor car moved out into the five-feet-deep water in the downtown section.

The flood was at its worst only a few blocks from Lake Ontario, into which the Ganaraska empties. Heavy rainfall yesterday and last night swelled the stream north of Port Hope and the narrow river bed was unable to hold the rushing waters.

Washout On Peterborough Line.

More than 100 feet of Canadian National Railways line were washed out on the Port Hope-Peterborough branch. The washout occurred about a quarter-mile north of here.

Downtown business was stopped. A few merchants went to their stores early, hurriedly moving stock on lower shelves to a safer place as cellars filled up and the rushing waters started to cover floors at street level. But these merchants were marooned. They couldn't get home for hours.

Scores of others, fearing last night the river would flood as it did last spring during an ice jam, had moved stock out of danger and were unable to reach their business places. Absence of ice kept damage to property and store equipment lower than in the 1936 flood. Children living in the east end who attend Central public school stayed at home. They would have had to walk in water several feet deep to reach school. Classes went on, however, for pupils living in the dry sector. The school, situated on a hill, was not in danger of being flooded.

ACOSTA AND BERRY ACE U.S. AVIATORS HALED TO COURT

Federal Officials Would Learn Who Is Recruiting Americans For Spanish War

PAIR JUST RETURNING

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (A.P.). — Bert Acosta and Gordon Berry, ace American aviators who fought for the Spanish Government forces in the Civil War, to-day were served with subpoenas to appear before the Federal Grand Jury when they returned aboard the French liner Paris.

Federal agents boarded the ship at quarantine and served the subpoenas, which required immediate appearance. They went directly to the Federal Building from the pier.

Assistant Federal Attorney John Dailey announced several days ago he was investigating the recruiting of United States citizens for service in Spain, and would attempt to learn from Acosta and Berry who had signed them on.

TRENTON-WOOLER BRIDGE GOES OUT

Flooding Trent Paralyzes Traffic On Highway—Myers Creek Over Banks

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 14—(C.P.).—The Trent river at Trenton swollen by torrential rain throughout the night rose in miniature flood today, filling tributary creeks to overflowing. The Stinson Mill bridge on the Trenton-Wooler road was washed out to-day, paralyzing traffice over this highway and making passage to Wooler impossible from Trenton except by way of Frankford. Myers creek has also overflowed its bank and all low-lying lands in the northern part of Trenton town is inundated and there is between two to three feet of water in the C.N.R. subway on the Trenton-Wooler highway.

Damages of half a cent were awarded Leslie Turkington against a policeman who arrested him at Brighton, England, on a charge of fraud for which he had already served a sentence.

Beggars Use $12,000 Car To Travel In

Korneuburg, Austria, Jan. 14. KARL Karasek and his wife, Anno, who begged while travelling in a car worth $12,000, were sentenced to two and three months' imprisonment respectively here for "shameless exploitation of the charity of the public."

Karasek admitted in court that he and his wife also owned a villa worth $5,000, two apartment houses in Vienna worth $45,000, and stocks yielding an income of $60 a month. Their system was to stop the car outside towns, dress in rags, enter the town and beg from door to door. The average collection was from $5 to $7.50 a day.

Karasek told the Judge they bought the car to save railway fare.

MOIRA RIVER RISES 2 FEET AFTER RAIN

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 14. — (CP).—The Moira river, scene of the worst flood in the history of this city last March, has risen some two feet with a strong current, the result of an all-night rain, one of the heaviest experienced in this district during the past year. The river is open far above Corbyville but there is no immediate danger of the same results as last spring. A rebuttment wall, some eight feet high, holds the water within its bed.

The rain, however, has caused considerable flooding of Coleman flats on the west side of the city and some houses have water in their cellars, while storm sewers throughout the city were worked to full capacity to carry off the surface water. The Public Works Department were busy all night keeping them open.

Creek Rises 6 Feet.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 14. — (CP).—Heavy and continuous rains during the night caused the west-end creek to rise about six feet above its normal level, inundating the water front spur line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and also flooding two or three small traffic bridges.

Farmers reported all low-lying land to be flooded.

PARLIAMENT HILL HIVE OF ACTIVITY FOR OPENING DAY

Unseasonable Mildness, Rain Falling Surprise Western Members

C.C.F. HOLD CAUCUS

OTTAWA, Jan. 14 (C.P.).—Parliament Hill bustled to-day with great activity. The lengthy recess over, Senators and Commoners were hurrying and scurrying around as last-minute preparations for the opening of Parliament went forward. Evidences were that both Houses would contain a representation larger than usual for the opening day.

The weather in Ottawa was unpropitious. The atmosphere was thick, with rain falling early. Ice-covered streets and veritable lakes marked the roads leading to Parliament Hill. The unseasonable mildness of the day surprised Western members who had left their homes in zero temperatures.

Their first duty to-day was to swear allegiance to King George VI.; and as they arrived they repaired to the House of Commons where the oath was administered by the Assistant Clerk of the House. The ceremonies were brief.

Members renewed friendships and discussed general conditions in their own particular parts of the country. One learned that on the Prairies, in Manitoba, the drought area was extending northward, that in the Maritimes the fishermen were still receiving small returns for their products. FIND CHILDREN ALMOST DEAD

Homesteader Unable To Pay Doctor Delays Call Until All Ill

1 PNEUMONIA, 2 FLU

RIMSEY, Alta., Jan. 14—(C.P.).—Three children of an impoverished homesteader in brush country, 20 miles west of here battled for their lives in hospital today—victims of ailments attributed to virtual starvation.

Dr. John Byers brought the sisters to hospital here after answering the call of a desperate father, Gustaf Zins, whose anxiety for his ailing children overcame his reluctance to call a doctor—a reluctance caused by his lack of money to pay for medical attention.

At the Zins homestead, some 90 miles southwest of Edmonton, Dr. Byers and Constable George Fordham of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police found seven children practically starving and almost naked.

Lillian, three, had contracted pneumonia and was bleeding from the mouth, the doctor said. Herta, seven, and Alvina, 11, were suffering from intestinal influenza, prevalent in the district.

Feather "ticks" provided the only covering for two beds in the house and no blankets were available to wrap about the children for the 20-mile trip here. The father gave his coat, the mother her sweater, and with the automobile rug and Dr. Byers' own coat, the seriously ill children were covered for the cold journey.

4 CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMING HOME

Son 10, Saved Badly Burned—Mother Found Outside Delirious

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., Jan. 14.—(AP).—Four children were burned to death and a fireman was seriously injured when flames destroyed a small frame house here early today.

The victims were Violet, 15; Rita, 11; Jean, 7, and Martha, 3, all children of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Petrilia. A son, Bobby, aged 10, was rescued with night clothes and hair aflame as he stood against the front door trying to escape from the flaming home.

Charles Lavarnway, 33, an Ogdensburg fireman, was injured when he fell off a ladder while fighting the fire.

Mrs. Williams said she found him pounding his fists against the front door, trying to escape. She said she broke a window in the door to open it and snatch him to safety.

The father, operator of a small restaurant and taxi business, had gone to work when the fire started.

Firemen said they discovered Mrs. Petrillia delirious, outside her home, unable to explain how she escaped.

The bodies of the four children were found lying crossways on a bed only a short distance from a window leading to a small shed down which they might have crawled to safety.

CHEESEMEN WILL HAVE ACT CHANGED

Marshall Promises Statute To Cover Points Patrons' Group Ask

TORONTO, Jan. 14—(C.P.). — Ontario Dairy Act may be amended to give the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association some of the rights it exercised under the now inoperative Federal legislation, the Natural Products Marketing Act.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Ontario Agriculture Minister, said yesterday after receiving a deputation from the association that he would instruct departmental experts to draft a statute to cover some of the points asked by the deputation.

Under the Marketing Act, the Patrons' Association levied an assessment on cheese factories of five cents for every 100 pounds of cheese. This financed the association and its work in the interest of the producers. Since the act has been inoperative, many cheese factories have quit paying the levy and others say they will continue to pay it only if all do.

"There was remarkable success under the former legislation," said Mr. Marshall. "My idea is to give the association some authority to carry on. We will not pass any legislation as drastic as the Marketing Act."

On the deputation were President A. W. McIntyre, Pinch, of the Association; Vice-president R. H. Mayberry, Ingersoll, and Secretary-Treasurer A. L. Joss, Belleville.

Husband Missing 25 Years Throws Snag Into Will Case

$20,000 INVOLVED

HALIFAX, Jan. 14 (C.P.). — Outcome of a hearing to set aside a $20,000 will was uncertain to-day following the sensational appearance of a witness believed to have died more than a quarter of a century ago.

A will drawn up in 1912 by Mrs. Sarah Giberson of Halifax, whose body was found in Halifax Harbor last June, left $20,000 to the Salvation Army. Blanchard Giberson of Andover, N.B., her second husband, and Mrs. Lorna Abbott of Forbes Point, N.S., sought to have the will set aside.

Harry Crocker, a 60-year-old retired sailor with tattooed arms and chest, appeared at the hearing yesterday and told an astounded court he was the undivorced first husband of the deceased.

Tears rolled down the veteran mariner's cheeks as he recounted the story of his marriage to 20-year-old Sadie Davenport in 1899. The Fleet was in at the time and he said "it was love at first sight."

Crocker produced documents to prove his identity and marriage. Leaving the Navy, the couple took up residence in Brixton, London, he said, but four years later his wife and child returned to Canada. "I never saw or heard of either of them again," he declared.

Crocker said he had come to Halifax "to see justice done" and had no thought of a possibility he might fall heir to part of the estate.

True To Brahminism Widow Cremates Self

Lucknow, India, Jan. 14 (AP).

Her act, the rite of Suttee, was once the custom of bereaved Brahmin wives, but has become almost extinct under British rule.

The wail of conches into which many of the witnesses blew and the clanging of cymbals drowned out the woman's agonized cries as she cremated herself before a temple near Agra.

Scotland Found Wandering, Drifting Towards Ireland

Observatory Reports Great Britain "Bending In Two," Somewhere In Kent

ENGLAND, EUROPE JOINED

GLASGOW, Jan. 14.—(AP). — Scotland was reported to-day by an official of the Glasgow observatory to be drifting toward Ireland and America—at the rate of more than eight feet a year.

Thomas Tannahill, a member of the staff, said their calculations showed the mainland had shifted westward 600 feet in the last 70 years.

England, he explained, has not joined in the movement and, consequently, Great Britain is apparently "bending in two."

Describing the observations which led to the discovery, Tannahill said: "In 1865 Glasgow's longitude west of Greenwich was 17 minutes 10.55 seconds.

"This value was accepted as correct until radio made possible the regular transmission of Greenwich time signals.

"Our observations now show, however, our longitude is in the neighborhood of 17 minutes 11.25 seconds west of Greenwich—the difference represents a real change in longitude.

"Were Scotland accompanied by Greenwich in its meanderings the prospect would not be quite so alarming, but unfortunately Greenwich is being left behind.

"This must be taken to indicate Britain is attached to Europe only in the neighborhood of the Channel, and is turning slowly somewhere in Kent so that the northern part of the island is moving westward while the south remains stationary."

Power Commission To Pay Action Costs Contracts Held Legal

Unaffected By 1935 Legislation Chief Justice Rose Rules

HEPBURN IS SILENT

Interest At 6 Per Cent Is Levied On Three Payments Due

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—(CP)—The action of the Power Commission Act declaring invalid a 1929 power contract between the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission and the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company is ultra vires of the Ontario Legislature. In delivering this judgment in high court yesterday, Chief Justice Hugh E. Rose awarded the power company $573,750 in damages.

Chief Justice Rose ordered the Power Commission to pay costs of the action as he found the contract was legal and unaffected by the 1935 legislation passed by the Legislature, resulting in cancellation of contracts the commission held with Quebec power firms.

The Commission was ordered to pay interest at the rate of six per cent per annum: on $83,750 from November 20 1935; on $245,000 from October 20, 1936, and on $245,000 from January 20, 1936, until the day the high court ruling was delivered.

Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck and the Royal Trust Company were named in the Beauharnois action but Chief Justice Rose dismissed the case against them. The trust firm are trustees for holders of first mortgage bonds of Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company and holders of collateral trust bonds of Beauharnois Power Corporation.

Premier Silent.

Although Premier Mitchell Hepburn did not make any comment following the court ruling, a statement made previously by him indicated he expected the Legislature, starting its session January 19, would pass legislation which would prevent power firms collecting from the government. This statement was made in connection with power commission appeal before Privy Council against judgment in the Ottawa Valley Power Company action.

Chief Justice Rose previously ruled the Ottawa Valley firm was unable to bring action against the Power Commission until the Attorney General's consent was obtained, as provided for in the Power Commission Act. The Ottawa Valley Company, however, was successful in appealing this decision to the Ontario Appeal Court and the Power Commission has taken the case to Privy Council.

The Beauharnois contract called for the Quebec firm to supply or hold available for the Power Commission 350,000 horse power of electrical energy at $15 per horse power. Under this contract, Chief Justice Rose declared, the Power Commission obtained rights over the company's property in Quebec.

Indian Goes To Jail Till Law Untangles

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 14 (AP)

JOSEPH Bighorse, wealthy Osage Indian, languished in jail yesterday because one arm of the white man's law refused to let him do what another arm of the law said he must do—pay $2,000 alimony.

Bighorse has plenty of money, a hearty aversion to jails, and a sincere desire to pay Ethel Bighorse, a white woman, the alimony due her. But after a District Court awarded Ethel the money, the Osage Indian Agency —which controls the fortunes of Indian wards made wealthy by oil money from tribal lands—ruled Bighorse could not pay. Judge Harry Halley sent Bighorse to jail for contempt of court.

ONTARIO TO DEBATE ON POWER FIRST

Usual Business To Be Sidetracked Until Issue Settled By House

TORONTO, Jan. 14—(C.P.).—Debate on the state of affairs in Ontario, usually first thing on the Legislature agenda, after the Throne Speech, this year will be sidetracked until Government bills respecting Hydro contracts, now the subject of litigation have been dealt with.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, returned to his office after a week's absence because of bronchitis, made this announcement yesterday. The bills may be introduced Opening Day, Tuesday, January 19, but the Government's mind is not made up on this point. This would be a departure from precedent, but the Premier is anxious to get the power debate underway Wednesday.

The Premier said power companies whose contracts were declared null by an act of the Legislature in 1935 would never collect a cent from the province on the strength of them. Legislation to be introduced will anticipate a possible adverse decision by the Privy Council on an appeal by the Province from a court decision in favor of the Ottawa Valley Power Co.

Preparations for the session are already much in evidence around the Legislative Buildings.

Monday there will be a Liberal caucus. The members will hear a forecast of the government's legislative program. There will likely be a Conservative caucus Monday.

Opposition offices are busy preparing questions to be placed on the Order Paper. George S. Henry, formally chosen House Leader, is directing this work.

LAKEFIELD MAN INJURED IN FALL

Steve Alford Breaks Bone In Heel When He Slips From Ladder

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 14.—Steve Alford, Lakefield, an employee of the Canadian Nepheline Ltd., met with a nasty accident at the Nepheline Company's plant early yesterday morning when he slipped from a ladder which he was descending and fell a distance of approximately 15 feet to the floor below, where he hit the sharp edge of a piece of angle iron lying on the floor, and received rather serious injuries to one foot, and a bad shaking up.

The accident occurred about 5.30 a.m. when Mr. Alford who was working on the night shift was descending a ladder with a pail of resin in one hand after dressing a belt when he lost his footing and fell. Though badly shaken up, the injured man was not unconscious. Several workmen who were close at hand, rushed to his assistance. Dr. H. E. Moore, who was called, took Mr. Alford to St. Joseph's Hospital in Peterborough, where an x-ray examination showed that a bone in his heel had been fractured. He will be laid up for some time, Dr. Moore stated.

STAINS IN AUTO SPUR DETECTIVES ON KILLER'S TRAIL

WARRANT ISSUED

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 14.—(AP).—Red stains on an abandoned automobile, possibly the one into which a merciless kidnapper threw the body of stabbed and bludgeoned Charles Mattson, 10, spurred officers along an apparently warming trail to-day, seeking the killer.

Uncommunicative United States' Justice Department agents utilized the most modern science to determine whether the stains were blood which flowed from the victim before his slayer tossed him, battered, naked—and stabbed in the back—into snow-covered brush lands near Everett.

The automobile, stolen last Friday night, was found in Everett. Authorities impounded it, and stationed armed guards about it in a police garage.

While officers also sought a knife and studied clues reported almost hourly from widespread areas, Federal officials took quick steps to prosecute the killer.

Abductor Now An Outlaw.

A "John Doe" warrant, issued by a United States' commissioner late yesterday, officially made an outlaw of the abductor who seized Charles, December 27, passed up offers of the demanded $28,000 ransom and left his battered body where it was found by a hunter last Monday.

In California, police sought the first man definitely named as wanted for questioning in the case. He was Fred Orrin Haynes, former convict. The man's possible connection with the case was not revealed.

British Columbia police turned two men, convicted of carrying arms across the border into Canada, over to United States' immigration authorities. Police said they were convinced the men, Leonard Dahl, 31, and William Bailey, 44, had nothing to do with the kidnapping.

INSURGENT CRUISER BOMBS VALENCIA

Malaga is Also Shelled--Madrid Pushes Evacuation Of Civilians

MADRID, Jan. 14—(AP)—Thousands of Spanish non-combatants, obeying the government's compulsory evacuation order, quit the capital today in endless streams.

While the evacuation proceeded the war office reported Socialist forces had driven back an insurgent column near Majadahonda, northwest of the capital.

It acknowledged, however, insurgents who swept through that sector last week to break government communications with El Escorial and the Guadarrama defence line still held control at Las Rozas, El Plantio and Aravaca. Aravaca is about five miles from Madrid on the El Escorial highway.

Brief reports from Valencia, now the seat of the Spanish government, said the insurgent cruiser Canarias bombarded the city early last night.

(Later reports from Valencia said an insurgent ship or ships shelled the port but were driven away by land batteries and government air bombers after a heavy exchange of fire.

(The insurgent cruisers Canarias and Espana were said to have shelled the port of Malaga, one of the few remaining Socialist strongholds in the south, Monday. The whole city, it was said, was heavily damaged, including the British consulate and a building believed American-owned.)

SAYS SEA SERPENT JUST KING HERRING

Sometimes 20-30 Feet Long, Have Crest On Heads Curator Explains

LA JOLLA, Calif., Jan. 14 (CP).—An explanation for cadborosaurus, the covorting sea serpent of British Columbia, and all other sea serpents, was put forward today by Percy Barnhart, curator of the biological collection at the Scripps Institution of Chanograph here. He claims the sea serpents are nothing more than common king-herring.

The king-herring, scientifically known as regalecus russell, regalecus glesne, or trachipterus ijmae, is a member of the family regale-cidae, popularly known as the king-of-the-herrings.

It is a long, ribbon-like fish that lives in the deep sea. The king-herrings seldom approach the shore, although some specimens have been cast up on the beaches by submarine disturbances. Such specimens have been captured at Catalina Island and at Newport Beach.

The body of the king herring is very slender and of great size, sometimes reaching a length of 20 or 30 feet. Its sinuous, snake-like motion while swimming makes it an excellent double for the traditional sea serpent, as does its head, which is adorned by a bony crest. The body is fragile, resembling jelly, and its bones are very light and thin.

"STEWED" DUCK

Quacker Caught Directing Traffic, With Alcoholic Breath—Is Jailed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 14 (CP)—Officers Keith Griswold and John Albrecht found a duck with an alcoholic breath directing traffic at an intersection and arrested it. "When we told him to move on, he honked at us," Griswold said.

At the police station, officers wanted to know what the duck was drinking. Griswold said a winebibber falls forward while a whisky imbiber falls backward.

The duck—placed on its own — promptly sat down. Sergeant Thomas Murphy booked the fowl for drunkenness—cause unknown.

THE BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 38

COLINLDALE gazed furtively out of the window at Grinfold, where a busy scene was going on, for this was market day. Stalls covered the cobbled square, and further off pens were filling up with sheep and cattle. Farmers and their wives were busy doing their bit of shopping, and the place presented a peaceful aspect far removed from the crime-stained Abbey.

Lady Severinge, who had called him from London to meet her here to discuss the disappearance of her children with their governess, queried petulantly, too, why the detectives had not found her husband's murderer.

"I should have thought that James was the most likely," he said vindictively. "They always say that one has to look for someone who stands to gain by a crime, and he's feathered his nest all right."

"Do you really think that, Eric, or is it merely jealousy?" Hilda asked.

"What about that bell ringing in the middle of the night?" Eric exclaimed. "I'd have gone to see about it, but you wouldn't let me. Of course, it was Sir Henry ringing, and James answered it—James who knew he was coming in for a fortune and had every reason to get rid of the old man, hoping that the blame would rest on us. Surely you can see that. Why did he stay on? Why is he there now?" Colindale was becoming excited with his own tale, and Hilda's eyes opened with horror.

"Why didn't you tell this to the detective?" she asked.

"It's only since I left and have had time for thinking that I worked this out. The affair took us all on the hip, and things moved so rapidly that I didn't grasp the meaning."

"You'll tell Mr. Selden?"

"What evidence have I got?" he asked crossly. "And tell me another thing. What had Sir Henry and James been to each other in the past?"

"Whatever do you mean?"

"You are not a fool, Hilda," he said rudely. "You surely knew that James was no more a butler than I was—he ran the whole show, and that olly manner of his was all put on. They had been together for years before Sir Henry's father died."

"Then, Eric, isn't that all the more reason why I should leave? Don't you care about my safety?"

"I don't think there is likely to be any danger to you," he said roughly. "Why should there be? You haven't got anything to leave to James, and he could kick you out at any time he wanted to."

"Eric, that's not very nicely expressed. I was going to suggest that we shorten the time, and that would give you the right to protect me and to live at the Abbey, as the children would be your step-daughters."

"A nice scandal there would be," he sneered. "At present, only James and that lawyer know anything about our affairs, but you'd set every tongue wagging, and very likely cause suspicion—you know what a village is. A jealous husband can be dangerous——" He stopped abruptly, and an ugly look came to his face. "I'll have a talk with James. . . . . No, Hilda, it would never do for us to get married yet. It's just because you are scared, but if you like I'll come down and look into things. You see, that fellow Reid being laid up will give me an excuse to visit the estate while he's ill."

"I'm so glad. You'll come back with me today?"

"No, I can't very well do that—I've got some engagements I can't cut, and, besides, it would look fishy if I turned up at once."

A tortured look came to Hilda's face. "Eric, are you playing the game? You told me you were going to visit some friends in Scotland. What are you doing in London?"

He forced a smile, and took Hilda's hand. "Jealous, little girl? As a matter of fact, you are quite on the wrong track. I have to see Mrs. Thornton tonight. She's coming up to look for a new situation. You needn't be jealous of her, but she wrote me a wild letter—I believe she was trying to implicate me in the murder—and I'm going to find out if she can tell me anything about James. She may have valuable information—she would sell"

Hilda knew Colindale only too well. A flash of intuition came to her with crushing force. She drew her hand away and stood up, facing the man.

"Eric! Don't tell me that you have sunk so low as to contemplate blackmail—you and that wretched woman together."

"Whatever put that absurd thought into your head?"

"You are going to attempt to blackmail James, to get money from him in order that you and Mrs. Thornton may keep your mouths shout about what you think you know."

"If you think that," he said indifferently, "it's a wonder you want to marry me."

"Eric," she cried passionately, "I'm all alone now. I've made a hell of my life—the children hate me—I deceived my husband, and if you are going to desert me I shall make an end of it."

"Now you are getting hysterical, Hilda," he said, with a note of alarm in his voice. "I've told you I will come down to the Abbey soon. Isn't that enough? You must give me time. You can say that you wrote to me asking me to come and see about the estate."

He ordered lunch, and with food and drink, for she had touched nothing that day, her poise was partially restored.

Colindale laid himself out to be kind, as he could when he liked, and discussed the future when this dark cloud should have passed away. He exercised the same fascination over her weak mind as he had done so fatally in the past, and she almost persuaded herself that he was the strong, clean man who had only erred through love of her, something that woman will always condone.

With a brighter outlook, and in his company, she felt calmer, and they spent the afternoon gaily enough, walking round the market and amusing themselves with the various games at a fair that had been set up. She saw him off at the station, and it was late when she caught the bus back to Evenden.

Tired, she reached the gloomy Abbey.

"Mr. Selden, the detective, is here, your ladyship," James announced when he had unfastened the great door and admitted Lady Severinge. "He has been waiting to see you."

"I am very glad," she said truthfully. "And how is Mr. Reid?"

"Still in bed, m'lady, and with a high fever, but the doctor thinks that it is shock and the injection he gave him."

"There is no news, I suppose?" She asked the question dreamily, knowing that James would have told her at once if the children had been found. The butler shook his head.

"Dinner is ready when you wish for it, and I ventured to lay for two, thinking you might care to have Mr. Selden with you to talk over matters."

"That is very thoughtful of you, James. I shall have to talk over things with you shortly—this question of the children. You see, it makes my position here rather ambiguous."

"I hope most sincerely that you will not worry about that, m'lady. I can assure you that as long as I am here it will be my pleasure and a privilege to continue to look after your interests, which I know was my late master's intentions."

And this was the man, Hilda thought bitterly, that Eric was proposing to blackmail and was accusing of murder.

Selden's presence reassured her. She was genuinely glad to have him in the house, and his open pleasant face had a soothing effect on her jaded nerves. Lady Severinge felt that here was a man who could be trusted, and whose judgment was sound. She found that he was a man of wide reading and culture and could talk well. He studiously avoided any mention of the dark business in which he was engaged, and confined to talk of a general nature.

When James had left them, for he had insisted on waiting upon them himself, she fetched cigars for Selden from a cupboard in the oak panelling and lighted a cigaret herself.

"And now that we are alone, Mr. Selden, can you throw any light on this business at all?"

"I was going to ask you the same question, Lady Severnge," he said gravely. "Please don't think I want to probe into your private life or take up the past, but I am sure that you can help me if you care to."

"In what way?" Her hand shook as she spoke, and a frightened look came to her eyes.

Shelden smiled at her, and shook his head. "That is not, much use," he said. "It is either confidence, sincerely given and respected by me, or it is useless to talk."

TRAPPER'S FAMILY LOSE HUT IN FIRE

Pilot Brings Relief After They Live Week In Open—Two Rabbits Only Food

CAVELL, Ont., Jan. 14 (CP)—A French-Canadian trapper and his family of 10 were recovering today from six days spent in a spruce-bough shelter in below-zero weather after their log trading post at Dog Lake burned to the ground Jan. 7. Dog Lake is 40 miles north of this Thunder Bay municipality.

Flying over the trading post of Frank Gagnier yesterday, pilot Roy St. John discovered the ruins and noticed the family. He returned to Nakina and loaded supplies and clothing. On his return he found the family clad in nightclothes and all in a weakened condition from frostbite and starvation.

During the six days they had shared two rabbits. Two small girls were said to have suffered frozen feet and plans have been made to transport them by air to hospital at Nakina.

AGED COUPLE ARE WED IN PENETANG

Couple Is Surrounded By a Group Of Admiring Friends

PENTANG, Jan. 14 — As Penetang's octogenarian newlyweds completed their first day of married life, it was revealed yesterday that a great-granddaughter of the new Mrs. Michael Desjardine was married quietly only last week.

Olive Dusome, 82 years old, became the bride of Michael Desjardine, 85 years old, Sunday evening. The great-granddaughter of the octogenarian bride was married in the same church last Tuesday.

Although Mrs. Desjardine did not have any children of her own, she adopted a daughter, Hattie, who later became Mrs. Tom Bouchier.

Herbert Bouchier is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bouchier, and it was his daughter, Clarice, 20 years old, who was wed last week to Henry Deschamp. Both are of Highland Point.

For the past two days Mr. and Mrs. Desjardine have been the centre of a throng of admiring friends, and Mrs. Desjardine is enjoying her place in the spotlight.

"It was our desire for companionship in the autumn days of life which resulted in the wedding," Mrs. Desjardine said.

SAVE 75,000 BOYS.

TORONTO, Jan 14 (CP)—Plans to save 75,000 boys in Canada and the United States from idleness that might lead to crime were drawn up at the meeting here to-day of the international executive of the Optimists' Club.

"Last year Optimists in Canada doubled their membership," said International President Earl G. Stanza of St. Louis, explaining that in recognition of the "splendid increase" the meeting is being held in Toronto, the first time the executive has met outside St. Louis, Mo., where annual meetings have been held for twenty years.

ONTARIO DIVIDED IN FIVE SECTIONS ON REFORESTATION

Legislation And Public Meetings Planned To Save Province's Water Supply

EXEMPT TREES OF TAXES

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 14.—(CP).—Ontario was mapped out in five sections to-day in preparation for a campaign to meet the water conservation problem through reforestation. Legislation by the Ontario Government, public meetings and an education campaign were scheduled to take part in the fight to save the province's water supply.

Agriculturists, municipal officers and other representatives of 13 counties met at the Ontario Agricultural College here yesterday and laid plans for the campaign. All angles of reforestation and conservation were discussed as the program of action was planned.

F. S. Newman of the government forestry station at St. Williams said misuse of forest lands throughout the province was without parallel. Angus Dixon, M.L.A. for North Perth, suggested county councils set up committees to build up strong conservation feeling in their counties.

The Ontario government will be petitioned to amend the Assessment Act whereby only land will be assessed. At present the value of standing woodland is assessed and it was claimed the tree crop was assessed about 40 times during the growing period.

Teach It in Schools

Teaching of water conservation in schools, holding of public meetings on conservation and educational programs to bring the matter before the people of the province were other suggestions made at the meeting.

Division of the section of the province affected by counties into five districts in which organizations will be formed to carry out the campaign follows:

No. 1—Essex, Kent, Elgin, Lambton, Middlesex, Huron, Perth, Norfolk and Oxford.

No. 2—Welland, Lincoln, Haldimand, Wentworth, Halton, Brant and Waterloo.

No. 3—Bruce, Grey, Dufferin, Simcoe, Wellington, Peel and York.

No. 4—Ontario, Durham, Victoria, Peterborough, Hastings, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington.

No. 5—Renfrew, Lanark, Carleton, Grenville, Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry, Leeds, Frontenac, Prescott and Russell.

MARMORA.

DEBATE IS ENJOYED BY MARMORA W.I.

Affirmative Wins "Resolved Farming Industry More Important Than Any Other"

MARMORA, Jan. 14.—The monthly meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. A. Rice, with twenty-eight members present. Mrs. W. C. Spry presided.

The meeting opened with 'O Canada' and the Institute Ode. The roll call was "A New Year's Resolution.' Current Events were handled by Mrs. Harold Mumby.

In a debate, "Resolved, that the farming industry is of greater importance than any other industry,' the affirmative was taken by Mesdames W. J. Pack and A Campion, while the negative was taken by Mrs. W. C. Spry and Miss M. Brown.

The judges were Mesdames T. E. Laycock, A. Gordier and D. Thomson. The honors went to the affirmative side.

Miss M. Savage gave a paper on "Canadian Industries," which was followed by a solo by Miss Flora Sanderson, entitled, "Melody of Love." Mrs. E. C. Prentice gave a humorous reading "At the Dentist's," after which a geographic contest was put on with Mrs. A. Campion winning.

The National Anthem was sung at the close and refreshments were then served.

Canadian Cyclists Arrested In Berlin

On a cycling tour of the world, two Canadian youths who left Toronto last July are reported to have been arrested in Berlin and held in custody by the authorities there. dented and the river rolled higher even than during periods of spring thaw. At Riverside Park in Guelph a bridge was torn away and the municipal wood supply swept down stream.

Waterloo County farmers near Kitchener saw a one and one-third inches of rain fall during the past few hours, and streams threatening to go on the rampage.

At Bridgeport the Grand river rose five feet during the night and the village dam overflowed to sidewalks and streets as the waters continued to press.

In Niagara Falls district flood conditions also loomed. Beaver creek near St. Catharines raced over its banks and two streets were submerged. Below Merriton, Hartzell road was flooded but traffic was able to move slowly.

Kettle Creek Flats around St. Thomas felt the touch of flood waters only lightly although several homes in the city had water-filled cellars. Conditions at Port Stanley were normal.

Continuous rain in Brockville district caused West-End creek to rise about six feet above normal level and the waterfront Canadian Pacific Railways spur line was inundated and two or three small traffic bridges were partly submerged. Low farmlands were flooded.

Thames river in Southwest Ontario was rain-swollen also and reached a new season high-mark. Thames Valley Flats were covered with moving water and at Ingersoll water seeped into basements.

In far-Northern parts of the province normal January conditions were in evidence. There was no open water in North Bay district and only anxiety given residents was by icy streets and sidewalks.

Lumbermen throughout Ontario continued to be handicapped by lack of snow preventing removal of cut lumber from the woods.

To farmers in districts removed from dangerous streams, the continued low temperatures were a boon. Cattle-feeding problems were lightened by the drop in wintering animals' appetites. And lack of feed supplies caused by drought conditions in many parts of the province last summer were felt less severely.

At Goderich, grain vessels were able to move to elevators unhindered by ice conditions for the first January in years.

SCALES BURNED AT LORNEVILLE

Favorable Wind Saves Business Section From Being Destroyed

HALIBURTON MEN HURT

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Jan. 14.—Fire on Tuesday evening totally destroyed the weigh-scales at Lorneville. The building, in which the scales were stationed, was one of the landmarks of the village. It was situated in front of Hancock's store, and favorable wind conditions, it is claimed, saved the business section from being fire swept.

Hector Miller, a resident of Haliburton, had a narrow escape from being seriously, if not fatally, injured this week while working on the Eagle Lake-Redstone Highway. He was on the top of an embankment when a blast went off. A sharp stone struck him on the back of the head, stunning him and inflicting a deep cut which required several stitches. When climbing down the rocky bank he slipped and fell on the stones with the result that a deep cut was caused on his forehead, requiring six stitches.

Mr. J. Hathaway, of Eagle Lake, and an employee of the International Cooperage Company, had his leg broken in two place this week. He slipped on a board while passing through the plant. He was taken to the Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Haliburton.

Archie Trudel, of Fenelon Falls, had the misfortune to break his arm this week. He was walking from a neighbor's residence to his own home when he slipped and fell.

neighbors to move their belongings from the house which seemed to be threatened with collapse, paused momentarily.

"Mother and dad have lived here for twenty-four years," Miss Harwood declared, "and this is the worst flood we have ever experienced. Puffing briskly at a cigarette and laughing in the face of the cold and inconvenience to which they were subjected by the flood, Miss Harwood jokingly declared, "mother and dad are over at another son's house, but we won't give up the ship until we have to."

Her brother told a reporter: "We were all awakened between two and three o'clock this morning by a big log which crashed into the side of the house. We looked out of the window and saw that it had been carried down from the mill by the flood waters. We got up and around four o'clock the bell in the fire hall tower started to ring and fire sirens were sounded to warn the people in the low lying sections of the danger. It was not until seven-thirty that the water got so high," and he added casting an anxious glance out of the window, it doesn't seem to be going down any."

Fire Hall Marooned

From the south window of the house across a waste of water where pavements, sidewalks and boulevards ought normally to be seen, the fire hall presented a marooned appearance. Along with stores and other business houses adjacent it was inundated, but the firemen were still there judging by the occasionally screaming of sirens that came from that direction.

Looking west from that point, The Examiner saw a garage that had been swept away. A new car which the garage had once housed was lying half in and half out of the water. Crowds lined the river banks on more elevated sections of Mill street, and while the older people wore worried frowns as they saw property being destroyed before their eyes, and were doubtless calculating the loss, the younger generation were taking it all as a good excuse to stay away from their studies. Indeed one group of schoolboys declared that the public schools were closed.

country industrial and economic conditions were good; in others, they were decidedly bad.

Few Seating Changes.

Few changes have been made either in office space for the members or in their seating arrangements in the House. Hon. C. H. Cahan, former Secretary of State, has moved to the room once occupied by Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier. The party whips were to-day conferring on the matter of accommodations for Dr. S. F. Tolmie, who returns to the Commons after an absence of some years. Dr. Tolmie ranks among the senior Privy Councillors.

In spite of the bustling, at least one group found time to-day to "caucus." This was the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation Party, whose members met in the room of J. S. Woodsworth, their leader, for a preliminary discussion on general policy.

Indications were that the Liberal party would probably hold their first caucus next Wednesday. When the Conservatives assemble depends upon the arrival in Ottawa of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett.

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

BY A PLATE GLASS SKIP

A Skip With a Grouch

3. THE SCOLDING SKIP — He feels that he has a personal grievance against each individual player on his side. He points out the location of the tee to his lead. He gives him the ice, or what he says is the ice, and all he asks is that the lead shall put up a stone that will curl in and touch the two foot circle preferably a little in front of it, or, if the lead wants a little latitude, squarely in front of it, but touching the four foot circle. He explains what he wants in plain English. He points out the tee. He indicates with his broom the exact ice—yet the lead does not do it, although he has the whole sheet of ice open and free in front of him. Instead of doing what he is told, what does the lead do? He goes wide, or he goes narrow, or he guards or he runs to the hack. This kind of skip instantly perceives that his lead is an idiot The opposing lead sends down stones quite as far from the tee. Then the skip implores his second man to observe where the tee is and to note how much ice to take, and not to be heavy, and not to be short. Just as the second man is about to let the stone leave his hand he is admonished to "be up, for a change." He goes through the hack. "I didn't ask for a running shot," he is informed. The scolding skip is quite sure that all the spectators, and high heaven are witnesses of the troubles he is under in trying to handle his incompetent help. In watching these skips in various clubs, I have noticed that they seldom appear twice in the matches with any of the same players with them.

4. THE BLAND SKIP—He is, as a rule, one who suffers from and knows the folly of scolding. But he has not learned the value of silence, of secrecy among the players on a rink as to whether a shot is what is wanted or what was not wanted. The bland skip generously praises every shot as if it has made his fortune. The man who played the stone knows that he fell down—nobody is deceived but the skip.

5. THE CONTORTIONIST — His body twists and squirms as his stone curls. His right leg rises up and twists around his left. He runs out into the middle of the platform and you could shoot him in the body with a gun and he would not feel it. For him the universe means nothing but the curl of his stone. He drops on all fours, twists a leg in the air, and you fear that he will freeze his nose on the ice.

A Gracious Old Law

We have been led to believe at times that the laws passed many years ago were harsh affairs in which stern justice was mixed with nothing more diluting than a form of revenge. Folk point back to the days when people were hanged by the neck until they were dead because they had committed some petty wrong such as stealing a sheep or a jacket or a section of cheese. We are moved to doubt if all such laws were of that variety.

For example: In Sydney, N. S., there was a house which stood on property belonging to the Admiralty, and therein lived a man. Upon his death the city desired to have the property for a civic improvement scheme, and in due course the house came to be the property of the city, but the folk living therein refused to abandon the place.

So it was that modern methods and rather uncouth customs were brought into play to cause the people to leave their domicile. The chief of police, two officers and two carpenters went to the building and from it they removed doors and windows, thereby exposing the occupants to all the varying whims of nature which might be visited upon them by the weather in its changing moods.

Then it was that one of the laws from the age which we regard as harsh was brought to the front. It may have been necessary to remove dust therefrom for the enactment had been passed during the reign of Richard II of England, and it was 456 years old. From it we quote this delightful wording.

> "The King defendeth that none from henceforth make any entry into lands and tenements, but in case where entry is given by law; and in such a case, not with a strong hand, nor with multitude of people, but only in peaceable and easy manner."

Under that law the officials of Sydney, N. S., who had gone forth to remove doors and windows in order to force evacuation of the disputed house were fined $1 and costs or one day in jail. That is why we are inclined to change our opinion regarding the severity of all laws of other years and bygone generations. The idea of one who is being dispossessed of home or property being dealt with in "peaceable and easy manner" comes as a sweet symphony to a fevered mind or as a cool breeze at the end of a parched day. Those who reached back and brought that law of 456 years ago into the dealings of today should be encouraged to continue with their work of search and investigation. If they could find more of them which would cause a multitude of people to be held in check when a man is in trouble, and if they could cause more peaceable and easy manners to become active in our present methods then indeed we might look forward to disaster with a certain degree of complacence.

There Is Much To Be Done

A movement to which the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce has lent its full support and approval is the organization and development of the Kawartha Lakes District Tourist Association. Counties represented at the organization meeting in Lindsay were Victoria, Haliburton, Peterborough, Hastings, Northumberland and Durham. That is a wide range of territory for one association to cover, but the growing feeling is that by advancing the cause of the entire district the several centres in it will all receive major benefit. The Examiner believes that principle is sound as can be.

The Lindsay Post does not accept such a view. It says Lindsay should look after its own district and bend all its efforts toward getting people to come to that particular section. We believe the other way is better. If more people can be induced to come to the Kawartha Lakes district then it follows that more people will go to Lindsay and its district. It would not hurt the feelings of Peterborough in the least if it were found that Lindsay were doing well out of its tourist traffic. This is a great district and the greatness of the district is more to the point than the greatness of any particular place in it.

The district idea having been adopted, the immediate business in hand is to see that the district has within it the things which tourists seek. We cannot improve on what Nature has already done for the Kawartha region, but it is possible to work toward the certainty of maintaining and increasing the supply of our bass and lunge. With the development of more water power through the Trent Valley system, there is the added danger that water levels may be considered secondary to fishing interests, particularly during the spawning season. Right there is work for the new association. It should be insisted—and that word is not too strong — that spawning beds be protected, because it is a patent fact that if we have fish we have tourists. The tourists catch the fish, and it is equally true that the fish catch the tourists.

The dream of a newer and larger and better located game preserve should not be allowed to fade. Wild life will increase if protected, and tourists will go far from the beaten path of travel to see it. They are doing so elsewhere and they would do the same in the Kawartha district.

We had an example of that in our own city. A fawn of only a few days in age was brought to the city, and in all hundreds of people went to have a look at it. Tourists from larger centres of population would go well toward what we might call the back country to see such animals in their native state. They would welcome the opportunity to see beaver country. With proper conservation all that is possible. Yes, there is much for this new association to do. Gordon K. Fraser of Burleigh Falls is the right man for president, and he has a representative executive with him. This paper is pleased that the larger field of working for the entire district was the one selected for operation. It will be a good thing for us all to think and act in the broader field.

The Guns Are Still With Us

The year 1937 is young, but the guns in the hands of those who have no right to have them are appearing just as they have done in other years. The year had hardly begun when a masked man entered a North Bay office and took $80 in cash from a coal merchant. Charles E. Coleman. The thief fired a shot, but it only grazed the merchant's hand. From Windsor on January 1 came the report that Lewis Hanson had been shot in both arms when a stranger was admitted to his house.

On January 3 Fred Crezech, 37, driver for a bread firm in Toronto, got out of his wagon when two men asked him to give them directions to a certain street. He found himself confronted by hold-up men. The driver was shot in the arm and $70, the property of the company, was taken from him as well as $59 of his own money. On the same date E. M. Regimbal of Sudbury responded to an appeal to drive a dying woman to the hospital. The man who made the appeal got in the seat with Regimbal and after they had started shoved a gun in his ribs and told him there was no dying woman. The owner of the car was forced to drive some distance, was then robbed of $17 and the bandit drove off with the car.

On January 7 there was a report from Woodstock telling where police had gone and searched a car after complaint was made that it was so parked that a resident could not drive his car from his yard. Police found in the car a sawed-off .22 calibre rifle to which a home-made pistol butt had been attached.

On January 11 a drug store clerk was held up at Windsor and at the point of a gun $25 was taken from the cash register. One man was arrested but the other escaped. On the following day Toronto reported the arrest of a man in a restaurant, and when he was searched he was in possession of an automatic revolver.

So there are seven weapon cases in our own province and there may have been more of them. And the new year is just about two weeks old. The individual who is carrying an unauthorized weapon concealed on his person is contemplating crime. He will shoot just as quickly as he has to, and he does not know whether his shot will result in a wound or a death. We have a law which provides a heavy penalty for the carrying of such weapons, but that appears to be about as far as we have gone in the matter.

Must Have Our Eyes Open

Word from Ottawa indicates pressure is being brought from several quarters to cause the government to make efforts to bring more people to Canada. The attitude of governments in recent times has been that until such time as there was work for the people already in Canada it would be folly to bring in more. It was their belief that the farmers in Canada were producing all they could possibly sell and prices were not attractive. The argument now is that the wheat surplus has been dissipated through selling, and therefore there is room for the production of more grain.

Canada has been losing a number of her skilled mechanics. Within recent months the trend has been toward England where work has been found in munitions factories. One vessel which sailed carried 600 mechanics. While that has been going on it is a fact that we have been training very few young men in these lines, and the reason has been lack of demand for their services.

In due time more people will come to this country. It is large enough to house many times our present population, but actually we want to know from whence the new people are going to come. There are so many nations in Europe today who seem to be saturated with strange belief of how the world should be run that we must of necessity hesitate to let them in. It is too much to suppose they would leave all their strange ideas behind them and on arrival here be prepared to adopt our ideas and fall in with our system of democratic government.

All right for people to cry about more immigration, particularly if they stand to profit by it, but this country is not going to commit the blunder of ushering people in here only to find afterward that it has another job on its hands watching to see what they intend doing.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Examiner has been daily expecting to receive a letter or two complaining because the benches have not yet been placed in the city parks.

We hope the outside world knows that here in Ontario we have been calling off skiing contests and toboggan parties because there is no snow.

A motorist whose car killed four persons at Kingston, Jamaica, has been arrested on a charge of murder. In that British colony they evidently believe in calling things by their right names.

A French doctor says that to jump out of bed as soon as the alarm clock goes off is to impair one's health. Besides we imagine it must be a very uncomfortable habit.

According to one manufacturer blonde maple is becoming very popular as a material for furniture and this is one instance where not only gentlemen but ladies as well prefer blondes.

Gasoline is selling at eight gallons for a dollar in Jersey City and at that rate it would be almost cheaper to drive the car than stay at home and burn the electric lights.

In regard to the loss of the income tax it looks as if all that remained for Toronto citizens to do is to follow Kipling's advice to "pass the hat for their credit's sake and pay, pay, pay."

German importers have purchased 135,000 pounds of Quebec eels which would seem to indicate that the food shortage in Germany is even worse than was pictured.

There are hints from Ottawa that Canadians need not expect any tax reductions in the next budget. As there is no chance of an election for several years we were not looking for them anyway.

Carleton County grand jury has recommended that a barber chair and equipment be placed in the county jail, for the convenience we suppose of those prisoners not already trimmed by their lawyers.

Hagar township has been ordered by the Department of Municipal Affairs to hold another nomination to secure candidates and it remains to be seen whether the original failure to hold an election was merely a bluff or not.

According to Tom Moore, Canada needs 75,000 new medium-priced houses. If we could launch out on the building of even one-third of these this year the construction business and all the industries allied to it would be heading the prosperity parade.

The Ontario government does not propose to sponsor a bill to abolish the speed limit, leaving it to a private member to introduce the measure. What really matters however is whether or not the administration proposes to support the legislation.

A North Carolina youth has been charged with attempting to steal a railway train. We imagine that is the reaction caused by the fact that the lad's father always used to monopolize the toy trains that arrived on the Christmas tree.

A Toronto suspect was stopped half way through his meal at a restaurant and arrested at the point of a gun. Not knowing anything about the quality of the meals served in the place we do not know whether the man got a break or not.

Vancouver's mace is insured for $4,000 and the mayoral chain of office at $2,000. Things are different in Belleville where they can insure the city hall and all its appurtenances for about what it costs Vancouver to protect its mace and chain.

MUCH BETTER

(By A. R. K.)

¶ I read today a splendid thought, and it has pleased me quite a lot, I think it's in good taste; some wise old man has up and said, that folk in getting out of bed, should never be in haste.

¶ When I lived on Concession Ten, along with other little men, we lived that jumpy way; when to my trundle bed I went, I knew exactly that it meant, I'd rise at break of day.

¶ Grandfather started the parade, he rose in darkness unafraid, I'd hear him in the hall; when he went down to start the range, he stomped about like pups with mange, and then he'd start to call.

¶ And then my brother called some more, the hired man tapped upon the door, and so would Aunt Lucille; and I was sleepy when I woke, I fumbled like some drunken bloke, unsteady on the keel.

¶ They wanted water from the pump, and so I had to hop and jump, I never liked the thing; but when they called at break of day, I had to jump from out the hay, in fact I had to spring.

¶ I've gone like that for many years, until I've well nigh stripped my gears, it's brought no joy to me; I read now one should slowly rise, and stretch a while and rub his eyes—that's like it ought to be.

Some More Advice For Newspapers

(From the Timmins Advance)

IT HAPPENED last year! Just before the year closed the Advance received a letter from Toronto signed, "A Group of Active Christians," and suggesting that all newspapers were in a bad way and unless something was done about it, there would be regrettable results. No doubt other newspapers received the same letter, because it was undoubtedly a form letter and given more or less wide mailing.

It is interesting to speculate on the reception that would be given to the letter in newspaper offices in general. It must be admitted with some regret that in most offices it would receive only a cursory examination—and no pun is intended, though it may seem to be there. So many letters are received by the ordinary newspaper giving instructions as to the proper contents of a newspaper, that hardened newspapermen find little time to read or heed such letters.

In addition to this it is seldom that this type of letter is free from the suspicion of self-interest. Frequently, the writer who objects o too much sport, or crime news, or war news, appearing in the newspaper, raises the question of his own lack of disinterestedness by his insistence that the space should be devoted to this or that cause in which he has a pecuniary interest. The average newspaper editor is anxious to carefully peruse every letter that arrives — hoping thus to keep in touch with his readers and the public—but there are so many rackets of one kind or another, so many bids for free publicity, so many apparent axe-grinders looking for free motive power that the form letter seldom can expect much notice, even though it be headed like the one in question, "Of Vital Importance."

WHY THE CHANGE?

(Financial Post)

WHEN THE present Ontario Securities Commissioner took office it was thought that a new day had dawned for the promotional end of mining. Mr. Godfrey, during his first year or so of office, showed himself to be aggressive and thoroughly ruthless in dealing with the "boiler-shop" type of security salesman. As a result of an aggressive campaign, and aided by a smooth-working and efficient staff the Commissioner "put many pistols" to so many heads that the unscrupulous promoters left the province literally in dozens.

At one time, it is safe to say, no city in the world was freer from the undesirable type of promoter than was Toronto. The Financial Post gave due credit to Mr. Godfrey and his staff for this work.

Today, what is the picture?

In a recent issue The Post gave examples of the high-pressure selling being conducted from Toronto. Since the guilty parties were operating under a license, and were not, technically, evading the law. The Post could not legally give names. The fact that the mining boom has continued, has made the public still avid for quick profits, and an easy prey for the stock salesman.

The Post has no hesitation in saying that conditions in downtown Toronto and in other Ontario cities today are as bad, if not worse, than three years ago. They are certainly worse in so far as the public has been led to believe that its interests are being zealously guarded from Queen's Park. What has caused the changed attitude at Queen's Park?

How can one say that their interests are being guarded when today men with an international reputation as crooks, some with prison records, are being allowed under other names to peddle worthless mining stocks on a profit-hungry public?

GOOD NEIGHBORS.

(Niagara Falls Review)

THAT old-fashioned friendliness and neighborliness still exist was demonstrated the other night when the kindly people of Falls View assembled to give a shower and to provide the nucleus of a new home for a family which had lost everything in a fire. The Review was glad to be able to record that $120 in cash was gathered in, together with many useful gifts, which with other promises of furniture will enable the family again to make a start when the new home is completed.

It is a pleasure to record such a thing in this so-called "hard-boiled" age. The Review congratulates the folk at Falls View on their kindliness and also Mr. and Mrs. Waters who must be pretty good stuff too to be able to inspire such real evidences of neighborliness.

ADDING DIGNITY.

(Chatham News)

MAYOR Colby has introduced an inovation which adds more dignity to city council meetings. The Mayor makes an impressive entrance, being the last to enter the council chamber prior to the meeting; and the aldermen rise and stand at attention before their desks until the First Magistrate is seated.

To some people this may savor somewhat of "putting on the dog," to use a common expression, but as a matter of fact a certain amount of ceremony adds dignity and seriousness to the task of conducting the city's business; and all will be agreed that there is need for the utmost seriousness in the deliberations of that august body. This form of respect for the presiding officer, may assist the aldermen to respect the responsibilities they have undertaken to discharge in their official capacity, as the people's representatives.

No Need To Dread Old Age

(A Glimpse Into Habits of Other Days.)

Editor Examiner.

Sir: Your column "I can remember" naturally recalls pioneer days. I am only 75 years of age and therefore not as well qualified as many others to recount these experiences but I can remember when there was a spinning wheel, a reel, a hand loom, a boot jack, candle moulds, candle snuffers what nots, and horse hair sofas in most houses of the better class. We boys wore flannel shirts, full cloth pants, copper-toed boots, fur caps, and woolen mufflers, mitts and socks, all home made. We played shinny, lacrosse, cricket, and baseball minus the curves, nor did we bother with bathing suits in the old Nottawasaga River.

Women's head dress included hair nets and waterfalls. They wore wasp waist corsets, bustles, and crinolines as large as a barrel. Their dress left them without any visible means of support and their bathing suits were as long as the wearer.

We did our own courting in cutters and covered buggies, and when the girl was willing to drive, things were going swell. The various social gatherings were also used including pareing bees where more than apples were pared. I can remember when there were no electric lights, motors, telephones, phonographs, bicycles, autos, motor boats, aeroplanes, movies or talkies. No radio, ice cream or chocolates nor patent breakfast foods, no appendix (removals), no women in the barber shops, no permanent waves or vanity cases, no typewriters, fountain pens or safety razors, no divorces or relief problems.

What did you have some one will as? We had good wholesome food. We took our own wheat to the mill and had it ground while we waited and so had our own flour, bran and shorts. We had warm clothing made from the wool off our own sheep, carded, spun and woven at the local woolen mill, made up at home and sometimes spun and woven there.

We got our weather from Ayres almanac—a great advantage as we had it months ahead—and a yearly quota of jokes from the same source, and they were better than the canned variety that we get over the radio. Credulous folk you say, but are the people today different? We read of crowds in Toronto paying $25 each to get a fakir's prophecy, and the Examiner carries a "The Stars Say" column for the accomodation of the credulous people of Peterborough, then there is the election forecaster and the muskrat and pigs "innards" weather prophet and their followers.

We had much neighborhood fellowship and co-operative work which gave to even the most laborious tasks a social aspect. We celebrated Xmas, 24th May, 12th of July, the annual church picnic, and the fall fair. We worked twelve to sixteen hours a day, never heard of Saturday half holiday and were both healthy and happy. We had a weekly newspaper and at the various "bees" had hot arguments over the respective merits of Sir John Macdonald and Edward Blake. I remember when a small boy asking my mother if any Grits would go to heaven and wondered why I got an evasive answer. That long ago evasive answer eventually changed me from being a narrow partisan to an independent in politics.

YOUNG PEOPLE of today may think we endured many hardships, but we were just as happy as today and young folks please remember that it was the people with all these handicaps that have furnished you with the superior social, religious, educational and medical facilities of today and also furnished you with the many mechanical and electrical appliances you now enjoy, and that raises the question. Will you do as well or better for the next generation? That is the challenge you must answer, and if you get busy in the matter you will think that we were not such slow coaches after all.

I don't quite agree with the venerable sage who said three score and ten was the limit of life. He did not live in an age of vitamins, calories and medical science, that in spite of motor accidents, has increased the span of life to those who will observe its laws.

If we have followed the moral, the hygenic and economic laws of life the upper side of 70 is the sunny side. There we enjoy the fruits and rewards of life. It becomes a paid-up policy yielding daily dividends.

There is no need to fear or dread age. I enjoy life more at 75 than I did at 25 because my world has grown larger. I want to live as long as body and mind are normal, but I would not go back if I could, for I believe "the best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first was made" and this world—if we use it aright—is just the kindergarten for a better one.

I would say to young people if you want to have a continuous, enlarging enjoyment of life—not mere amusement—keep the laws of health—they are divine. Except on rare occasions go to bed one day and get up the next. It will be better for you, for your employer, your success in life and a rewarding enjoyment of its closing days.

Yours truly,
PIONEER.

DID HER BEST

Editor Examiner.

Sir: I must say that I take exception to Ald. Jas. Dutton's statement: "That the parents were given instructions about giving their child certain exercises" and his impression was that these instructions were not carried out as faithfully as they might have been.

I would like Mr. Dutton to state clearly just what proof he has for that statement. I have also been told that Mr. Dutton did make the statement at the council meeting, that he was informed of this statement which is false.

Now I am Marjory Chase's mother and I have spent countless hours rubbing her chest and back also getting her to hang from a pole just above her reach from the floor, Those were the doctor's specific instructions and they were certainly carried out. Also I interviewed the child's school teacher about getting her to undergo exercises at school in order to help straighten her back as much as possible.

Our food voucher was only to the famous sum of sixty-nine cents per person a week taking into consideration of course that we get some milk extra.

Therefore as it stands Mr. James Dutton should explain through the press just how any crippled child could gain strength enough to overcome any such a disability under this food allowance.

Thanking you, Mr. Edivor, for your valuable space. I am

Your very truly,
MRS. J. F. CHASE.

APPROVES

Editor Examiner.

Sir: I have followed with interest the report of the first meeting of our city council. I must congratulate them on their fine start. So far as the new man is concerned, I think in Alderman Gordon the city has the right man, in the right place. I feel so far as remuneration for the aldermen is concerned, if the question had been put to the electors it would have been granted, but this pay was taken autocratically.

HANGING TOO GOOD.

(Montreal Star)

A SPASM of horror has swept over the Continent at the discovery of the bruised, dead body of ten-year old Charles Mattson.

Kidnapping, followed by brutal murder, is the cruellest crime of which the human beast is capable. A young life is snuffed out. A mother is tortured for weeks. A father's heart is broken. Every mother and father in the world who hears of the tragic abomination is wracked with dread.

American Federal police have bring to punishment the great majority of such savages. It will be hoped that they will succeed, and succeed swiftly, in this case. Then it will be hoped that the machinery of justice will do its stern duty. Opponents of capital punishment might tell us what they think should be done with this inhuman brute if he is captured and convicted.

WITHOUT A CAUCUS.

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

WHILE there will thus be little general criticism of the decision, which marks a step in the right direction, a real question is raised over the method of arriving at this decision. According to Mr. Harold J. Kirby, M. L. A. for the Eglinton division of Toronto, who is chief Liberal Whip, the supporters of the Ontario Government in general were neither consulted as to the wisdom of this step nor informed as to the Government's decision. It was reached without any reference to the members of the Legislature and announced with no warning to any outside of the Cabinet.

It is an old and well-established practice of Canadian parliamentary procedure that important measures proposed by the government in office should first be laid before and discussed by its supporters in a party caucus. It is a sound practice, enabling all the elected representatives of that party to voice their views, to register any objections they may have as the representatives of their constituencies and by their discussion of the measure to feel that they are taking some part and responsibility in the shaping of such legislation. Here we have an important change in the handling of income tax and the payment of social services presented cut-and-dried to the public without any such submission to the rank and file of Liberals in the Ontario Legislature.

WASTED ASSETS.

(Sarnia Observer)

MIGRATORY Birds have an actual business value to Canada of $3,800,000 a year and insectivorous birds have an annual value to Canadian production of $110,000,000.

These figures were given at a conference at Ottawa this week, called by Hon. T. A. Crerar, minister of mines and resources, to discuss conservation of wild life.

Heretofore the people of this country have shown poor business judgment with regard to wild life. They exterminated the passenger pigeon and had almost ended the buffalo, when the government intervened and established national herds. The fur trade was once the dominant industry in Canada and could have been maintained by proper regulation and it would have kept many Canadians off relief in recent years. It seems to have been nobody's business how many fur-bearing animals, big game or wild fowl were slaughtered. People did not realise that these were valuable assets and that they should have had official protection in order that they might continue to contribute to prosperity and pleasure.

HOME ACCIDENTS.

(Galt Reporter)

ACCIDENTS, fatal and otherwise, that happen in the home, are not given the publicity that attends mishaps on the highways or in public places and so certain hazards are more or less neglected despite their capacity to produce suffering and bereavement.

Recent statistics reveal that in 1936 in the United States, 34,500 people died and 150,000 were disabled by accidents that happened in the home. Quite likely as many more were hurt of whom there was no record kept. Presumably the ratio of accidents to population would be about the same in Canada as in the United States so that we would have perhaps 3,000 deaths and 10,000 disablements in a year.

Mark St. Juveniles Defeat Knox Handily

Mark Street Juveniles took an 8-1 win over Knox at All Saints' rink last night in a one-sided Church League puck game. The East City team proved too fast in their opening tussle and too husky for their younger rivals. Scoring four in the first few minutes, Mark Street coasted the rest of the way. Knox went better the final two frames, with Smythe getting their only goal in the middle inning. Craig, Strickland, Graham and Mason were outstanding for Mark Street, the goals being split up among six players. The teams:

Mark Street—Goal, F. Agnew; defence, Mason and Strickland; centre, Nicholls; wings, Craig and Graham; alternates: Barringer, Gamble and N. Agnew.

Knox: Goal, Watson; defence, Scott and Milburn; centre, Stewart; wings, Smythe and Alcock; alternates: Gardiner, Saunders, Doughty.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 14. — Improved foreign demand for wheat and a let-up in pit selling which has depressed the market of late imparted strength to the futures prices on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday. Net gains of ¼ to ½ cent were boarded.

With export sales of nearly 500,000 bushels taking care of offerings, values pushed ahead from the start. A pre-closing flurry of profit-taking pared the day's extreme gains.

Helpful to higher prices was the sale of five cargoes of wheat to Italy by Argentina, for shipments in March, April and May. Gains of 1¼d at Liverpool, one cent at Chicago, and fractions at Buenos Aires also were conducive to Winnipeg's rise.

Trading throughout was more active with the volume heavier than for several days. All offerings, some of which were said to be from the Canadian Wheat Board, were absorbed with little difficulty until the sell-off in the late dealings.

Inactivity prevailed in cash grains. An advance of more than a cent in oats and nearly three cents in May barley, to new season's high levels in both commodities, highlighted the action in coarse grains.

PLANE HOSTESSES ARE HARD TO KEEP

Meet Romance Often In The Air And Step Off To The Altar

TORONTO, Jan. 14 (CP)—An airline ticket to romantic places too often gets the passenger to the romance before he lands.

Phyllis Alldredge, air hostess, and Doc Ator, winged taxi driver, arrived here today and said the transport company personnel managers are such good pickers the girls they hire as stewardesses are getting married faster than they can be replaced.

The problem is rather a worry to airline managers. They considered an idea to substitute efficient young men for the hostesses but discarded it as hopeless.

Those efficient, pretty girls picked for air hostess jobs seem to acquire an irresistable glamour up among the clouds. They sooth the nerves of wealthy passengers and one day when the ship lands they get off and march to the altar.

The high-flying sisters never fail in love with the pilots. The pilots haven't enough money.

She fined him $3.50, the customary amount.

Bewdley Takes Win Over Hiawatha Team

Bewdley pulled out a 2-1 win over Hiawatha in a Rice Lake Loop fixture at Bewdley January 12th, it being one of the best games seen there in years. Play was fast all through with good hockey shown, all goals being scored in the first period. Allan Anderson scored the losers' only goal, this team being shy on subs, and with Bill Muskrat playing with a cracked rib. Frank Farr and L. Jewison scored for Bewdley. Competition for the Hancock Trophy is keen in this district, and another good game is expected when the Landing and Elizabethville squads clash on January 26th at Hiawatha. Referee was Chief George Paudash.

WILL PRESS FIGHT ON FOREST PESTS

Ravages Of Insects Main Topic At Two-Day Engineers' Convention

OTTAWA, Jan. 14—(CP) — The Canadian Society of Forestry Engineers, its annual meeting concluded, has given approval to several recommendations, among them extension of available services to combat fungus pests and insects which cause millions of dollars damage to the country's forests.

Ravages of insects was one of the main topics of the two-day convention which concluded yesterday with re-election of F.W. A. Delaney of the Canadian International Paper Company, Maniwaki, Que., as president.

The Entomological committee presented a report recommending organization against insect devastation of forest areas "on as thorough and extensive a base as protection against fire."

The report estimated millions of dollars damage had been caused by outbreaks of the European spruce saw-fly in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and the spruce budworm in British Columbia. Parasites which feed on the saw-fly have been imported from Europe and it was stated enough of them had been loosed at least to prevent the menace from getting beyond control.

Laboratory Fine Step.

The parasite laboratory of Belleville, Ont., opened last June, was hailed as a "long step in the right direction in our fight for the control of insect outbreaks and one which will become increasingly valuable as our knowledge of forest insects and their parasites increases."

D. A. Macdonald of Ottawa urged more extensive use of newspaper bulletins in educating the public against forest fires. A change in Fire Prevention Week from October 11 to a date "more representative of the forest fire season" was suggested by W. H. Kilby of Winnipeg.

The British Columbia plan, carried out during the last two years, of employing young men in forestry operations under provincial auspices was given approval.

Importance of aerial photography in forestry work was emphasized, and it was recommended that present aerial photographic surveys be continued and extended.

Canucks Get 3-1 Win In Junior City Loop

No 8 Sport—Canucks get 3-1 win.

Canucks opened their Junior City Hockey League schedule before a fair crowd of fans last night at the Brock Street rink by beating All Saints 3 to 1. It was a lively game on slow ice, combination being uncertain but plenty of action shown. McDougall scored for All Saints in the initial inning on a nice pass from Williams. The Canucks rammed home three tallies in the third period, Fleming, Gilbert and Connolly finding the net back of Jay. The teams appeared well-matched and showed promise of some fine hockey in the near future. Plenty of penalties were drawn. Both first lines were outstanding, while the goalies looked good also. The teams:

All Saints.—Goal, Jay; defence, Watson, Jamieson; centre, McDougall; wings, Williams, Mortimer; alternates, Legon, Clarke, Robertson, Quirt, Kennedy.

REAL ESTATE TAXES MUST BE HALVED

the shortage left Canada with building requirements of $247,500,000 in houses alone.

Mr. Moore said also of 59,000 families on relief in cities having populations of more than 25,000, nine per cent live in one room and 11 per cent in two, regardless of the sizes of the families.

He based his estimate of the housing shortage on the premise there are about 2,000,000 houses in the country with average life of 50 years, so that each year about 30,000 houses should be replaced. During the last five years, he declared, not more than half that number had been built annually at an average cost of $3,300.

"The need, both for greater use of the Dominion Housing Act and extension of financial aid to provide low-rental houses, is an immediate requirement," he declared.

Mr. Moore said the commission had reached the conclusion it must look to a revised unemployment service in its low-range view of the employment problem to obtain the best results.

Plan Working Out.

He declared public response to the Home Improvement Plan had been "exceedingly encouraging" and noted that in the first month of its operation 2,500 loans were approved for a total of $1,000,000. He saw no difficulty in eventually finding use for the $50,000,000 available to the public under the loan scheme.

The commissioner said in the last 10 years practically no houses of a type which would rent for sums within reach of the worker earning comparatively low wages had been built, "with the result that overcrowding in unsuitable quarters has become prevalent in practically all cities," constituting "both a menace to health and safety."

Belgium has exempted from the luxury tax all furniture made from Belgian Congo timber.

Two Years' Operations In Belmont Gold Area Bolstering Old Hopes

Marmora's Faith In Old Property Along Hastings Boundary Revived By Smelters' Sustained Investment—Company Silent On Findings—Many New Claims Staked In Marmora And Lake Townships — Spirit Of Expectancy Grows Among Marmora Men

$289,301 IN GOLD MINED BY OLD COMPANY

Smelters Sink No. 3 Shaft To 1,000 Feet—Drifting At New And Old Levels—Discovered In 1891 By H. Strickland—Sketch Of Cordova's Chequered History

(By a Staff Reporter.)

MARMORA, Jan. 14. — Persistent hope is settling into a deepening conviction here that Consolidated Smelters have "a real mine" at Cordova in Belmont Township.

And any day the news may break, it is believed, definitely confirming the expectations of local men who have followed the fortunes of mining enterprises along the Peterborough-Hastings border for many years.

Community opinion is still restricted to conjecture by the policy of official silence which hangs about the old Cordova property like an impenetrable wall but the intimations which leak out and the inferences from Smelters' efficient activities over a period of more than two years have all been increasingly encouraging.

Men who have refused to abandon confidence, often shaken by adversity, are anxiously awaiting like thwarted prophets the announcement which they now believe more firmly than ever, will come out of Cordova. And if that day dawns, Marmora feels certain that it will enter upon a new era of prosperity like the flourishing years of the lumbering industry along the Moira River. The townspeople generally have caught the spirit of expectancy which is looking forward to 1937 to turn the tide of business too long running low, and to attract the attention of financial interests to other mines and promising prospects throughout the townships north of the straight line extending from Havelock to Tweed.

Would Quicken Interest.

The Cordova development is at present the main hope of the countryside, although it is not the only one. If Smelters prove beyond question the value of that area, "all the rest will be added unto it," which broadly means that a new livelihood would rapidly extend throughout North Hastings. Old mines would take on new vigor, and claims that have been staked in Marmora and Lake Townships, for instance, would immediately move up into prominence which at present is being gradually accomplished by their own seeming merits as indicated by assays.

Meanwhile the townsfolk have to wait and see what happens over in Belmont; but if Smelters realized the anxious desire of the village for definite news possibly they might relax their attitude of exclusiveness and take the people into their confidence.

On the other hand, no news is still good news while the winter wears on to spring and its concentrated expansion of prospecting in the Marmora territory. By that time some definite information may transpire from the Cordova operation to hearten the district and give a new impetus to mining investment and work in the field.

Ask some of the men around town who are interested in the mineral resources of Hastings County what they know about the operations at Cordova and their reply is, "Not a great deal. You can't get anything definite about what quality of ore Smelters are finding over there," and then as an ardent after thought they say, "But look at the evidence," and they are likely to go into the whole story as they know it from outside the fence supplemented with recollections of those days of substance when bricks of gold used to be hauled down from Cordova to Carscallen's private bank.

The Smelters Chapter.

"When Smelters took an option on the Cordova property two years ago last May, Marmora was dumbfounded. Its last expansion was during the war, and after the long neglect and idleness we thought the mine was never going to be revived.

Well, Smelters had an option of three months, and they went to work as if they meant business. It was just what you would expect of a big company. They pumped out the old workings, did some diamond drilling, the first we ever heard of in that mine, did a lot of repairing, and then they got a thirty-day extension of the option. It expired in October, and Smelters walked out. The general report was to the effect that they were not interested in the Belmont Township property. Our hopes in Marmora dropped back to the very bottom again, and the impression went around that Cordova had nothing of sufficient value in its veins to hold Smelters.

Report of Purchase.

The next electrifying report came out in the following February when it was learned that Smelters had bought the entire property of nearly 700 acres. Work was started again, and has been going on continuously twenty-four hours a day in three shifts. During that time there has been no definite information. We have to depend on reports of what is going on that trickle out. The first thing they did in an extensive way was on old No. 3 shaft on the east side. It is the first one you see going in from Marmora. They cleaned it up and retimbered the shaft, and deepened it from the 500 foot level to 1,000 feet. They are now reported to be drifting at both the 600 and 1,000 feet levels, and have piled up an immense ore dump already.

Here is just a minor sign of the company's attitude. At Christmas they gave a bonus of $50 and a turkey to every married man who has been with them at least a year and the single men got $25. They have about sixty men on the payroll. One of the first things they did was to build their own power line to tap the Hydro at Marmora.

Sound Mining Methods.

These are evidences that Smelters have got something worth while. It would be hard to believe that they have been in there more than two years without determining in a general way whether the ore is valuable. Some of the veins are thirty feet wide, and remember that gold is worth twice as much as in the old days when Cordova was actually producing.

And they are going about the development in the right way, spending their money underground instead of scattering it about in all kinds of unnecessary accommodation on the surface as was done by a former management."

So much for the indirect evidence on which Marmora is pinning a new faith that gold will be mined again at Cordova. The company's purchase of the property, the continuous employment of three shifts of men for two years, and other indications of permanence seem to the townspeople to point in one definite direction, Cordova returning again to the list of gold producers under the sound management of Consolidated Smelters.

Discovered in 1891.

Gold was first discovered at Cordova by H. Strickland of Peterborough in 1891. He noticed the free shining metal after heavy rains had washed the surface soil from a roadbed crossing an outcrop of rock. The property of 100 acres was bought by A. W. Carscallen, M.P., of Marmora, who installed two grinding mills or pulverizers, and, it is said, recovered considerable gold. He rigged up a little test mill in the Pearce sawmill at Marmora and used to haul the ore to that place.

Mr. Carscallen carried on work at the mine all one winter, and then sold the property to English investors. Their company was known as the Cordova Exploration Company of Newcastle-on-Tyne.

D. G. Kerr was sent out to manage the Belmont mine. He was a Scotsman with considerable experience in gold mining at Cordova, Spain, and from that connection the name Cordova was passed on to the Belmont area. Kerr put up a five-stamp mill and increased it to ten. It was operated by steam. The surrounding bush provided cordwood for fuel. Seventeen or eighteen shafts, most of them shallow, were sunk, a dubious practice dubbed "gophering" by mining men.

Expanded Too Soon.

George Hardy was the assayer at the mine in those early days. About seventy-five men were employed, and the old mill stood on the site of the present compressor building. Expert opinion suggests that M Kerr had continued his early operations on that scale the mine would have continued in production for a long time, expansion would have been gradual, and development would have been based on revenue and profits. It is said that Kerr ascertained there was a large body of comparatively low grade ore available, averaging around $5.00 a ton. The price of gold was $20.00. The manager conceived the idea that to produce big profits he needed a big mill to handle the ore in large quantities. He got the consent of the shareholders in England to build a thirty-stamp mill, and according to a local man who remembers that expansion this decision turned out to be Mr. Kerr's Waterloo, and the first serious mistake in the development of the property.

Old records indicate that during three years of the operation of the ten-stamp mill the company expended $75,000 on plant improvements, and took out 15,267 tons of ore yielding 4,803 ounces of gold having a value of $96,519.

New Mill in February, 1901.

The new mill was completed in February, 1901, and is said to have been one of the largest in Canada at that time. Physical expansion of the company's entire property was carried out on the same generous scale. The mill was 175 feet by 90 feet and 68 feet high. It included ore bins, leaching vats, a cyanide plant; an engine and boiler house attached to the mill and 80 feet by 40 feet, and included in its equipment a 150 horse-power steam engine. The old mill engine was used to drive the dynamos whose current provided electric lighting for the mine, buildings and homes.

A large tank house 112 feet by 30 feet by 20 feet was located behind the mill, connected with it by an aerial passage, and having a capacity of 75,000 gallons. The air compressor building was 140 feet by 60 feet. Other buildings were an assay office and laboratory, a big machine shop, carpenter shop, manager's office, also houses built for the manager and staff and workmen.

Complete Village.

An adjoining townsite was laid out with streets and lots. The company erected stores, post office, doctor's office, school, church, community hall, and dwellings, and at that time thirty-five years ago Cordova presented all the appearance and life of an incorporated and self-contained village.

The new mill with its thirty stamps for pulverizing the ore was, of course, the vital centre of the mine and its community. But Mr. Kerr's plans did not rest there. Three miles to the north was Deer Lake with a water power that invited development. The company bought this power site, erected two concrete dams, one 80 feet long, 12 feet high, 13 feet thick at the base, and 6 feet at the top, the other dam had a timber slide 20 feet wide for the use of lumbermen, and a sluice gate admitting water to the flume pipe seven feet square.

Mr. Kerr's plan was to build an air compressor at the dam as an economy, and transport the air three miles to the mine through a ten-inch iron pipe. An element of economy was eliminating the purchase of 10,000 cords of wood annually required for the steam power at the mine. Incidentally this old power site at the lake was recently acquired by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission.

Sought Low Costs.

The general outline of Mr. Kerr's plan for the mine comprised ample stamp capacity in his mill with cheap power, to provide low cost of production in the milling of the low grade ore. It has been pointed out that all this expenditure of money was on the property above ground, overhead investment without any commensurate supply of ore to keep the big mill operating economically.

"Kerr was in hot water as soon as he got it going, and his immediate problem was to bring up enough more to supply the thirty-stamp mill," The Examiner was told.

More money was needed, and the company sent out James Lamb to investigate the condition of the mine plant. Apparently Mr. Kerr had exceeded his instructions, and he was removed as manager. Mr. Lamb was left in charge. Operations were for a time intermittent, and finally the work was stopped, and occasionally the shafts were dewatered.

In three years the big mill turned out 10,943 ounces of gold valued at $202,782, and the total production for six years amounted to $289,301. A rather old report said that the capital outlay on Mr. Kerr's developments was $56,000, excluding the Deer Lake dam, but a Marmora man recently expressed the belief that the dam and compressor at the lake might have cost close to $200,000.

In contrast with the Kerr policy, it was pointed out, the present system at Cordova has been content to make minor alterations to the buildings, and to concentrate expenditure on the extension of shafts and other underground work. And for that reason it is agreed that Cordova will be given a thorough survey and testing by Smelters.

An Intermediate Chapter.

About the time of the Cobalt silver excitement, the Canadian Goldfield's Mine at Deloro was shut down. Its manager, Peter Kirkgaard, was among the first prospectors who sought a change of fortune in New Ontario. He was accompanied by some of the miners from the Marmora and Deloro section. Failing to locate any paying rock he went on to Timmins, and with his son acquired the Little Dome Mine. He encountered financial troubles and sold part of his interest to Dr. McKechnie and William Hughes, hardware merchant, of Marmora. They finally disposed of Little Dome property and with Judge Wills of Belleville, a former lawyer of Marmora, bought the Cordova mine and its 600 acres. The change of ownership occurred about 1910. They began operations in Belmont, but differences of opinion widened into a breach ending in a lawsuit, and finally Kirkgaard bought the shares of the three other men.

Unused "War Baby."

During an early phase of the Great War the old Ledyard iron mine in Belmont Township, south of Cordova, was re-opened by the Buffalo Union Forge Company. Kirkgaard had begun operations in his own mine taking out the conveniently handled ore. He agreed to supply the Ledyard mine with air from his compressor, but apparently there wasn't sufficient pressure for both properties. Kirkgaard then got in touch with a man named Woods of Buffalo, and they decided to erect a plant for the manufacture of high carbon steel required by the British Government. More than $100,000 was spent on buildings and equipment, but the plant never turned a wheel. Peace was declared just as the installation of machinery was completed, and the factory was ready for operations.

Idleness closed down upon Cordova once more. The company tried to find a buyer of the property, and occasionally there were rumors of various deals which in turn fell through.

And then came Smelters!

Stonewall Jackson's Gun Misses Fire

Charlestown, W. Va., Jan. 14.

A THIEF escaped uninjured yesterday, because "Stonewall" Jackson's once trusty pistol wouldn't fire and his sabre was too short.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bird Cook, owners of the historic weapons, returned from a late social function to find a thief leaving their house through an open window.

Cook seized the Confederate General's pistol and sabre and gave chase. He spied the fugitive atop a wall, but the gun missed fire and the prowler leaped to safety as Cook cut a wide swath with the sabre.

LAKEFIELD

MANY ALARMS BUT TOTAL LOSS SMALL FIRE CHIEF SHOWS

Annual Report Reveals 53 Calls Last Year—Equipment Is Improved

TRAINING GETS RESULTS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 14.—While the annual report of Fire Chief Allan H. Clark presented to the Lakefield council on Monday night showed the largest number of alarms in the history of the Department, Chief Clark was able to point out that the total fire loss had been comparatively small.

The report revealed a total of 53 calls, 46 by telephone and the balance general. Altogether 4300 feet of water hose and 450 feet of chemical hose was laid. The estimated fire loss for the year was $315.

Chief Clark reported that during the year a number of improvements had been made in the equipment of the department, a heating-system had been installed in the hose tower, and a first aid kit, 100 feet of fire hose and two new hand water pumps had been purchased.

"The training system for members of the brigade which was inaugurated a few years ago," says the report "has been carried out monthly and the results have proven themselves in the work of the department. The brigade at their own expense sent two of their members to the Toronto fire department school held in May. These men attended the practice sessions as well as doing regular fire duty in that city. They are now acting as instructors during our training periods."

Fire Prevention

The fire chief stated that fire prevention activities had been carried on during the year and that he had made many inspections including the public and high schools, the Grove School, the House of Refuge and other places.

The report also called attention to the fact that at the annual convention of the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs, Chief Clark had been accorded the honor of being appointed a member of Board of Directors of association. "This honor," says fire chief "I appreciate personally but it is a mark of recognition to the village of Lakefield for the interest taken in maintaining and supporting the local fire department."

The report recommended that the chairman of the property committee should be authorized to purchase 300 feet of 2½ inch fire hose, salvage covers and two pairs of couplings.

Thanks were extended to members of the council, the clergy, press, school staffs, Police Chief Chittick and all citizens for assistance and co-operation extended the chief in carrying out his duties. Appreciation was also expressed to the members of the brigade for their loyalty and obedience to orders.

"ALL-BRAN KEEPS ME IN SHAPE EVERY DAY"

"When I had eaten a heavy breakfast, I would feel logy. After a couple of days of this, I would have to take a laxative.

"One morning I had a dish of ALL-BRAN. Believe me, it beats any laxative, as it keeps me in shape every day."—Wm. C. Billings (address on request).

Why put up with half-sick days, when a delicious cereal will make you feel so good? Because ALL-BRAN has "bulk" which absorbs moisture within the body. Then gently sponges out your system, wipes away the listlessness, the "blues," the headaches.

Scientific tests prove this natural food is both safe and effective—worlds better than taking patent medicines. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Take it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London.

PILES GO QUICK

With Dr. Leonhardt's Prescription.

Many sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have found out that quick relief can be had with an internal medicine.

Bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel is the cause of piles. The veins are congested and flabby, the bowel walls weak. That is why an internal medicine like HEM-ROID should be used. HEM-ROID stimulates the circulation, relieves the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, who spent several years of his professional life in finding the cause of piles and the medicine that would remove them. His medicine succeeds because it tends to correct the cause.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, if you want to try HEM-ROID, you have our promise to give you back your money if you do not find quick and satisfying relief, after using just one bottle.

OBITUARY

JAMES MILLAR.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 14. — The funeral of the late James Millar, who passed away at his home in Lakefield on Tuesday morning, January 12, was held on Thursday from the family residence on Clementi Street. Rev. Robert Boyle, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Lakefield, was in charge of the service. Interment was made in Lakefield Cemetery.

Mr. Millar, who was 70 years of age, passed away after an illness which lasted almost eight weeks. He has been a resident of Lakefield for over 15 years. Born on the farm in Smith, commonly known as the Millar Farm, from which Millar's Creek, a familiar landmark, received its name, Mr. Millar lived there until his marriage to Minnie Jory of Douro, when he moved to a farm of his own a short distance from the Millar homestead. There he engaged in the occupation of farming. When he retired from active life, he moved to Lakefield, where he bought a home on Clementi Street. He had lived in Lakefield continuously since then.

Mr. Millar leaves to mourn his loss, besides his sorrowing widow, one sister, Miss Agnes Millar of Peterborough, and one brother, Andrew Millar of Lakefield.

APSLEY

ILLEGAL FISHING FOR SALMON TROUT

Poaching At Loon Lake In Full Swing—Vandals Loot House

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, Jan. 14.—The annual depletion of salmon trout is in full swing on Loon Lake, and residents in the vicinity are not the only offenders. It is reported a party of "sportsmen" (save the mark) from Peterborough on Sunday procured a large haul. Blood all around the hole where men were seen fishing is evidence of a good kill.

Vandals At Work.

Vandals have been wrecking the fine house on the lake, Loon Lake Lumber Company's property on Loon Lake. All the interior fittings have been stolen, electric light fixtures, locks, door knobs, etc. Three doors have been taken away, windows broken and the interior of the house which was beautifully finished is exposed to the elements. The house was built only three years ago, and was much admired.

Salary is Raised.

In response to the representation made to the Burleigh and Anstruther Council at their meeting on Monday by the Red Cross deputation, the council decided to raise the salary of a M.O.H. from $90 to $150, a decision which earned the warm thanks of the president, Mrs. T. H. Lean.

Many books written to celebrate the Coronation are being hastily revised in Great Britain.

HAVELOCK, Jan. 14. — The Young People's League of the Havelock United Church opened their 1937 program with a pot-luck supper and social evening last Monday night. Some seventy persons were present, including the older boys' and girls' classes of Sunday school. The latter were specially invited in an effort to increase the membership.

The church orchestra was in attendance, playing several numbers and Mr. Max Warne led the community singing.

Four leaders elected at the last meeting, Miss Helen Buchanan, leader of the Christian Fellowship group; Miss Verna Buchanan, leader of the Literary group; Mr. R. M. Warne, leader of the Missionary group; and Maurice Williams, leader of the Missionary group, chose sides from among those present, dividing the league into four groups. Each group will take their turn at presenting a program. The remainder of the evening was spent playing group games.

January From Viewpoint Of Cook Is a Hard Month

Oysters Prove Most Tasty Dish At This Time Of Year

TIMELY FRUITS

By MARY MOORE
JANUARY SCENE

Through the eyes of a Cook: High priced imported fruits and vegetables and constant provision of nourishing and vitamin foods to counteract the tax on energy the cold weather demands and lack of direct sunshine.

Through the eyes of a Four-Year-Old: "Mamma you said there'd be snow-riding every day after Christmas and you haven't taken us once yet."

Through the eyes of an Invalid Mother: "It is so long between Christmas and Easter—no holidays and I won't see the girls (her absent daughters) for more than three months."

Through the eyes of a Doctor: (On being asked "Is there much sickness?") "Fractures and sprains from slippery streets and winter sports, and an intensive round of daily calls on pneumonia patients. This is the time of year when pneumonia takes its toll of old folks."

✧ ✧ ✧

Among our Christmas gifts was a barrel of oysters in the shell from a friend on the Coast. They were such a perfect gift for our household—this member enjoying them in every possible manner they could be served; "H.R.H." wanting them in soup or "bisque"; the children liking the "jooch" part of the soup only.

Little as you need to be told how to make "Oyster Bisque" I have to tell it again—but most of you will realize to what lucullan heights a meal can be lifted when oysters broiled in the half shell, as Emem did them, are possible.

Hold everything! you folks that are going to skip this because oysters in the shell cost too much. Oysters can be bought in the bulk and broiled either in little earthen shells (to be bought at large china or hardware stores) or flat baking dishes—preferably an enamel or pyrex pie plate.

If I keep mum about the questionable pleasure of taking 1½ hours to shuck three dozen oysters it is because nothing can dim my enthusiasm for them. Besides the Doctor said "Deep sea foods contain iodine and other priceless elements and must be served regularly especially in these cold months when native fresh fruits and vegetables are at a low ebb."

Oysters Broiled A la Emem

Shuck the oysters (there's one that's easier said than done!) as many as you can buy or beg—usually you have to be satisfied with six each, loosening the muscle from both the shells and leaving the oyster in the deepest shell. The sauce is the same for either bulk or shell oysters.

Mix together 1 tablespoon melted butter, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon finely chopped parsley, ¼ teaspoon salt, shake of pepper, shake of cayenne, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon catsup. If you have garlic on hand rub the bowl with the cut side of it before mixing sauce.

If the oysters are in the shell, pour a teaspoon of this mixture over each one and sprinkle top with ½ teaspoon fine cracker crumbs, and sprinkle top with paprika.

If oysters are out of the shell, arrange pieces of buttered toast on enamel or pyrex pie dish about the shape of the oyster, and put an oyster on each piece of toast, with just enough border of toast to catch the sauce as it drips off the oyster. Sprinkle with crumbs and paprika.

Put the oysters about 2 inches below a hot broiler burner and cook until edges of oysters curl—they require about 12 minutes. If oysters are baked instead of broiled use oven of 450 deg. Fahr.

Since much of the sauce is lost when oysters are out of shells pass extra sauce at table.

When oysters are broiled on pieces of toast this extends the flavor somewhat and if many people are to be served four oysters will often suffice.

✧ ✧ ✧

Although this is not an oyster article but supposed to do with January I must use a few more lines for

Oyster Bisque

One pint oysters, 4 cups whole milk; 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¾ teaspoon salt, ½ cup sifted cracker crumbs and in a muslin bag, 1 slice onion, bay leaf, tablespoon celery or leaves, sprig of parsley. Braise the oysters by melting the butter in top of double boiler and placing over direct heat and adding drained oysters and cooking gently until oysters curl at edges. Then add liquid drained from oysters and all remaining ingredients but the crumbs, and place over water over bottom of double boiler and heat through for about 20 minutes, then add crumbs and serve—removing bag containing flavorings.

✧ ✧ ✧

A Few Timely Tips About January Fruits and Vegetables

Often it has been my experience when serving a family dinner with a rather substantial dessert, that all of the usual things such as meat, potatoes, a vegetable and salad are just too much food.

To overcome this difficulty some one of these items has to be reduced in amount or not served at that particular meal.

If the supply of cooking vegetables is low and you still have salad ingredients such as lettuce and tomatoes on hand, serve lettuce and sliced tomatoes, or a shredded lettuce and tomato salad moistened with mayonnaise right on the dinner plate (in this case plates would be served in the kitchen) in place of a cooked vegetable such as carrots or spinach. Keep in mind that the ideal way to serve potatoes for health's sake is baked with the skins on—the skins being eaten too of course. For those who usually discard the skins try brushing it with butter about 5 minutes before removing from oven—this gives it a good appearance and softens the skin

✧ ✧ ✧

A can of shrimps can be had for 19 cents. To make a nice tasty supper for 4 people with this amount you can extend them by making pan fried potatoes—dice raw potatoes into ½-inch cubes, soak them in cold water 1 hour, then dry well. Fry in half butter and lard, turning only once so that they crispen nicely. When done, add the drained shrimps, stir about for 3 minutes to heat shrimps, and serve very hot. If you have canned pimientoes on hand they make an ideal garnish if cut in fine strips.

✧ ✧ ✧

Tangerines are to be had surprisingly cheap this month. They peel so easily they are a pleasure to prepare for a fruit salad. For a large dessert or main course luncheon salad prepare 2 tangerines by removing all membrane and seeds but leaving sections intact, and 1 cup seeded Emperor or Tokay grapes. To these add ½ cup Hallowi dates halved. Moisten with thin whipped cream slightly sweetened or a pineapple fruit dressing. Serve on cupped lettuce leaves topped with a cooked cranberry. The dates may be left out of the main part of the salad and stuffed with a nut and used as garnishment.

One pound of prunes at 10 to 12 cents per pound will serve a family of four or five twice—once stewed for breakfast and once in an open face pie for dessert. Do not strain prunes for an open face pie. Merely pit them, add the grated rind of a lemon and a little more sugar than you use for serving them stewed, and if the juice needs thickening add about 2 tablespoons minute tapioca 15 minutes before adding fruit to pie. Cover with latticed strips of pastry and bake in very hot oven.

QUESTION: I have followed your cookery page with interest for many months and now I am coming to you with my problem. I received an electric waffle iron as a Christmas gift and the only thing I know about the contraption is that it should never be greased. Would you kindly let me know how to care for it, also send me some recipes for batters to use and how long it should be heated before pouring the batter on it. I will be looking forward to an early reply as my family are eagerly awaiting waffles. Thanking you, Mrs. A. J. C.

ANSWER:

Care of New Waffle Iron

A new waffle iron should be "seasoned" before being used, and sometimes it is well to re-season an old one.

To do this heat the waffle iron for 5 minutes, then rub both top and bottom grids with unsalted fat—such as fresh pork fat, or beef suet, being sure it coats all indentations, then heat the waffle iron to baking temperature—(if your iron does not have a thermometer the time required to get iron hot enough for baking is usually 10 minutes)—and bake a waffle. Discard this waffle and your iron is ready for use.

A steel bristle brush is the proper piece of equipment for removing crumbs from the grids of the iron.

For most waffle irons 10 minutes is a good average time for preheating, with usually a minute or two of heating between waffles. Two minutes are usually required for baking each waffle—that is if you do not constantly fidget and peek to see if the waffle is finished.

If a waffle does stick be careful to remove every particle of crumb clinging to the iron with the steel bristle brush, or the disaster will only repeat itself when the next waffle is baked.

Waffles with Sweet Milk

Separate the yolk; from the whites of 2 eggs, and beat the yolks with 1¼ cups milk. Sift together 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Mix well and add 6 tablespoons melted butter or salad oil. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites last.

Waffles With Sour Milk

Two cups flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 3 eggs, 2 cups sour milk, 6 tablespoons butter or salad oil, 1 teaspoon soda. Separate the yolks from the whites and beat yolks until light. Then add 1 cup sour milk to them. Sift together the dry ingredients and add to the yolk mixture and beat. Add the remaining cup of sour milk, and beat again, then add the butter or oil and lastly fold in the egg whites which have been beaten until stiff. Bake. One heaping tablespoon of the mixture is usually enough to fill each quarter of the waffle iron. You will become experienced in filling the iron to the exact amount—never fill it too full.

To make Chocolate Waffles add 1 or 2 squares (according to your taste) of melted chocolate to either of the above recipes when you add the butter or oil.

Powdered sugar, or maple syrup and butter, or cinnamon honey (strained honey to which powdered cinnamon has been added) are all pleasant accompaniments for waffles.

There are many other varieties of waffles—the ones using fruit juices in place of milk making very tender waffles—pineapple juice instead of milk being a favorite.

Tested Favorite Recipe

By MARY MOORE.

CORN and Tomato Chowder is a grand "Filler" for those of you who have trouble finding enough food to satisfy your hungry families. It makes a good first course for a rather skimpy supper,—or a main course for a luncheon where dessert is provided too.

Corn and Tomato Chowder

One can corn, 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes, 1 onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour (or 2 if you prefer very thick chowder), 1 pint water, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper and paprika. Melt the butter, saute the onion finely chopped in it for 3 minutes, add the flour, stir, then the corn, and cook, stirring for 5 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and put over double boiler and cook for 30 minutes. Just before serving add ½teaspoon soda, and 1 cup very rich milk heated to boiling point. Cream may be added if you have it on hand. A little curry is liked by some soup addicts.

A LATE CHRISTMAS

Strike Holds Up Yuletide Mail To Fairbanks Three Weeks.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 14 (CP)—It was "Merry Christmas" today in this city—three weeks late.

The post office received 400 sacks of holiday mail delayed by the United States Seamen's and Longshoremen's strike. Long queues formed in front of distribution windows while clerks hurriedly sorted 35,000 pieces of mail.

COMMUNITY HEALTH

A Column Conducted by the Department of Public Health, Peterborough, in the interests of Peterborough Citizens.

"INFLUENZA."

From accounts of epidemics of influenza at present existing in England and the United States it seems the disease is milder than in 1918 but still severe enough to cause a high death-rate. There is no epidemic of influenza in Peterborough but it is possible and probable that the disease in other parts of the continent will spread to Canada and will attack this community. Much of the illness at present so common here is due to severe colds and La grippe and is not genuine influenza.

There is considerable tendency on the part of laymen and some doctors to call all severe colds influenza. As we knew the disease in 1918, it was characterized by sudden onset with chills, high fever and aching limbs and invariably progressed to involvement of the lungs by congestion or pneumonia. There was marked prostration and the death rate was high. La grippe is manifested by chills and fever with backache and pains in the limbs. There is usually no lung involvement except occasionally cough due to mild bronchitis. The common cold prevalent in the district is severe and complications of inflammation in the ears and mastoid bones are common.

Should influenza or the "flu" visit this community there are certain precautions which can be observed to prevent its spread. They are:

1. Avoid crowds.
2. Avoid fatigue, hunger and exposure to extremes of heat or cold. Wear warm, light clothing.
3. If you know anyone suffering with influenza or cold insist on their going to bed and calling in a doctor.

What to do if you contract Influenza:

1. Go to bed at once.
2. Call a doctor. Do not attempt self treatment. Often severe complications set in of which you know nothing and only a doctor is qualified to treat.
3. Before the doctor arrives keep warm by applying external heat and by taking hot drinks.
4. Stay in bed till you are better.
5. Remember that influenza is communicable and that if care is not taken to remain isolated you may spread it to others.

MAYOR'S DISCOVERY

Finds City Hall Has $40,000 Telephone System.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 14.—(CP)—After a year in office Mayor Harold H. Burton discovered his City Hall is equipped with a $40,000 inter-office telephone system.

Jack Jones, custodian, told the mayor he knew about it all along, but that the batteries always were running down, following the installation in 1916, and that no one had bothered trying to use the phones in years.

gret to learn of his critical illness at the home of his son, Walter, on King street. Mr. Miller, who was eighty-eight years old last February, is one of the senior and well-known residents of the city, where he has lived for over sixty years, coming here from England. For many years, he was the City's Relief Officer and he was prominent also in the early musical organizations of the city. Fifty-eight years ago, he was leader of the volunteer Fire Brigade Band, which was one of the leading bands of the Dominion of Canada and had an enviable record. It took first prize at a Central Exhibition here and then carried off the first prize and a diploma entitling the band to call itself the "Champion Amateur Band of the Dominion", at the Industrial Exhibition in Toronto in 1879, when it played against no less than eighteen of the principal bands of Ontario. Later, the band entered the professional field and took third place at Ingersoll with leading bands from all over Canada.

Ferde Mowry's
Band Is Praised.

Ferde Mowry's many friends in his home town will be interested in the following bit from "The Passing Show" column of a Toronto contemporary:

"A boost for Ferde Mowry's band comes this way from A. Fraser of the town. "In my estimation," he says, "they have the nicest band in Toronto to listen to and dance to. I'm quite sure they would draw a sell-out crowd if they were in one of the big hotels. I heard them at tht Brant Inn, and the place was jammed with the elite of Toronto, Hamilton, and Oakville. The boys themselves are perfect gentlemen—and always play your requests no matter how old. I like the idea of the band coming to the tables during the intermission—it gives a good chance to request your pieces. Another thing, why aren't they on the air anymore?"

Cafeteria
Supper at Clubrooms.

Members of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Peterborough, over forty in number, had a jolly time on Wednesday evening, at a cafeteria supper held in their George street clubrooms, followed by a brief business session presided over by Miss Trucie Pearson.

The supper, which was informal, with members helping themselves from various tables where food was displayed, prepared in a very capable manner by the club hostess, Mrs. A. R. Anderson, was under the capable direction of the general convenor, Miss Birdie Dawson, while the menu was chosen by Miss Sara Eastwood and Miss Lelia Burgess, and Miss Myra Baird, Program convenor for the club, had charge of the entertainment of the evening, with Miss Anne Deyell at the piano for community singing. Miss Dawson was assisted yesterday by Mrs. L. M. Lockington and Miss Violet Walsh, the silver for the large table was lent by the Misses Jean and Agnes Horafield, Miss Mina Edwards and Miss Elsie Bennett, and flowers and serviettes were provided by Miss Lois Stewart and Miss Jessie Martin.

The large hall where supper was served was bright with many lamps. Little individual tables were brightened by the spring-like color of green, and the large central table, with a cloth of white linen, had a silver basket filled with rose stocks, mauve iris and yellow daffodils, while silver candelabra at either end held lighted green tapers.

After "The King" was honored in the usual fashion, the toast to "Our Club" was proposed by Miss Cathleen McCarthy, who mentioned the first known women's clubs as having been organized in the sixth century before Christ. A trio of responses to this toast was made by Miss Marion Armstrong, speaking as a business girl; Miss Lois Stewart, as a nurse, and Miss Helen Throop, as a teacher.

A pretty corsage bouquet of pink roses was presented to the president, Miss Trucie Pearson, by Miss Jessie Martin, with Miss Helen Anderson, honorary president of the club, making a brief speech.

Miss Myra Baird then outlined a very enlivening and worth-while program prepared by her for the ensuing months: Mrs. Lyda Telford and Mrs. B. Austin were welcomed as new members, and a brief business session followed, when, among other items of business, the suggestion of Mrs. H. E. Dunford was accepted: that the club regard itself as a service organization in the cause of all business and professional women and girls of the city.

A hearty appreciation by the members of the excellent work done by Miss Birdie Dawson in preparation for the supper and Miss Myra Baird's equally excellent program, was accorded both.

Colorful Opening
Of Federal House Today.

Senator Iva Campbell Fallis of Peterborough wore an afternoon dress of blackberry lace at the Opening of Parliament today. The Senator counts herself among the 'working women' of Parliament and the Senate, along with Senator Cairine Wilson, who wore an afternoon dress of heavy black crepe marocain with delft blue vestee and trimming, and Mrs. George Black, Conservative member for the Yukon Territory, who was in an afternoon ensemble of bottle green with trimming of real old lace at the neckline and sleeves.

Veteran officials of Parliament declare that, on no occasion since Confederation, has there been such wholehearted effort to put the best foot forward, such interest for spectacular success, such an undercurrent of excitement and goodwill, as was manifested in this Opening. Last year, women attended the Opening clothed in black in memory of the late King George Fifth. This year, brilliantly-bedecked women clothed in jewels drove to the ceremonial opening of a session that is expected to close in time for many of them to travel to the Coronation. Gorgeous materials, gold and silver thread, rich brocades and heavy lustrous satins were the favorite fabrics in costumes reminiscent of graceful medieval gowns. Favored shades were those best offset by military uniforms or crimson velvet cloaks, with white popular, blue predominant, and soft pastel tints much to the fore.

Lady Tweedsmuir chose a gown of white and gold embroidered chiffon, with a long gold lame train lined with cream velvet falling from her shoulders. She emphasized a popular revival of an old English fashion by carrying a white feather fan and bag and wearing a jewelled tiara.

Her lady in waiting, Miss Beatrice Spencer-Smith, wore a gown of heavy satin patterned in gold, the voluminous skirt lengthening into a train.

Mrs. Herbert Bruce, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, was in silver cloth with a fan-shaped train, with a mink wrap and long pearl necklace. Mrs. T. A. Crerar, wife of the Minister of Mines and Natural Resources, was in white chiffon brocaded with silver thread, the low decolettage edged with a twist of green velvet that ended in the back in floating twin trains. Mrs. Ernest Lapointe, wife of the Minister of Justice, wore heavy black crepe, simply, made, with a smart accent in white velvet peonies. Mrs. C. A. Dunning, wife of the Minister of Finance, was gowned in silver-embroidered turquoise crepe, and Mrs. C. G. Power, wife of the Minister of Pensions and National Health, chose a Schiaparelli model in purple satin.

Society Of Knox Church

At a meeting of the Helen Roger Auxiliary of Knox United Church, held at the home of Mrs. Ross Williamson, Reid street, the installation of officers took place, with the Rev. S. G. McCormack officiating, after words of congratulation on last year's attainments. Annual reports were presented, during which Mrs. Ross Williamson, secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance, dealt with the success of systematic giving and requested the members to make a little greater sacrifice in the coming year, and by so doing, make the ten per cent. increase more easy in attainment.

A social half hour was enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

Officers for the year will be as follows: Mrs. A. McKenzie and Mrs. S. G. McCormack, honorary presidents; Mrs. Howard Clegg, president; Mrs. E. Mealey, first vice-president; Miss Ruth Waldie, second vice-president; Miss M. Morton, recording secretary; Mrs. E. Johnston, corresponding secretary; Miss A. Gerrard, treasurer; Mrs. F. Reed, Supply secretary; Mrs. R. Williamson, secretary Christian Stewardship and Finance; Mrs. H. Clegg, Strangers' secretary; Mrs. T. Taylor, Temperance secretary; Mrs. G. Hutchinson, Literature secretary; Mrs. A. Hutchison, Missionary Monthly secretary. Members of the Social committee are Mrs. R. M. Hanscom, Mrs. R. Goodfellow and Mrs. M. Starr. Telephone committee: Mrs. Gourlay, Mrs. A. Pitchford, Mrs. E. Johnston, Mrs. R. Knox. Mrs. H. Williamson will be the pianiste for the coming year.

All Saints' W. A. Meets

At the annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of All Saints' Church, held in the Guild room on Tuesday afternoon, the rector, the Rev. J. D. Paterson, gave an inspiring talk from a text in the 7th chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel.

A splendid report of the year's work was given by the secretary, Mrs. Francis Edgar, and a very satisfactory financial report was presented by the treasurer, Mrs. I. Boddison, showing progress in all departments and the meeting of all obligations.

The following officers were installed by the rector: Mrs. J. D. Paterson, honorary president; Mrs. T. H. Hooper and Mrs. S. A. Harris, honorary vice-presidents; Mrs. J. Edgar, president; Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, first vice-president; Mrs. F. H. Dawson, second vice-president; Mrs. F. Edgar, secretary; Mrs. S. Worsencroft, treasurer; Mrs. J. Smith, Dorcas secretary; Mrs. C. Hamilton and Mrs. C. Mills, assistants; Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, Literature secretary; Mrs. M. Metheral, Living Message secretary; Mrs. W. Gatfield, Extra-Cent-a-Day treasurer; Mrs. H. Jocelyn, Mrs. H. Jay and Mrs. J. H. Justin, Visiting committee; Mrs. W. Lundy, representative Local Council of Women; Mrs. Annie Williams, Social convenor; Mrs. H. E. Connolly, Junior superintendent; Mrs. J. Scott, organist; Mrs. C. Hamilton and Mrs. I. Boddison, Rector's nominees.

Meeting In Wesley Hall

St James' United Church Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society held the initial meeting of the New Year, on Wednesday afternoon in Wesley Hall, with a splendid attendance. The president, Mrs. F. B. Elliott was in charge of the opening devotional service and the business session, when reports of the year's work were ready by the various officers and secretaries of departments. These reports showed very successful results.

The Mite Box secretary, Mrs. Evans, asked for an assistant secretary, and Mrs. Godfrey was appointed. A change in plan of studying "Men and Women of Far Horizons" was made, and the study will be taken up at the regular monthly meeting.

Mrs. W. K. Sloane gave an introduction to this book of study prescribed by the Dominion Board, in an entertaining manner.

The two reports of greatest interest to the Auxiliary, as a whole, were those of recording secretary and the treasurer, the latter showing that the allocation (without 10 per cent. increase) had been reached.

An interesting and impressive feature of the program was the installation of officers at which the pastor, Rev. F. W. Craik officiated. The beautiful prayer hymn, "Our Blest Redeemer," was sung and prayer offered by the pastor, who later spoke of the value of their work to the women of the Auxiliary. To be a true missionary, he maintained that three stens were necessary—glow, grow and go—giving helpful comments on each step.

The devotional and study part of the program was arranged by the executive staff, with the theme, "Jesus, the Friend of Women and Children," running through it. "Standing at the Portal" was sung and the prayer from the Missionary Monthly was read by the president. The day's scripture lesson was divided into four parts bearing on the theme, read by Mrs. George Cuff; St. Mark 10:13-16; Mrs. Fife from St. Mark 3:31-35; Miss Deyell, Luke 7:36-50; Mrs. Drysdale reading from John 4:19-24. Mrs. Woodley read, "Jesus the Friend of Women and Children," from the devotional Leaflet." "Far Round the World," the beautiful song of children, was sweetly sung in solo by Mrs. H. F. Doig.

Earnest prayer was offered by Meadames Rose, Beavis, Ingham and Elliott, and the Benediction was pronounced by Mrs. W. H. Buckler.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Jan. 14.—The funeral of the late Myrtle Weir, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Weir of Omemee, who passed away on January 7, was held at her home, Woodlawn, Omemee. After a short service at the house for the immediate relatives, the funeral proceeded to Trinity United Church, Omemee, where the service was conducted by the minister, Rev. F. G. MacTavish, assisted by Rev. Clarence Ferguson, of Bethany, and Rev. Dewey Stinson of Oakwood. Two Vacations: TORONTO.—The fast-increasing custom of two vacations every year are going to make the human race healthier and longer-lived, Dr. Morris Fishbein said here. "Cancer and heart disease are becoming more prevalent only because we've been able to extend our average life span almost 20 years since the turn of the century," he said. "Our average life span is 60. We may get it up to 70, but it will never go any higher."

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, CANADA, THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1937

Storm Of Protest: BERLIN. — The new anti-Jewish version of St. John's Gospel, recently published by Bishop Weidemann of the Evangelical Church of Bremen, who describes Christ as "the first great opponent of the Jews," aroused new bitterness in church circles today. The Gospel, published in pamphlet form, added new fuel to Germany's long controversy over the nature of the vision of Christ.

$126,000 PAID IN CITY TAXES ON NEW PLAN

Period For Maximum Discount Will Close On Friday Night

NOT DUE UNTIL JULY

July taxes in January are something new under the city hall sun.

The prepayment plan had piled up $126,000 up to Wednesday night, Alderman Hamilton, chairman of the Finance Committee, informed the Examiner to-day, and to be added to that amount will be the collections for Thursday and Friday.

City Treasurer Shaver pointed out that the first two weeks' period, during which the maximum discount is allowed, ends when the office closes Friday.

Payments under the new plan which Alderman Sloan had advocated several years ranged from $10 up to $60,000.

In the past the first taxes were not due until July 9, but the discount provision invites payments of the entire 1937 taxes. The taxpayer gets the advantage of the discount rate, and the city with new money in its treasury at the beginning of the year does not have to draw on its credit at the bank.

AMATEUR WINNERS PASS ALONG AWARD

Generous Gesture Made By Ab. Vinette And His Orchestra

In a generous gesture which was much appreciated, the winners of the contest in connection with Amateur Night at St. Alphonsus Lyceum on Wednesday evening, passed along the award and the honor to younger contestants. Ab Vinette and his Rural Rascals, a seven-piece orchestra that brought down the house with their splendidly-rendered music, sidestepped the first place in the contest, which reverted to the junior who followed, A. Downer, in a fast clog dance.

Next in line came Theresa Crough tap dancer; Shirley Fitzsimmons, singing to her own guitar accompaniment; Audrey Fontaine, tapping to music expertly played by her violinist father, Angus Fontaine, and the DeCarlo Sisters, who sang and danced.

Honorable mention was accorded Joan Reid, for a well-rendered recitation.

The program of the evening was divided into three portions; the Amateur contest, a concert interlude, and a playlet. In the second section, Miss Marion Best, A.T.C.M., played the piano, Harold Coulson sang, and Ferdinand Strano played the violin, all being greeted with much enthusiasm by a large-sized audience, presided over by the Rev. P. J. Kelly, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, whose encouragement of the juniors taking part in these entertaining programs is bringing out a lot of real talent.

The playlet entitled "Champlain at Quebec", was of the Canadian historical type and was presented very pleasingly by girls of St. Mary's Convent, who made their own costumes for the performance.

Parts in the playlet were taken as follows: Theresa Nolan (Samuel de Champlain); Yolanda De Chantigny ((Madam Bouchette); Lorene McFadden (a priest); Bernadette Turcotte (a French woman); Dorothy Thomas (a French boy); Betty Condon (an English officer); Norma Lynch and Marjorie O'Donoghue (two English soldiers).

The Rambling REPORTERS

WHY THE ROBIN STAYS.

"Every year around this time I see in the newspapers that a stray robin has been seen," a reader of The Examiner said yesterday. These birds are not coming back, she went on to say, but are here all the time, for in fact they never left. They are male birds who lost their mates during the hatching season, and will not leave. One particular robin she watched a year ago. During the nesting season a cat climbed up the tree one night and killed the mother bird and the young, and that male bird never left for the south last winter.

The same lady also claimed that the seeing of stray ducks was not unusual, for these were ducks who had become badly scared during flight south, possibly by an airplane, and the flock had broken up.

DENTAL HEALTH CAMPAIGN IS BEING PLANNED

Quick Reducing Methods Are Dangerous, Dr. Thompson Advises

HARMFUL TO TEETH

"Those advertisements are dangerous," declared Dr. Harry S. Thompson, field secretary for the Canadian Dental Hygiene Council, denouncing quick-reducing methods offered the general public as he addressed a gathering which included representatives of a dozen Peterborough clubs and organizations in the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday evening. He said serious lifetime trouble with the teeth can result from such methods.

Dr. Thompson offered his address as a preliminary to a dental health campaign to be carried on through this city February 1 to 4. He sought the aid of those present in organizing the campaign.

Not long ago tooth decay was regarded as inevitable and endured with resignation, Dr. Thompson said. Now it is known that tooth decay is the result of pathological conditions of the body. Improper diet is the leading cause and irresponsible advertisers who would urge all persons, regardless of medical advice, to lose "30 pounds in 27 days" contribute seriously, he said. Such quick reduction methods generally result in a severe reduction of the mineral elements necessiary for healthy teeth, he declared.

Eliminate Tooth Decay

"To tell the story of preventative dentistry to every man, woman and child in the Dominio through an intensive educational program is our aim," Dr. Thompson said. He said that just as diphtheria has been practically eliminated, tooth decay can be eliminated. Tooth decay can be controlled largely through diet, he asserted.

"If a child or adult is healthy he can not have a decayed tooth. There must be a pathological process in the body somewhere."

He told of the discoveries of a British dentist who made an extensive survey. Ninety-seven per cent of all Anglo-Saxon's suffer tooth decay, the doctor found. He then discovered only 34 per cent of the Central European peoples suffer decay and, among some of the world's more primitive peoples, those suffering decay numbered only one per cent.

The explanation lies in the fact Anglo-Saxon's have been cooking their foods for the past 400 years and eliminating necessary mineral elements. Those who have adhered to food in more vital natural forms have escaped dental trouble.

The remedy for Anglo-Saxon's, he said, is to eat foods as nearly as possible in their natural states, to eat lots of vegetables raw and cooked, fruits raw and cooked, eggs, wholegrained breads and cereals and lots of dairy products.

A large committee was named to aid in preparations for the campaign in February. In the absence of Mayor Macdonald, Alderman James Dutton presided at the meeting last evening.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETS TUESDAY

Departure From Old Custom Of Assembling On Fourth Tuesday

The County Council will meet here next Tuesday afternoon for the opening of its January sessions. This is a departure from an old custom of assembling on the fourth Tuesday dating back farther than the clerk, Miss Jennie Baten, can remember, and in a comparative sense only, that isn't much. Not that there is anything deficient with Miss Batten's memory. In fact, it is a perfectly good memory, and sometimes reporters fancy that it might be all the better for an occasional lapse or tardiness in clicking. Miss Batten's youth doesn't even reach back to the classic period dominated by the late "Bob" Shaw of Harvey.

By a late legislative amendment the County Councils may now meet on the third Tuesday of January to organize its committees, elect a Warden and get started on the year's business. Four or five members have been mentioned as being in line for the transfer of the Gifford toga. They are Reeves George Mullen of Smith, E. N. McDonald of Dummer, Roy Brown of Burleigh-Anstruther, Frank Leahy of Douro, and James Milby of North Monaghan. Those who are seriously in the field have probably finished their canvassing by this time, if they are going to make any preliminary appeal for support.

Automobile sales in Mexico are at a record high.

Bibles circulated in the last year by the British and Foreign Bible Society numbered 1,036,966.

Some Of Port Hope Flood Victims

Forced to evacuate their Mill street home at Port Hope this morning as the raging waters of the Ganaraska continued to rise, Clarice Harwood and her brother John Harwood are still able to smile as they pause for a rest on a hope chest that is piled with other household effects awaiting removal. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Harwood, Sr., fled earlier to seek refuge with another son. Outside the house employees of W. F. Pennington, cartage contractor are seen loading their truck with the belongings of the Harwood family. —(Examiner Staff Photos)

AND NOW IT'S FISH WORMS

M. J. Clancy reported to The Examiner this morning that he had seen a nice mess of fish worms on the pavement on Hunter street. So far we have no word that the bass and lunge have started to spawn but with bait making this early appearance anything is likely to happen.

A FINE LECTURE

J. O. Herity of Belleville will give his well-known lecture on James Whitcomb Riley in the auditorium of Trinity United Church on Friday evening at 8 o'clock and an evening of fine entertainment may be expected. When Mr. Herity gave this lecture before the Peterborough Kiwanis Club the members were enthusiastic over it and many Kiwanians will take advantage of the opportunity to hear it again tomorrow night. M. H. Park will sing in place of G. D. Carlisle who is indisposed.

A BROKEN "ROMANCE."

Repercussions of the breaking up of a companionate marriage were silenced as far as the Police Court was concerned by the withdrawal of a woman's charge of disorderly conduct by the man was "given the air" and didn't like it. She has transferred her affections, and the police say she now regards her first "lover" as a nuisance. He objected to being displaced, and kicked up a disturbance at the house which he has until recently called home with his common-law wife and mother of two children, when he heard the welcome mat was out for his successor.

INDIAN FINED $10.

Irvin Smoke of Roseneath reserve was fined $10 and costs in county police court this morning for fishing through the ice at Rice Lake on December 16. The charge was laid by the County Fish and Game Overseer I. J. Lyons who called as a witness Reg. Windsor of Lindsay, another warden. Osborne Beaver had already pleaded guilty to the same charge, but sentence has been deferred two weeks by Magistrate Langley.

BURIED IN PETERBOROUGH.

The body of the late Rev. James G. C. Fraser, a well-known retired clergyman of Fenelon Falls, was buried in Little Lake Cemetery on Wednesday. A native of Aberdeen, Scotland, Mr. Fraser had resided in Fenelon Falls for 49 years, going there as pastor of the Baptist Church and continuing to reside there at the close of his ministry. In later years he was identified with the Presbyterian denomination. He was seventy-four years of age, and had suffered a long illness.

CHEMONG ICE FIRM.

Ice in Chemong Lake is eleven inches thick, Sanitary Inspector Stapleton told The Examiner today. He chopped a hole in it yesterday to get samples for testing by the local Health Department as a condition to early harvesting by a Chemong ice company who are beginning to be anxious about their stock for next summer's business.

ST. ALBAN'S GUILD

Officers of the Women's Guild of St. Alban's Mission, apointed at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. E. W. Cooper, with the Rev. T. S. Gault in the chair, are as follows: Mrs. E. W. Cooper, president; Mrs. W. Carter, vice president; Mrs. F. Legon, secretary - treasurer; Mrs. Thompson, Dorcas convenor; Mrs. W. Morley, Card convenor. A splendid financial statement was presented. Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the meeting.

SURFACE DRAINS EFFECTIVE

Peterborough's efficient network of surface drains carried off Wednesday night's rainfall of more than an inch with only one complaint reaching Ald. Sloan, chairman of the Board of Work. this morning. Water on Wescott street had flooded a cellar, but otherwise the streets were clear of water and to City Engineer Parsons it was just another routine day. Lansdowne street catch basins, covered by earth in last fall's paving operations, were reported clogged in some places, although the Department of Highways had been notified some time ago that they should be opened.

DAM AT THE LOCKS IS NEARLY AWASH BY HEAVY RAINS

Otonabee River Risen to Spring Freshet Levels—Flow Is Controlled

NO FEAR OF FLOODING

Water in the Otonabee River has been rising this week toward freshet levels and the dam at the Locks is nearly awash, but control of the flow by the Canal Department is so nearly automatic that no trouble is expected along the local reaches.

The river is free of ice from the city to Rice Lake, removing all obstructions to the water's movement. A farmer living near Bensfort reported to-day that the level of the river seemed about six inches below the top of the wharf on Wednesday, and this morning, after the night's rain, it was up around the snubbing posts.

The Canal Department's system of conservation and control of the Trent and Otonabee waters is understood to provide for immediate changes in regulation of the flow by removal or addition of stop logs in the dams according to conditions of volume. Emergencies are thereby promptly anticipated. Logs have been removed this week all along the Otonabee dams as the river's level has risen with the heavy precipitation of rain.

The Trent and Otonabee waters have been so tamed by the series of retention dams that they haven't made the front pages in the longest memory. All the local rampaging is left to the unfettered creek from Lily Lake, a free agent from the Smith countryside that usually works up a show of turbulence when Spring breaks up. It was putting on a second rate demonstration to-day but it has no confederate ice barriers to call out the city's bombers.

VEGETABLE MEN ARE ASKING PROBE INTO INDUSTRY

Markets Here Flooded As Result Of Tariff Cuts On Vegetables

C. F. KITNEY DIRECTOR

TORONTO, Jan. 14 (CP)—Appointment by the Dominion Government of a commission to investigate the vegetable industry and suggest steps to solve its problems was up for discussion today before the annual meeting of the Ontario Vegetable Growers Association.

The resolution urges necessity of the commission "in order that, from a comprehensive knowledge of the past and present positions of the industry, it may take steps to alleviate the distress." Discussing the situation yesterday, delegates declared reduced tariffs last year flooded the Canadian market with United States vegetables to such an extent domestic growers suffered seriously.

Even so, last year's unfavorable weather resulted in reduced importations because the United States crop was needed at home, but with possibility of normal production this year, the situation will be greatly aggravated, it is feared.

"Our early produce will have to compete with and quite probably undersell a greatly increased volume of cheap imported vegetables at a time where there will be no keen consumer demand," said Charles T. Williams, Ottawa, tariff committee chairman.

It is also probable the meeting will discuss today the necessity of provincial licensing laws for vegetable growers.

Howard Carrothers of Port Colborne was elected president yesterday. Vice-presidents chosen were George C. Reeves of Islington and Charles T. Williams of Ottawa. J. A. Carroll of Toronto was appointed secretary and Olive McArthur of Toronto, treasurer. George Rush of Toronto is field man, and J. R. Herrington of Richmond Hill, auditor. Following were elected to the executive: C. P. Maxwell, Leamington; C. F. Kitney, Peterborough; George Lewis, Sarnia; W. J. Davis, London; Joe Cyr, Cyrville; and Arthur Rowett, Humber Bay.

FAMOUS CHOIR TO GIVE CONCERT HERE

Mendelssohn Organization Under Dr. Fricker To Sing In St. Paul's Church

The announcement was made today that Peterborough is to be honored by one of the greatest musical events in the city's history by reason of the fact that the Men's Association of St. Paul's church has made arrangements for the appearance here on March 16 of the famous Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto under the direction of Dr. H. A. Fricker. It is scarcely necessary to state that this is big news from a musical standpoint. The celebrated choir whose achievements have made it celebrated all over the continent has never been heard in Peterborough before and its decision to give a concert here should be welcome news to the city's music-lovers who hitherto have had to make a pilgrimage to Toronto to hear the Fricker organization. The choir comprising 200 voices will come to Peterborough on a special train, returning to Toronto after the concert, special seating arrangements will be made in St. Paul's church for the accommodation of the singers.

TAVERN STABBING CASE GOES TO JURY

Judge Points Out If Death Not Intended Offence Could Be Manslaughter

OTTAWA, Jan. 14 (CP). — The fate of Michael Augustino, 46-year-old mill worker, charged with murder of his wife, Mary, in a tavern stabbing affray September 5, was placed in the hands of a jury today.

In his charge, Mr. Justice F. D. Hogg, presiding at the Supreme Court hearing, said if a person struck another and did not intend death to ensue, the offence could be manslaughter.

He added Augustino, in the witness stand, and in a statement made to police, said his wife's death was accidental and that "he did not mean to do it."

Crown Attorney Raoul Mercier, concluding his address, said: "No person had the right in this country to take the law into his own hands. In this country we do not believe in crimes of passion."

RIMOUSKI, Que., Jan. 14—(C.P.)—Seventy nuns and their 160 girl charges were homeless to-day after fire of unknown origin swept through the old Ursulines Convent in this town on the south shore of the lower St. Lawrence river last night.

Evacuation of the building was done without panic, said Father Louis Philippe Chevard, Chaplain of the convent, and none of the occupants suffered injury.

HOW CROSBY GAMBLES

Wins $800 on His Own Horse After Steering Friends Off

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14—(A.P.)—Crooner Bing Crosby was $800 richer to-day because he failed to take his own advice, and placed a $10 bet "on the nose" of his racehorse, Fight On.

Because they took Bing's advice and failed to back the horse, his film friends are sore.

Fight On came through at Santa Anita yesterday to win the Little Boy Blue race for two-year-olds and pay the season's record price of $160 for a $2 winning ticket.

"I didn't know he could run," Bing explained afterward. "The other horses looked a lot better. Honestly I didn't know he was that good."

POLICE BEATS NOT LIMITED CHIEF CLAIMS

Meharry Case Only Crime In Recent Years Not Been Solved

BELIEVED SETTLED?

"Apparently Alderman Stocker does not know what he is talking about," Police Chief Samuel Newhall declared Wednesday in a reply to the statement by Alderman Walter Stocker in Council this week that regular police beats are limited strictly by Charlotte and Brock streets.

"The beats extend far south of Charlotte and far north of Brock and are worked day and night," the Chief stated. "The men are visited at regular intervals by the sergeant who works the beats in opposite directions to which the men are travelling."

Commenting on the record of the Police Department here, he said no major crime in Peterborough in recent years is unsolved except one case and that has been settled to the satisfaction of the police. The Chief did not identify the one case to which he was referring but it seemed likely he had in mind the murder of Robert Meharry as it is the only major crime of late for which no solution has been made public. Robert Meharry was found beaten to death on the west boundary of the city early one morning in July, 1934.

Rebutting earlier criticism heard in Council suggesting that sergeants are not necessary on the Peterborough police force, Chief Newhall declared the sergeants work harder than any of the constables.

CHARGE EMPLOYERS HINDER WORKERS JOINING UNIONS

Trades And Labor Congress Asks Legislation To Safeguard Rights

TROUBLE IN MINES

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—(CP)—Ontario Government heads to-day considered a lengthy list of representations from the Trades and Labor Congress that included statements alleging certain employers were attempting to hinder workers in joining trades unions of their own choice. Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck to-day will confer with Northern Ontario miners' representatives on alleged attempts to break up miners' unions.

Acting Premier Harry Nixon, with six other Cabinet members, heard the delegation when it appeared at Queen's Park yesterday. P. M. Draper, Ottawa, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, and Ed. S. Walker, London, chairman of the Ontario executive, led the labor representatives before the Cabinet.

The delegation urged legislation to protect the worker if he desired joining a union. Mr. Draper declared there was a tendency by arbitrary employers to prevent workers taking such steps. A draft Bill he presented was entitled "An Act to Recognize in Law the Right of Employees to Organize for the Furtherance of Their Lawful Interest."

Employees of the Auxiliary Corporation of Canada, Toronto, it was charged, were attempting to wreck miners' unions in Northern Ontario. Efforts centered mainly in the Sudbury and Kirkland Lake areas, and Mr. Draper claimed there were "discriminatory and intimidatory practices used against workers who were even suspected of membership in the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers."

Suspect Spies, Spotters

In connection with the Auxiliary Corporation activities, the Labor head said:

"We are under the impression this company has a system of employing men to act as spies and spotters, and we are anxious to find out to what extent this is practiced."

W. A. Anderson, an official of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, maintained the corporation had caused "tremendous havoc" in miners' organizations in the north, 47 men being dismissed from their jobs in one week when suspected of belonging to this union. He charged homes of union secretaries in Kirkland Lake had been broken into. He believed union membership lists were sought in the break-ins.

"Since last August we have lost at least 150 members through intimidation," he continued. "I have proof spies sent by the Auxiliary Corporation were hired by the International Nickel Company. A man sent from Toronto reported to the union first. We would like to present these facts to Attorney-General Roebuck."

The Attorney-General agreed to hear the complaints to-day.

Under the act which Mr. Draper suggested and which he said would be placed before every Provincial Government in Canada, excepting Prince Edward Island, it would be unlawful for an employer to insert in any contract of employment, oral or written, any clause to restrain any employee from joining the union of his choice. Any employer who by intimidation, threat or loss of position or employment, or who by actual deprivation of employment would seek to coerce an employee to refrain from joining a union or to resign from one would be liable to a penalty.

The bill proposes a fine of $100 for each offense or 30 days in jail in the case of individual employers threatening union workers and a $1,000 fine in the case of a corporation with all officers responsible personally if the fine is not paid.

During the meeting Attorney-General Roebuck denied legislation to provide for the compulsory bonding of lawyers and notaries handling trust funds was contemplated.

"The Bar Association is charged with the duty of protecting the public against crooks in the profession," Mr. Roebuck told the delegation when it suggested the bonding idea. "The trouble with compulsory bonding is a practical one. If it is applied to lawyers, it should be applied to all who handle the trust funds."

Mr. Roebuck also told the delegation that there would be protection for mortgagors if it was decided to remove the Ontario Moratorium Act. At the same time, he said, the cabinet had not discussed withdrawing the Moratorium Act when it expires next June.

RUSH POINT SEES SIGNS OF SPRING

Ducks Swimming In Ponds, Caterpillars Are Lively As In Summer

(Examiner Correspondence.)

RUSH POINT, Jan. 14.—A pair of ducks swimming tranquilly in the roadside ponds on Saturday at Rush Point drew considerable attention from motorists as they passed by on their way to Havelock to do their Saturday shopping.

A number of neighbors complained about cellars flooding over the week-end.

The January thaw cleared every vestige of snow from the fields, and farmers are worrying about the effects of the continued bare condition of the fields on the Fall wheat.

Some local children triumphantly displayed a wooly bear caterpillar which they had found crawling on a sunny bank on Monday, January 11. In spite of the midwinter date the little fellow showed plenty of Springlike activity.

A number of residents have observed chipmunks and squirrels skipping over the bare woodsy ground, and someone has reported about several woodchucks being shot recently.

The dust was flying on the roads as cars passed through Rush Point on Monday morning.

A number of Rush Point lads have been enjoying bicycling on the dry country roads in the middle of winter. But this lack of snow does not suit many of the farmers, who depend on the horses and sleighs to get out their winter's wood. The mild winter which has saved fuel costs in town hasn't helped the farmer who is depending on teaming a few extra cords of wood to town to add to his income.

Mr. Murnie Barton returned from Young's wood camp on Friday, where he has been employed for some time.

Mr. Herb Bailey, who was formerly employed by Gordon Hedger of Rush Point, is now working for Dr. Stuart West of Campbellford.

The Rush Point voters expressed almost unanimous approval of the highway petition which was presented for their signatures at the polling booth at Rush Point on municipal election day. The highway will be a continuation from Havelock to Apsley and will be a boom to Rush Point.

Mr. Fred Bailey was busy trucking wood from Rush Point to Campbellford last week. Mr. Ronald Young of Campbellford has been busy trucking wood from his camp through Rush Point.

Although Sunday's wind and frosty night dried up much of the water there were still some dangerous water holes in the low places on Monday. Mr. Joe De Shane of Cordova unfortunately got stuck in one of these holes with a truck-load of wood and had to unload half of it on his way to Rush Point.

Rev. Mr. Kemp of Havelock had some engine trouble motoring through Rush Point on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Theodore McArthur of McGill Settlement returned a short time ago after visiting friends at Camden East.

Mr. William Hedger of Campbellford has been visiting Rush Point.

Miss Dorothy King of Campbellford attended the shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Anderson at Round Lake Settlement.

Mr. Walter Davis, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia was reported to be improving.

Mr. Bert Graham is at Rush Point cutting wood for Mr. Gordon Hedger.

MILD WAVE STIRS BULBS TO SPROUT

Garden Plots Show Growth In Various Parts Of Province

TORONTO, Jan. 14 (CP)—Under the persuasion of returning spring-like weather, flower sprouts began to push through the ground and early bulbs made their appearance in Southern Ontario gardens today.

In the past 24-hour period, maximum temperatures were between 30 and 38 degrees, and it appeared the mercury would go considerably higher, with continued bright and clear weather generally.

Residents of Guelph found more lively butterflies and surprised gardeners in the south of the province discovered early growth in back-yard plots.

Early bulbs sprouted from the earth in Brockville and the St. Lawrence River generally, ice-locked at this time of year, was open from shore to shore. International ferry vessels operated and pleasure parties made trips to nearby islands in row boats.

Temperatures were lower in Northern Ontario but weather was considered unusual for mid-January.

COLLECTOR'S REPORT

The inaugural meeting for 1937 of the municipal council of the Township of Smith was held on Monday, January 11, at 11 a.m.

All the members were on hand at the opening except Reeve Mullen who, through illness, was not present until the afternoon session. Deputy-reeve Armstrong presided during the mornings session.

After the members present had taken the oath of allegiance to His Majesty King George VI, and also the declaration of office, the members took their seats. Reeve Mullen had taken the declaration of office on December 28, and took the oath of allegiance before taking the chair for the afternoon session.

Before the business was commenced, in the absence of Reeve Mullen, Councillor Fowler congratulated the deputy-reeve and other councillors on their return to office by acclamation, and hoped, as in the past, the business of council would be harmoniously carried on and in the best interests of the township.

After the reading of the minutes, a long list of communications was read and ordered filed.

The clerk was asked to subscribe for seven copies of The Municipal World for use of the councillors, clerk and assessor.

The clerk arranged in December for the renewal of the fidelity bond covering the treasurer of Smith Township in the sum of $5,000 at a premium of $20, and gave the renewal receipt to Mr. McElderry, K.C., clerk of the peace.

Moved by F. Armstrong and seconded by H. Fowler, that the reeve and clerk be authorized to sign and submit to the Minister of Public Highways for Ontario the petition of the Corporation of the Township of Smith, showing that during 1936 there had been expended upon the township roads in Smith the sum of $7,179.26; and requesting the subsidy grant on this amount from the Department of Highways for Ontario as provided by the Ontario Highways Act and amendments thereto. A resolution was passed authorizing the treasurer for and on behalf of the corporate body of the Township of Smith to negotiate with, deposit with or transfer to the Royal Bank of Canada, all or any cheques and to endorse the same, and also to sign on behalf of the corporate body the usual receipts for cheques returned.

Moved by W. A. Roseborough and seconded by H. Dunford, that council purchase 250 yards of snow fence to be placed on Br. Lot 27 on the north side of 14th Concession line with sufficient posts to erect the same, charging the cost of the posts to the petitioners asking for the fence.

Because of his not having had a dog in 1936, Thomas Calvert was rebated his dog tax of 1936 amounting to $2.

By motion of Councillors Roseborough and Fowler, the Bell Telephone Company of Canada were given permission to replace decayed poles on their system in Smith Township during the spring of 1937, but subject to the approval of Road Superintendent T. H. Graham.

DOG IN MARMORA SINGS FOR COOKIES

Clever Canine However Is Bashful About Performing Before Company

MARMORA, Jan. 14 — On the street he's just an ordinary dog with no pedigree, part collie and part police dog, but in the home 'Chum,' eighteen months old canine owned by J. A. Rice, shows the results of good training in the juvenile human mannerisms displayed by him.

In return for the final morsel of the day, he will place his front paws over the back of a chair and adopt the prayer attitude, no further urging required than the simple command, "Say your prayers."

"Sing for a cookie" is another order he is accustomed to and if he's in the humor he will hum a few notes. Like a child he is bashful about doing this before company. With the writer in the home the other evening, the order seemed to fall upon deaf ears, but as soon as the visitor departed he broke forth in his usual strains. He seems to prefer the morning for his musical selections, possibly to do it "for a lark" rather than to copy a nightingale.

Household duties such as getting his master's slippers and waking members of the family when he deems it time for them to rise are voluntarily undertaken by 'Chum,' among other acts which rank him as an highly intelligent dog.

Plans were made for the reports for the annual congregational meeting, after which Mrs. J. C. Swain, president of the W.M.S. took the chair. The report of the treasurer showed that $71.00 had been sent to the Presbyterial treasurer last year.

Mrs. J. R. Trumpour gave an interesting and instructive talk on the second chapter of the Study Book, "Men and Women of Far Horizons. The next meeting will be in charge of Group III.

LAKEFIELD TEAMS PLAY TWO GAMES

Two Teams Visit Campbellford —One Results In Draw, Lakefield Wins Second

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 14. — Playing before the largest crowd that has been seen in Davidson's Arena since O.H.A. days, two Campbellford teams, Dunk's Juveniles and the Senior team, played against two picked teams from Lakefield. Slushy ice slowed down the boys and spoiled ay attempt at combination plays. The little fellows in the first game went at it with a do-or-die spirit; however, most of them died towards the last. For Campbellford, Jarvis, Kennedy and young Donald in goal stood out; while Lakefield's first line, Loyst, Garbutt and Ganner, were the best. After 70 minutes of play the boys were still deadlocked, with neither side having scored.

Lining up with Lakefield's Seniors against his former teammates, Bus. Whitton was by far the best man on the ice. His goal in the third period gave Lakefield the lead. Blewett's counter six minutes later sewed up the game for the visitors. The Mill team in the first stanza had a decided edge on the play when Reddick, after seven minutes, chalked up the first goal, banging in Ed Bush's rebound. A little later Chappell tied the score with a soft counter, the puck never leaving the ice. Starring for the home team were Lambert on defence, and Bush and Reddick on the forward line. Final score, 3-1 for Lakefield.

Lakefield.—Goal, S. Loyst; defence, Sabatino, Whitton; centre, Chittick; wings, Jewel, Bluette; subs., Charlton, Pierson, Lennox, Chappel, Morin, G. Charlton.

Campbellford.—Goal, Turner; defense, Oddie and Lambert; centre, Ed. Bush; wings, Reddick, Couch; subs, J. Free, Atkinson, J. Kesting, C. Bush.

Line-up for the Juveniles was:

Lakefield.—Goal, Morrison; defence, Stabler, Quigley; centre, F. Loyst; wings, Garbutt, Ganner; subs., Bullock, C. Burch, J. Burch, C. Johnson.

Campbellford.—Goal, S. Donald; defence, Buckton, F. Turner; centre, Jarvis; wings, Kelly, Free; subs, Kennedy, G. Bell, J. Donald, J. Farrell, J. Elliott, Glenn. Referee, P. J. Kelly.

DEANNA DURBIN IS ALREADY "STARRY"

Name Is Mentioned As One Of Possible Stars Of 1937

Deanna Durbin in whom Peterborough has a deep interest by virtue of the fact that her parents once resided here, is spoken of in the current issue of Liberty in an article entitled: "Who Will be the New Stars of 1937?"

The child whose father was at one time an employee of the C.G.E. plant here, is also pictured in the periodical referred to, the caption under the cut reading: "Thirteen and already starry."

A portion of the article in which reference to the child is made is quoted: "Deanna Durbin sponsored by Eddie Cantor has so amazed radio audiences by the clarity and range of her voice that they are predicting a grand opera career for her. Although she is still in school, she has a Hollywood contract and makes her debut in a picture called, 'Three Smart Girls.' She is a lovely looking child. She may or may not reach picture stardom in 1937, but she is so popular over the air there is no telling how far she will go."

This newest child protege claims Winnipeg as her birthplace. Her parents moved to that city after leaving Peterborough in May 1912.

YOUTH SPENDS $1,060 IN WEEK

15-Year-Old Boy Of Perth Goes To Town On Uncle's Money

ARRESTED IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—His confidence unshaken by the prospect of a theft charge involving $1,060, a natily attired 15-year-old Perth youth told detectives yesterday he had squandered $300 on clothes, $24 for flowers for his best girl, several $5 bills for candy, and ran up a hotel bill of almost $100.

Wiring for More.

Detective James Semple arrested the good-looking, husky youth yesterday in a downtown telegraph office, wiring his relatives in Perth for more money. The $1,060, representing his uncle's savings, was stolen on December 7. A week later the youth had spent every penny, he told detectives.

More than $300 went to a downtown store for clothes and hunting equipment. An unknown amount was taken from the irresponsible youth by card players and in a crap game. Several trips to Collingwood and a seven-day stay at a Toronto hotel there used up more of his uncle's saving. The uncle is a retired railwayman living in Perth.

$23 Hunting Breeches.

When arrested the youth was wearing a smartly tailored brown suit, overcoat and shoes. He was flat broke. With two chums the lad spent several days hunting with an expensive rifle he purchased in Toronto. Found in Collingwood was a pair of hunting breeches priced at $23 and a $10 coat. He also bought 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

With his attractive girl friend, he saw all the shows Toronto had to offer, went to all the dancing spots and liberally patronized restaurants. The police believe the youth was able to spend such large sums without being questioned, due to his appearance. While only 15 years, he could pass for 18.

Fashion Service

Smart women who insist upon having style in their kitchen clothes, will be delighted with this princess cotton challis print frock.

The becoming neck has a dainty white pique scalloped collar. The cuffs match the collar.

The dress or "cover-all" for it is one of those wrap-over affairs, may also be worn as an apron.

You'll find it so easy to slip into and adjust. The tricky belt fastened at the back, holds the dress snugly to the figure.

The pattern for this one-piece dress is so easy to follow. You've practically only side and shoulder seams to join.

The young housewife will probably like to make another of gay tyrolean print cotton.

Bright linen-like cottons, dimity, prints, percales, crinkly weaves, etc., are other fascinating ideas.

Style No. 3136 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48-inches bust. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material with ½ yard of 39-inch contrasting.

EVERY HONEST occupation to which a man sets his hand would raise him into a philosopher, if he mastered all the knowledge that belongs to his craft.
—James Anthony Froude.

Dear Friends:

To me, everything is interesting, whether I like doing it or not. I like to know the why and wherefor of things, why we do them, and if we are gaining anything by doing them at all.

One thing that used to irk me in the English, was the remark that, "if it was good enough for my parents and grandparents, it was good enough for me." How could it be good enough for me, when the world had progressed so much for the better since they were young? When we had so many things to work with, that they never knew.

One thing I do know is, that if you take no interest in what you do, the money interest, and the pleasure interest which should come back to you for all your labor, will skim right past you to someone else, and all you will get is the drabness of work.

Of course, there is such a thing as making a god out of what we do, such as being a too clean housekeeper, so that it develops into fussiness, and like Martha you will find that "Mary hath chosen the better part."

But when you develop interest in your work ,even in making a cake, you can see in your mind's eye the rolling fields of wheat from which the flour was made, the seed going into the ground, sprouting and coming up fed by the rain from heaven and warmed by the sun.

You can also picture the men who cut and threshed it, those who milled it, the elevator it was stored in, those who put it in bags, all down the line to the retailer you bought it from.

The fruit and peel likewise. The far countries where it was grown, the different people who handled it before you got it, the far journey it had to take, and then it will not seem like just fruit to you. You will see romance and different ways of living, different religions and music and food, and you will realize that there is more to making a cake than just combining flour and fruit.

It will come to you that all our lives are dependent on one another, that the people who grow these things need our money just as much as we need what they produce.. And they in turn, need what we make, as we need their money, and as you would dislike paying for inferior things, so must they resent it, if we do not do our best.

So you gradually become a philosopher, you get a better understanding of what they may be up against, and you feel more pride in what you do yourself. You see that if you expect the best, you must send it out, and you also find that by studying these things you bring the world to your door.

And all the time, life becomes more and more interesting, you have more things to talk about, work is like a game, and where you found the days dragging, they now go by on winged feet.

Many's the time I have travelled thousands of miles while I was preparing a meal, or writing a letter, or making a dress. (Oh yes, I can make a dress.) You seem to get a world within yourself, a broader view-point, a nicer understanding of all the mysterious beauty of the world.

You see how things have advanced how much we have to be thankful for, how easier in one way life has become, and how complex in another way. And so, as you do your daily work, become a philosopher and see how much more you will enjoy it. Let me hear how you get on.
—ROBERTA.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

(C.J.P.)

PLENTY OF basketball here this week-end. Tomorrow night sees three games at the P.C.I. gym and four tilts at the Y.W.C.A. Three Cobourg squads, junior and senior boys and senior gals, play our Collegians in interscholastic matches. And the Ladies' Cage Loop opens at the Y.W. with C.G.E. and Westclox Juniors tangling at 7.45, Westclox Seniors meeting Marconi at 8.15, George St. Juniors jousting with St. John's at 9.00, and "Y" Quakers finishing it up with C.G.E. Seniors at 9.45. Church League contests in the Y.M.C.A. Saturday e'en are: George St. Bantams vs. St. John's at six, and St. Andrew's Juveniles vs. Murray St. at seven. With maybe some "Y" tussles on that night, too. Whoops, hoops and oops!

* * * * * * *

THE SCHEDULED Senior City Hockey League fixtures for the Brock St. rink tonight (Thursday) are: Outboard Marines vs. Mayfairs at seven, Bewdley vs. Westclox at eight, and Millbrook vs. Lakefield at nine. In two previous nights' battling, fans saw a flock of action, but the pucksters were only getting warmed up and into shape—watch 'em from now on! The admish is only 15 cents or five for kids and you can come and go when you wish. It's fine puck entertainment for the price, no fooling.

* * * * * *

BIG GAME of the season is the O.H.A. intermediate "A" tangle tomorrow in the twilight here betwixt Trenton Fliers and the Petes. They clash at 8.30 in the Brock and will no doubt perform before a full house. The Aviators are highly-touted and supposed to be plenty tough, but they may be over-rated down around Belleville and Trenton. The Petes have been looking good lately in workouts and stand an even chance of deflating the Airmen—sending 'em into a tailspin. The dope is that there is a lot of class in these outfits, that they should be pretty well-matched all around, and that a swell battle is a sure thing when they meet on the ice. Don't pass it up, folks.

QUINTE COLUMNIST wrote the other day: "Up around the R.C.A.F. the boys are all agog over their hockey team and are backing them to the limit in O.H.A. For instance, when the Fliers open the season in Belleville Wednesday, the R.C.A.F. band and some 300 supporters are coming down to encourage their team . . . . The Fliers are a big husky team, who have mastered the art of a bruising, hard-hitting defensive system, but the Redmen feel they can counteract this with their excessive speed." And so on.

* * * * * * *

WITH RAIN beating a tattoo on the tin roof in Tweed last e'en, our junior Colts copped a 6-4 O.H.A. win over the Tweedsters in a return to form. With a classy band and a big district crowd collected to greet 'em, the locals stepped out on the soft ice and earned the verdict handily. A four-run splash (yeah, it was a splash, all right!) in the middle chukker put the game on wet ice for 'em. Tweed presented an improved team and played a scrappy game, fairly peppering our goalie in the last frame as they ganged up continuously. But the Colts were going pretty fair and hung onto a two-goal margin. It was a hard-checking tussle with several minor injuries and both Starr and Heal bear marks upstairs today.

* * * * * * *

NOT MUCH to describe about the tilt. Tweed scared the locals with two goals early but the Colts sewed it up in the first frame and then went ahead in the second and held it. They had to play defensive hockey in the hectic third heat. A fast, exciting and stiff-checking tussle. Our first line of Starr, Heal and Wright shone. Second line tried hard but didn't always click so well. Crowe was effective all through and fans will like his tireless, rugged style of play—but opponents won't care for those bruising bodychecks he hands out! Gee Clark went great during the middle period, but Dude Brady seemed lost on that wing position. Our defence was just so-so, but should improve. Harding was never better in goal. The team didn't look like world-beaters but they looked as if they were beginning to hit their stride.

* * * * * * *

TWO JUNIOR City Hockey League games were played on heavy ice last p.m. at the Brock St. rink. Canucks took a 3-1 victory over All Saints while St. Peter's slipped Monarchs a 3-0 dish of whitewash. A fairish sort of crowd, considering the weather, saw two lively melees between the youngsters. These teams will improve with a few more games and some more good junior O.H.A. material will be developed. Tigers dropped out, leaving the four squads to carry on. Schedule should be out shortly if nights can be arranged for these contests each week.

* * * * * *

ANNUAL SENIOR baseball meeting in Belleville the other day was something of a flopperino with a dash of lemon for flavoring. All last year's executive resigned, while the Stewart-Warner Co. big shots, who were expected to take over, are decidedly hesitant—and may not bother at all. A Belleville friend writes us that one of those odd umpires from Quinteville is mostly to blame, blabbing around that the radio corporation would take over if the other bunch dropped out. Seems he had the hammer out for the old gang. Now, Belleville is faced with the possibility of being without a senior team at all in '37, though we imagine someone will come to the rescue ere spring brings forth daffodils and daffy Jills! We hope so.

* * * * * * *

GRAB-BAG: Buster Whitton played for Belleville early this month in an O.H.A. fixture against Trenton . . . . Petes had a stiff two-hour drill at the Brock last night, including a shinny game . . . . Fliers beat Belleville last night by a 12-6 score . . . . NOTE: We have just been informed that those Senior City League games listed above for tonight have been called off to save the ice for tomorrow's O.H.A. tilt . . . . That Winter Sports Carnival here is billed for the last Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this month . . . . Trent Valley Loop schedule is in tonight . . . . Tweed has a minister of the gospel as hockey manager—a good scout, too . . . . Shorty Burgess made the Colts hustle last night as he used to himself when zooming the ice lanes not so many years back . . . . All managers of the Southend Loop are warned to have their player-lists in by Sat'day: games that a.m. at the Sacred Heart rink are: Canucks vs. Leaflets at 10, and St. Peter's vs. King Edward at 11 . . . . Warm weather and the cold shoulder is what local pucksters are getting from the weatherman these days.

Jack Doyle Quits Soft Movie Life To Return To His Beloved Ring Career

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 14. — Jack Doyle, singer, film actor and cabaret dancer, is "dead." Jack Doyle, curly-headed Irish boxer, made the announcement on his return to England from America.

The resurrected Jack Doyle spoke penitently of his former self.

He said: "It was myself who made the mistake. I have made several mistakes in my life. The biggest was when I went to Hollywood, a life of dissipation. Far too much temptation, luxury, late hours, and other things. One gets soft.

"I kept walking round the sets thinking it was no life for a fighter.

"I'm finished with film work and anything else but the ring. I'm going back to dear old Dan Sullivan, the man who got me out of the army years ago, and began to make a fighter of me.

"Dan has promised to wipe the slate clean and begin all over again with me.

"I'm to appear at Wembley Stadium on January 19. Len Harvey is matching me against Alf Robinson. But that is only provisional.

"I want most to sock Petersen. First I want to be British heavyweight champion, and my ambition is still to be world champion."

The old optimistic Jack Doyle was back once more in his stride.

"It's a father I am now — by adoption," he said. "My wife cabled me in the Normandie that she had adopted a baby girl, four months old, with fair hair and blue eyes.

"The quarrel between my wife (screen star Judith Allen) and me is all over now. It was the result of two people seeing too much of each other."

YAROSZ DECISIVELY DEFEATS KRIEGER

Victory Puts Him In Line To Meet Winner Of Risko-Steele Bout

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (AP).—Out of a merry-go-round muddle came the middleweight division's battle lines today, with a pair of ex-champions, Babe Risko and Teddy Yarosz, as the ranking challengers for Freddy Steele's crown.

Risko, who lost the title to the Tacoma slugger last year, already has been given the number one shot. Yarosz, come-backing after an operation which straightened out his trick knee, took rank just behind the Syracuse puncher last night by decisively whipping New York's Solly Krieger in a 10-rounder at the Hippodrome.

As plans were laid today, Risko will meet the champion, who has now come to terms, in a return title engagement over the 15-pound route in Madison Square Garden on February 19.

The winner will, in all probability, tangle with Yarosz either before the indoor season winds up or early in the outdoor campaign.

St. Peter's Victors Over Monarchs 3-0

St. Peter's took a 3-0 verdict over Monarchs to open their Junior City Hockey League schedule at the Brock last night. Despite sticky ice, it was a good game with lots of speed and fair teamplay shown. Both goalies shone on a bunch of hot thrusts that appeared labelled Creighton and Craig scored for the Saints in the first period and Craig got one in the middle chapter. These players were outstanding, with Prete on defence, for the winners. Langton and Conroy shone for the Monarchs. Both squads showed considerable promise and should turn in some keen hockey in the near future. The teams:

Monarchs: Goal, Driscoll; defence, Brault, Jordan; centre, Conroy; wings, Langton, Dorris; alternates, Vitarelli, Copperthwaite, Cassie, Boyle, McGinnis.

St. Peter's: Goal, Shaughnessy; defence, Curtin, Prete; centre, O'Leary; wings, Hoy, Craig; alternates, Sullivan, Creighton, Thornton, Lynch, Hawkes.

Referee—Jim Gillespie.

KING OF WINTER SPORTS
Ski-ing
By Charles Schaer
Sponsored By Peterborough Ski Club

16. BENT HIP POSITION—INCORRECT

The bent hip position, usually assumed by beginners and a characteristic of the skiing novice, is a posture stiff and awkward and while assumed in an effort to supply needed balance actally is more unbalancing than the elastic position which should be taken

In the bent hip position the knees are straight and rigid with the body bent forward at the hips. Balance is maintained by projecting the posterior rearwards. Knees, body and arms are cramped and stiff. As soon as the centre of gravity falls outside the area of support—which happens as soon as the skier begins to move at a fast pace or is rocked by uneven terrain—he loses his balance.

Apart from the carriage of the body it is important that position of the skis be correct. They should be kept close together, in a "narrow track" position and not with the feet wide apart.

This is particularly necessary in deep or breakable crust snow. On an extremely slippery surface such as bare crust or ice, the skis may be slightly further apart or in a wider track position, but only sufficiently to maintain balance under these conditions. For physiological reasons it is easier to make swing turns with the skis in a narrow track position.

Colts Trounce Tweed With Four in Second In Fast Junior Tilt

Take 6-4 Victory On Tweed Ice In Snappy Scrap Featured By Hard Checking And Some Sparkling Goal-minding

The local Colts returned to form last night to cop a 6-4 O.H.A. junior "B" victory in Tweed before a noisy crowd of rooters. On a heavy sheet of ice, the young Petes spotted the Tweedsters a two-goal lead in the first but piled up a commanding lead in the middle inning and held it with defensive hockey throughout the third. The win puts them back in a virtual tie for first place with Belleville.

Despite the heavy going, the pace was fast all the way and some neat combination and stickhandling shown. An improved Tweed team put up a scrappy display on their own ice and made the visitors hustle all the way. The score was 2-2 as the first frame finished and 6-4 going into the third, neither side tallying in the windup stanza. Of the nine penalties handed out in a hard-checking contest, the Colts drew four.

The Peterborough lineup was changed around considerably, the usual second line being broken up with the absence of Kingdon. Tweed also presented a different team, several newcomers from the district appearing on the lineup. As the ice became heavier, the checking was rougher with the refereeing fairly lenient and quite impartial. A good-sized crowd kept up a lot of racket most of the way at the exciting action.

THE SCORERS.

Wright, Starr, G. Clark and Heal were the Colts' scorers, all of them going goou. Crowe also turned in a fine performance at center of the second line. The first forward trio shone throughout, while the second line and the defence were good in spots. Harding played a bangup game in goal, especially when peppered with shots when Tweed ganged up all through the third heat. Mouck made some nice saves for the losers while the two Tummons, Ellsbury and Voyer stood out for the home squad.

Early in the opening period, the Colts pressed hard but failed to counter. Then Tweed swung into action and more than held their own. Voyer notched the first marker on Brunton's pass in close. Play was redhot for a time till Clark was chased for kneeling before his own goal. Tweed ganged up and blazed away at Harding, Ellsbury finally making it 2-0 on Cournyea's assist. Play swung back and forth at a speedy clip as both goalies jumped to save. Cournyea was gated for hooking and five Colts swarmed into enemy territory. Starr took Wright's passout and bulged the twine. Just before the frame ended, Wright's shot from outside defence went by the net-guardian. J. Tummon was chased for boarding as the period ended.

Colts Get Four.

The Petes pressed again to start the second but Tweed were at full strength again when G. Clark blasted the disc into the hemp in a hot scramble, after he had carried the puck in close. Starr scored right away on neat combination with Heal and Wright. The boys were turning it on and looking superior at this time. G. Clark got a pass from Crowe to make it 5-2 halfway through the chapter, and then Heal tallied a nifty on some tricky stickhandling in alone. Some hard checking was being dished up then with bodies strewn about on the soft ice. Harding twice robbed Tweed with circus stops. Long got the finger for tripping and the Colts' ganging did not produce a counter. Cournyea broke through to score at pointblank range with two minutes to go and, as A. Clark hopped the boards for elbowing, Ellsbury tallied on Brunton's pass in a ganging play just before the bell.

The ice was heavy and the pace somewhat slower in the third with neither side scoring, though both goalies stopped some hot tries. The Colts did some fine checking and frequently shot the disc down the ice as Tweed pressed hard most of this period. Starr got a cut on the nose and later Heal was clipped on the ear. With four and five Tweed boys up the ice most of the time, Harding had to be good to hold out the rubber. He got good support from his buddies, too. Jopling, Connelly and T. Tummon all went off together for tangling roughly on a rush, and Starr, Crowe and A. Clark did some nice checking while the Colts were shorthanded. Ellsbury went to the cooler for tripping as the game wound up.

The teams:

Colts—Goal, Harding; defence, A. Clark and Webb; centre, Starr; wings, Heal and Wright; alternates, Crowe, Brady, G. Clark, Jopling and Connelly.

GOLF HAD BIG YEAR IN U.S. DURING '36

Record Fields Entered In Championship Tourneys For Keen Play Throughout Country

By John G. Jackson
(President United States Golf Association).

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (AP).—The year just closed has been full of interest in the golf world, both on the playing and the administrative sides.

As in the former, perhaps the most significant fact is that a record field entered each of the four championships conducted by the United States Golf Association.

The open championship attracted 1,277 competitors. There were 1,118 entrants for amateur championship. Amateur public links championship had a field of 223 players and in the team championship division there were 49 teams of four players each from 23 states and districts. The women's amateur championship had a field of 188, the largest since the maximum handicap allowance was reduced to six strokes.

More Coming Up.

These facts evidence a great revival during 1936 of interest in golf. It is reasonable to assume that this has been general throughout the mass of golfers, for in the championships there have been so many new players of ability that they surely must have been developed by exceedingly keen competition in events of less importance than U.S.G.A. championships.

The international aspect of the year's competitions was especially satisfactory. The Walker Cup and the Curtis Cup matches brought together teams of men and women amateurs, respectively, representing Great Britain and the United States. British players were unusually prominent in two of our championships, one, Pamela Barton, being the winner of the women's championship and another, Jack McLean, very nearly winning the amateur championship, captured by Johnny Fischer.

N.H.L. PLAYOFFS START MARCH 23 GOVERNORS SAY

Elect Dwyer To Board—Toss Out Canadien Protest On Maroon Player

ADD GREEN LIGHTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (CP)—Some two months hence, about the time pussy willows are beginning to show signs of spring, National Hockey League fervor will reach its 1937 crescendo and the top notch teams will start tussling for the Stanley Cup and the N.H.L. championship.

Fans will see the start of the N.H.L. playoff round and the initial skirmish for the Stanley Cup, the annual battle between United States and Canadian sectional leaders, on March 23.

This was the decision of league governors who met here yesterday. They set subsequent jousts tentatively for March 25, 27 and 28, the N.H.L. series being a best-three-of-five lineup and the cup preliminaries a best-of-three game campaign.

Dwyer on Board

Then the governors elected Bill Dwyer, Sr., former owner of New York Americans, to the governing board and tossed out the protest of Montreal Canadiens over Maroons' having played the ex-Canadien, Paul Runge, last Dec. 12.

Canadiens claimed that under their agreement with Maroons Runge was to stay with New Haven of the International-American League until Dec. 28.

To help in ruling on goals scored in the dying seconds of periods, the governors voted for installation of green lights behind goals in all league rinks. This would flash on at the exact time the periods end.

Due to a Toronto protest, the rules were clarified to cover the case of a player who has lost his stick kicking the puck. If he does not interfere with the play there will be a faceoff but no penalty. If there is interference he will be given a minor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (AP)—New York Giant fans would rather read about Bill Terry buying catchers than cows....Red Grange is telling the boys on the coast Los Angeles may get a franchise in the National Football League next season.

Cecil Hart, manager of the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens, never played a game of hockey in his life...But that's nothing, points out Boo Ray in the Los Angeles Times ... Arnold Eddy coaches the U. of Southern California hockey team and can't even skate.

The Phillies seem to have grabbed off one of those jack-of-all-trades in William Andrus, rookie from Little Rock...He can pitch, catch and play the infield and outfield...So Manager Jimmy Wilson will just park him on the bench and wait for something to happen.

TWO MIDLAND RINKS STAY IN Toronto Also Puts Two Quartets In Quarter-Finals Of Imperial Event

CLOSE SCORES

MIDLAND, Ont., Jan. 14 (CP).—Only organization with two entries remaining in quarter-finals, Midland Curling Club today looked to rinks skipped by Captain D. Hudson and Capt. H. Hudson in its hopes to win the Imperial Oil trophy, main prize up for competition at Midland's annual bonspiel. The Hudson quartets were stacked against powerful opposition from other centres.

In all five of the 'spiel's events, chances for gaining laurels were distributed among the clubs represented at the meet. Play will conclude tomorrow night.

Toronto placed two rinks in quarter-finals of the Imperial event last night and a third, skipped by H. H. Chisholm, Toronto Curling Club, was to continue its battle for a place among the surviving eight today against G. Adams' Port McNicoll entry. Their match was the only one in the second round which remained unfinished at the close of play last night.

J. M. Rothschild, Toronto Strathconas, led his rink to a quarter-final with a 9-8 win over Norman Rule's Collingwood team. Bert Kennedy, Toronto Royal Canadians, moved in by beating A. A. Smith, Barrie, 12-6.

Penetang Rink Out.

A. J. Simon, Barrie, scored the most convincing victory of the Imperial Trophy second round, beating Dr. McLenahan's Penetang Ontario Hospital rink, 14-3. Others who came through were W. H. Weller, Hamilton Thistles, who beat Matt Kennedy, Toronto Curling Club, 14-11, and Rev. W. C. Stubbs, Elmvale, winner over F. C. Nugent, Lindsay, 12-11.

Losers in the Imperial competition had more success in the first round of the Gooderham and Worts Trophy play. Simon's Barrie rink defeated J. H. Hudson's Midland entry by so close a score as 7-6, while others to qualify were the McLenahan, Rule and Nugent fours which had been beaten in the second round of Imperial playdowns.

Weller's Hamilton Thistle team was still going strong in both events, beating D. Ramsay, Port McNicoll, by 15-11 in the Gooderham and Worts competition.

Some second-round matches were completed in the Old Chum event last night and Orillia had placed two entries in the quarter-final round. They were Dr. J. N. Harvie's rink, which beat R. Londrywas' Meaford quartet, 12-4, and W. O. Tudhope's rink, which beat that skipped by J. Beardsall, Elmvale, 10-8.

Trenton Fliers Here Against Petes Friday

The outstanding hockey game for here so far this season is billed for tomorrow (Friday) night at the Brock St. rink at 8.30 when the Trenton Fliers play the Petes an intermediate "A" contest. It will be the Petes' first home game this winter and the first meeting of the R.C.A.F. crew and the locals—the strongest squads in their group. The Petes have been practising hard nightly this week and are ready for a tough battle Friday. They hope to knock off the Airmen and get an edge on the group race. The local starting lineup has not been announced yet but the strongest possible Peterborough team will take the ice tomorrow.

The Fliers are reported to be a husky, hard-hitting and experienced outfit. They are in fine shape now, having just completed a pre-seasonal schedule and playoffs in the Kingston district, winning out with the loss of only one game. These Airmen have been imported from various places, several coming from Ottawa and Camp Borden. They favor a rugged brand of hockey with thumping bodychecks. The Petes may outskate them and the teamplay of both squads should be fairly equal. The biggest crowd of the season will likely see this classy puck scrap tomorrow.

Birthday Greetings

To Luke Sewell, veteran American League catcher, who was born in Titus, Alabama, 35 years ago tomorrow. A product of University of Alabama, Luke broke into baseball with Cleveland in 1931, moved to Washington in 1933 and on to Chicago last season. He has a batting average of .262 over his 15-year-career.

INDIAN PRINCESS ONCE SAVED LIFE OF POUNDMAKER

A Queen In Her Own Right Amikos Died At Age Of 109

PUZZLED DOCTORS

CRESCENT LAKE, Sask., Jan. 14—Amikos, 109-year-old Indian princess, who once saved the life of Chief Poundmaker, famous Indian rebel leader in the northwest rebellion, died recently in her squalid tepee on the Crescent Lake Indian reserve, ten miles southeast of the city of Yorkton.

Though blind in her latter years, Amikos had always been an outstanding personality in the Indian community life of this part of the province, and was not only held in high respect by the younger generation of redskins but also by their palefaced brothers.

Her features, dried up and wrinkled with age, were fascinating and magnetic, each wrinkle an impression of some memorable incident in the hectic history of the Canadian west—the savagery and blood lust of tribal warfare, the thrill of the buffalo hunt, the sad disappearance of this noble animal which brought about virtual starvation among her people, and the struggle against the remorseless advent of the white man and the march of his hated civilization.

Saved Chief From Buffalo

She was modest about the time she saved Poundmaker from being trampled to death during a buffalo hunt, and allowed him to live and attain historic fame as an Indian leader in a cause which he believed was beneficial to his people. It happened far back in her lengthy life when she was but a lithe Indian maiden in her late 'teens. A great buffalo hunt was in progress. A number of tribes had united to run down several hundred of these shaggy prairie monarchs. While watching the thrilling scene, young Amikos saw a racing pony stumble and pitch to the ground with its rider. Though the mount scrambled up and sped away to join the chase, the warrior lay still.

Amikos hurried to the prostrate brave and with the assistance of another squaw managed to drag him to the safety of her father's wigwam. A few minutes later the buffalo herd had wheeled about and thundered back over the ground where the young Indian had lain.

Might Have Changed History

Had he remained there the entire course of the history of western Canada might have been different, for the fallen warrior was Poundmaker, who, in 1885, made himself the hero of every Indian and Metis in the west by joining forces with the fiery rebel from Manitoba, Louis Riel.

Amikos tenderly nursed Poundmaker back to health. After he left she was never to see him again, but in later years, by moccasin telegram, she heard the tales of his wild exploits: Poundmaker on warpath! . . . Poundmaker wins victory over Col. Otter at Cut Knife Creek! . . . Poundmaker captured!

War drums then ceased to beat.

Puzzles Doctors

Some medical authorities are puzzled regarding the reason for Amikos' longevity. Though she belong to the blue bloods of her tribe, she had not special privileges and did her own work as other squaws had to. Her daily routine consisted of cooking, cleaning up, making her husband's, her children's and her own clothing, digging medicinal herbs, picking berries, setting traps for small animals, and helping skin them after they were caught.

But despite bad food, a tepee through which cold drafts often swept, wet floors for a bed, and air heavy with smoke when weather conditions made it impossible to make a fire in the open Amikos lived on to the glorious old age of 109 years.

A queen in her own right, she carried the secret of her long life to the "happy hunting grounds" with her.

DAIRYING SHOWS AN IMPROVEMENT

1935 Production Value Of $12,000,000 Is Exceeded President Informs Delegates

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 14 (C.P.). — With cheese and butter makers and dairymen present from all parts of Ontario, coming from as far as Belleville and the Ottawa Valley, the 70th annual convention of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association opened a two-day session at the Masonic Temple here yesterday.

Mayor Kingsmill officially welcomed the delegates at the evening session at 8 o'clock, and P. M. Dewan, M.L.A., Woodstock, addressed the convention.

In his presidential address, Mr. Baskett noted an improvement in the dairy industry for the past year. In 1935 Canadian dairy factories had a production valued at about $12,000,000 and Mr. Baskett declared 1936 figures would be higher.

He noted that additional outlet for Canada's exportable surplus of dairy products had been found at higher prices. For eight months ending November, 1936, Canada exported 71,928,500 pounds; milk powder exports declined 195,400 pounds; evaporated milk 3,303,800 pounds, and condensed milk 977,000 pounds.

Total value of exported dairy produce for these months was $12,214,698, imports $284,689. With a favorable balance of $12,214,009. This is compared with $10,216,274 in 1924, and $9,216,277 in 1936.

Auxiliary Corporation Inquiry Held Likely

TORONTO, Jan. 14—(C.P.). — Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck said to-day "an investigation is the most likely thing but not without the concurrence of the government" when discussing charges brought against the Auxiliary Corporation of Canada, Toronto private detective agency, by officials of trade unions.

G. W. Anderson, Sudbury, organizer of the International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, charged before the Ontario Cabinet Tuesday the International Nickel Company is sponsoring sabotage of the union at Sudbury, the actual work being done by the Auxiliary Corporation. Mr. Anderson said the Nickel Company employed the Auxiliary Corporation to send "spies" 'and "spotters" to Sudbury and other northern mining areas to wreck the unions. As a result 150 members have been lost to the workers' organization, he said.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S COLD NOSE

"What's the matter?" asked Mr. Twistytail.

"Don't ask me," whispered Uncle Wiggily.

"I wasn't asking you, if you please," grunted the pig gentleman in as much of a whispering voice as he could make it, "I was asking Mrs. Mew. She told me to hush, but she didn't say why."

Mrs. Mew, the cat lady who kept the store where cold ears could be made warm, turned around half way down the aisle and, giving her whiskers a twiddle, she hissed:

"Will you two animal gentlemen please hush?"

"Of course, we will," said Uncle Wiggily. "But why? I came in your store to have my cold ears made warm, as it says on your sign. You start to lead us to a part of your store where, I suppose, you keep warm ears——"

"No, I don't keep warm ears," said Mrs. Mew. But I sell muffs that you can put on your ears and keep them warm that way. I started to take you to the counter where I keep ear muffs and then, all of a sudden, I heard a noise. So I told you to hush."

Twistytail Is Curious

"What kind of a noise?" asked Mr. Twistytail.

"A sort of goofie noise, I should call it," whispered Mrs. Mew. "Hark!

There it is again. Now you have a guess."

In the cold-ears-made-warm store Uncle Wiggily and his fat pig gentleman friend heard some outside noises saying:

"I saw him go in there! We'll get him this time! Oh, I'm so hungry!"

"That isn't a goofie noise," said Uncle Wiggily.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Mew.

"It's a Bad Chap noise," whispered the rabbit gentleman. "The Three Bad Chaps are after me. They're outside the store now. Oh, what shall I do?"

"Do just as I tell you to," said the cat lady. "I won't let the Bad Chaps inside my store, so they can't get you."

"Yes, But they'll wait and catch me when I go out, Mrs. Mew."

"No, they won't," laughed Mrs. Mew. "They won't know you when I put my warm muffs on your cold ears. You'll see."

"I only hope the Bad Chaps don't see me," said Uncle Wiggily.

Provides Woolen Muffs

While the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat were outside the store, talking in loud voices what they would do to the rabbit when they caught him, Mrs. Mew took from a box on the shelf two long, woolen muffs like stockings.

"They must be long to fit on your long ears, Mr. Longears," said Mrs. Mew. Uncle Wiggily quickly drew a stocking muff over each of his cold ears. In a moment they were warm.

"Now you can go outside and the Bad Chaps won't know you," said Mrs. Mew. And, as truly as I'm telling you, when Uncle Wiggily hopped out of the store with Mr. Twistytail, the Bad Chaps looked right at the bunny but they didn't know him because they couldn't see his ears. So away the two friends went safely, happily.

But in a little while Uncle Wiggily said: "Twisty, I must go back to that cat lady's store."

"Why?" asked Mr. Twistytail.

"For two reasons," said Mr. Longears. "I forgot to pay her for the ear muffs I'm wearing and for another thing my nose is very cold. I must get a muff for my nose. Come on! Hurry!"

Back they started for the store of Mrs. Mew. And if the Blue Jay bird doesn't fail in the bottle of ketchup and get to look like a parrot I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's warm nose.

MATTSON CASE WARMS UP WITH SECOND ARREST

Ex-Convict Gives Up—Cottage Near Pit With Clay Like That On Boy's Fingernails

KNIFE IS FOUND

Seattle Mayor Blames G-Men's Orders To Halt Hunt, For Slayer's Escape

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 15 (A.P.). —Fred Morrin Haynes, ex-convict of Folsom, Calif., prison, sought for questioning in the Charles Mattson kidnap-killing case, surrendered here to-day and was questioned in Detective Captain Marshall Serafford's office.

The detective said Haynes came into the City Police Station early to-day, while State police were seeking a man and a woman who disappeared from a four-room furnished cottage five miles north of Seattle on Wednesday—two days after the body of the 10-year-old boy was discovered near Everett, Wash.

Another man, Lee Haskell Fowler, 36, was held in the County Jail at Bellingham, Wash. The jail was blockaded while Federal officers interrogated him.

A Suspected Spot.

Five miles north of Seattle, Chief William Cole of the State Police investigated the four-room cottage "spotlessly clean," and said neighbors reported a man resembling Ex-Convict Fred Haynes of California occupied it until Wednesday.

A blue clay pit is along the creek nearby, but Cole said the "whole country is of blue clay formation." Blue clay was found under the slain boy's finger nails.

An official source asserted the Bellingham prisoner, Fowler, declined to account during several hours of questioning, for his whereabouts since December 27, the night 10-year-old Charles Mattson was seized for the $28,000 ransom his physician father tried in vain to pay.

The same source said suspicion was aroused by Fowler's sudden action in pleading guilty Tuesday to robbing a milling company December 17. He is under 20-year-sentence.

At San Jose, Calif., a former Seattle woman told Sheriff George W. Lyle a photograph convinced her Haynes was the man to whom she rented her cottage near Seattle two months ago. Haynes, who has served a term in California for receiving stolen goods, is wanted for questioning by the Mattson investigators.

Pieces of the Puzzle.

At Everett, the killer's trail grew hotter as detectives swiftly put together the bloody pieces of the kidnap mystery:

A sack of blood-stained clothing found inside a deserted shack, both a boy's and a man's.

A heavy knife—perhaps the one

Robertson and Alfred Scadding of Toronto from the Moose River Gold Mine last Spring, offered yesterday two trophies for competition among players in the Pictou County Grammar School Hockey League.

WOMAN COLLECTS PRIZE

Unknown German Arrives For Von Ossietsky's Award.

OSLO, Norway, Jan. 15.—(AP).—An unidentified German woman arrived here to-day and collected the Nobel peace prize money recently awarded to Carl Von Ossietsky, invalid German pacifist.

When the woman's letters were found in order the Nobel committee turned over to her 1,000 kronen (about $247) and transferred the balance—150,000 kronen (about $37,000—to the German Kommerzenbank.

The woman said she was travelling incognito and refused to divulge her name.

SEE TRAP IN PLAN

French Denounce Italo-German Four-Power Anti-Red Bloc.

PARIS, Jan. 15 (AP).—Interested French sources denounced today as "a trap" a reported Italo-German plan for a four-power European alliance against Communism.

Government spokesmen declined to comment, pleading lack of official information, but well-informed political observers said France could not think of joining such an alliance.

They called it a "transparent manoeuvre" to attempt to force France to help Germany isolate the Soviet Union, or, failing in this, to win Great Britain to the Italo-German bloc. This would swing the European balance of power against France and Russia, they said.

PROGRESS CONTINUING

KINGSTON. — (C.P.). — Continued progress was shown to-day by "Tuffy" Griffiths, Queen's football and Toronto Argonauts player, who is in hospital with a badly-injured hand. It is thought the danger of possible amputation is past. While Griffiths will have difficulty with the hand, he will not likely lose the use of it.

Rome, Berlin Want Britain In Anti-Red Bloc

Said Drafting Demand As Their Joint Price For Hands Off Spain

Observers Fear Open Support For Insurgents If London Declines

ALSO INVITE FRANCE

No Reply On Volunteer Ban Until Mussolini And Goering Confer

ROME, Jan. 15 (AP)—British adherence to a European anti-Communist bloc was reported today in informed Fascist party circles as the Italo-German price for strict non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Should Great Britain decline the invitation which Premier Mussolini and German Air Minister Hermann Goering are reported drafting, Fascists said the temptation for Germany and Italy to support the Spanish insurgents openly would be great.

If Britain joins Italy and Germany in the front against Communism, however, these sources said, there need be no further obstacles to strict non-intervention in Spain.

In the meantime, it was reported, no answer to the last British demand for a ban on foreign volunteers to Spanish armies could be expected until Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler's first minister have fully determined the joint Italo-German procedure.

A similar invitation, it was said, would be extended to France. While full French participation was considered doubtful, less adamant French support of the Spanish government would be an important phase of the agreement.

Formation of the bloc was thought to be the main purpose of Goering's visit to Italy.

Taxes Worry Woman She Wants To Pay

Albuquerque, N.M., Jan. 15 (C.P.). MRS. Anna M. Seibert wrote three times to the Bernalillo County tax collector inquiring the amount of her taxes. Receiving no answer, she appealed to police here.

"I have paid taxes in Bernalillo County for a long time, and I'd like to know how much I owe this year," she wrote.

WIFE AT WHEEL BUT MAN DRIVING WHEN LAD KILLED

Trucker Says He Never Saw Boy And Trenton Jury Absolves Him Of Blame

CORONER'S INQUEST

TRENTON, Ont., Jan. 15 (CP)—William Thomoson, Trenton, was absolved of all blame by a coroners jury last night, in connection with the death of William Labelle, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Labelle, who died of injuries received when run over by a truck on Jan. 8. Dr. W. B. Crowe, coroner presided and B. C. Donnan, K.C., Crown Attorney, conducted the investigation.

Thompson said that at the time of the accident he was driving the truck but that his wife, Mary Thompson was sitting behind the wheel. "I went into a store and when I came out the wife apparently had noticed the truck and jumped in behind the wheel to get a ride home, a short distance away," said the witness. "I steered the truck with my right hand shifted the gears and I did not notice the child close to the truck at any time."

Hubert Down, 10, playmate of young Labelle, said the truck ran over the toe of his companion and he fell directly under the left rear wheel of the vehicle.

STABILIZING INFLUENCE

Professor Points to 110,000 Masons in 568 Lodges

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 15—(C.P.)—The 110,000 Masons in the 568 lodges in Ontario are a great stabilizing and moral influence, Professor W. J. Dunlop, head of the University of Toronto Extension Department, and Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, A.F. and A.M. in Ontario, told Great Western Lodge at installation ceremonies here last night. Earlier, Professor Dunlop had addressed a service club.

"Non-sectarian and non-political, Freemasonry is a great moral influence, helping to develop good citizens and deeply religious men," Professor Dunlop declared. "Freemasons are enthusiasts and they are expected to be thinkers."

BELL ISLE FIRE

BELL ISLAND, Nfld., Jan. 15. — (CP Cable.)—Worst fire in the history of this Newfoundalnd island raged through 14 buildings and caused an estimated damage of $75,000 before it was brought under control early to-day. Approximate 5,000 persons reside on the island, situated in Conception Bay off the southeast section of the island, and the flames threatened the entire community for a time.

THREE LADS MISSING

TORONTO, Jan. 15 (CP)—After an all-night search by police and parents, three youths were still missing today from their East York homes. They are Arnold Gray, 7; and two wards of the Children's Aid Society, Hugh Buchan, 10 and Edward Briggs, 10. The three attended school yesterday afternoon.

"The other night I heard them talking of "hopping a freight train for Nova Scotia," said Arnold Gray's sister, Ann. "We have no friends or relatives there. The only reason they might head there is that they think of adventure a lot."

Meisner Sues Labatt For Unstated Damages

Man Mistaken As Kidnap Guard Alleges Malicious Prosecution, Negligence in Identification

ACQUITTED, SECOND TRIAL

TORONTO, Jan. 15. — (CP). — Writ was issued at Osgoode Hall today by David Meisner of Covington, Ky., against John Labatt, London, Ont., seeking unstated damages for alleged "malicious prosecution and negligence in identification."

Meisner, who spent more than a year in Kingston penitentiary for the kidnapping of Labatt, was acquitted at a second trial in London March 20, 1936.

The jury deliberated seven hours before freeing the frail, well-dressed Meisner, who at first trial had been convicted and sentenced to 15 years in Kingston penitentiary.

Justice Minister Lapointe had ordered a new trial after Michael McCardell had made what he said was a full confession of the kidnapping McCardell absolved Meisner of all blame, said the kidnapping was carried out in August, 1934 by himself, John Bannon, Russel Knowles and Albert Pegram. McCardell was given 12 years, Bannon and Knowles were each sentenced to 15 years. Pegram has not yet been captured.

At the first trial Labatt identified Meisner as one of his kidnappers who acted as his guard when he was held captive in a Muskoka cottage three days. At the second trial the London brewer said he had been mistaken and was convinced he had mistaken Meisner for McCardell.

Thief Takes Pie, Coat But Misses Fur, Cash

Lindsay, Jan. 15.

WHILE Mr. and Mrs. Roy Casey of Glendine were absent from their farm home, visiting relatives, someone entered their home, stole a man's new overcoat, a new pair of overalls and a woman's print dress, but missed a woman's fur coat, the pocket of which contained a sum of money.

The thief is surmised to be a transient who was seen in the neighborhood. The thief helped himself to a lot of food, including a large pie and a half box of chocolates.

B.C. TUG BOARDED BY U.S. STRIKERS

Protest Is Wired To Ottawa—High-Handed Act Seen As Piracy

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—(CP)—An inquiry is being dispatched to Washington by the Canadian Government asking for a statement of the facts surrounding the alleged boarding in Puget Sound of a Vancouver vessel by men believed to be striking United States' seamen.

VANCOUVER, Jan. 15 (C.P. — Vancouver Merchants' Exchange officials to-day awaited a reply from Ottawa to a telegram protesting alleged boarding of a Vancouver tugboat by United States seamen reported from one quarter to have identified themselves as maritime strike pickets. The telegram declared the incident "tantamount to piracy."

M. R. Cliff Towing Company, owners of the tug Prosperative, were notified by telephone yesterday the tug had been boarded on Wednesday night in American waters in Deception Pass, Puget Sound, where it had tied up due to weather conditions after clearing for Vancouver from Anacortes, on the Washington mainland across the Straits of Juan de Fuca from Victoria.

The report said about 30 men had approached the tug, boarded her,

PHEASANT RAISING BE WELL WATCHED

Licensed Farmers Must Enclose Birds, And Use Tags—Monthly Inspections

TORONTO, Jan. 15—(CP)—Strict regulations will be made in connection with Provincial Department of Game and Fisheries plan to license farmers to raise pheasants in captivity for the market. Licenses will provide all birds will have to be raised in enclosed areas, there will be a tagging system and monthly inspections.

D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, said the department did not anticipate any rush by farmers for pheasant selling licenses. A few farmers, chiefly those who do it for a hobby, now raise pheasants, said Mr. Taylor, but their production is sold to the department of Game and Fisheries for stocking purposes. The birds are not sold commercially.

"The department is buying all the ring neck pheasants now raised in Ontario," said Mr. Taylor. "In 1936 we purchased a thousand or more from private individuals."

NO NEW POWER PLANTS IN VIEW ON TRENT RIVER

Roebuck Makes Announcement After Final Touches Put On Pact With Ottawa

OVER WATER RIGHTS

Session With Howe Ends 75-Year Dispute on Trent, Welland Canal, Decew Falls

OTTAWA, Jan. 15 — (C.P.). — Agreements reached verbally six months ago between the Dominion and the Province of Ontario over water power rights which have been disputed for 75 years were given final documentary touches here today after a two-days' conference between Hon C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, and Hon. Arthur Roebuck, Ontario Attorney-General and member of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission.

The agreements involve the Trent River, the Welland Canal and Decew Falls, near St. Catharines. On the Trent River the Hydro Commission now operates about twelve small developments producing a total of about 50,000 h.p., including three Canada Cement power plants taken over last year.

Under the agreement, the Hydro Commission is given authority to develop the river to increase the reserve of water and also to increase the power production. No new installations are contemplated for the near future, Mr. Roebuck said.

The agreements covering the Welland Canal situation provide that Hydro may continue to draw off a small amount of water from the canal for its Decew Falls plant, paying for water taken, and in return must furnish the Port Colborne grain elevator with power and keep a reserve on hand in case the canal's own system ever breaks down.

Peterboro's Maximum Is Fixed At $99,750 In Croll's 1937 List

Minister Urges Necessity Of Keeping Within Amount Specified

25 P.C. LESS FROM OTTAWA

Claims Many Municipalities Have Not Slashed Rolls Way They Should

TORONTO, Jan. 15. — (CP) — Maximum relief grants to Ontario municipalities for 1937 were announced today by Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, and municipal affairs. Basis of assistance will be 75 per cent of all relief granted in accordance with provincial regulations and within the maximum fixed by the public welfare department.

"In the face of Dominion cuts, Ontario will maintain, for the present at least, its rate of relief contribution to the municipalities," said Mr. Croll in defining the 1937 relief policy. "At the same time municipal overspending is still further curbed by reduction in the larger centres' maxima — "highest monthly outlay to which the government will contribute at the full rate."

Be Guided by Ottawa?

In a letter forwarded to the municipalities today, Mr. Croll says: "We reserve the right to adjust our rates of assistance in conformity with reductions in the federal grant-in-aid. Due consideration should be given to this possibility by all municipalities."

The schedule of maximum grants announced today does not include supervised municipalities. Policy for these municipalities will be fixed later.

Assistance for Toronto, up to 75 per cent of relief costs, is set at a maximum of $4,785,000, a reduction of 18.9 per cent from 1936 subsidies. The Toronto subsidy, as well as all others, will be paid on a monthly basis.

Maximum for Cities.

Maximum 1937 grants announced by Mr. Croll are:

Kingston, $87,700; Port Arthur, $116,500; Ottawa, 1,200,000; London, $416,000; Kitchener, $184,000; Hamilton, $1,067,000; Fort William, $128,500; Chatham, $46,670; Brockville, 47,250; Brantford, $414,575; Belleville, $63,300; Sarnia, $67,300; Galt, $51,000; Guelph, $150,975; Oshawa, $220,200; Owen Sound, $56,250; Peterborough, $99,750; St. Thomas, $81,750; Stratford, $95,375; Woodstock $20,800; Sault Ste. Marie, $97,500.

Towns included in today's list were: Smith Falls, $32,500; Barrie, $15,375; St. Mary's $3,450.

Mr. Croll's letter to the municipalities says: "We must urge upon you the necessity of keping your costs within the amount specified by the Province plus the appropriation from your own funds. No additional contribution can be expected from Governmental sources. The Province is starting off 1937 with a federal contribution 25 per cent less than that prevailing a year ago, and the Dominion government has announced a policy of progressive reduction in its grants-in-aid. We reserve the right to adjust our rate of assistance in conformity."

Hopes for Fewer on Rolls.

"There's less relief everywhere," commented Mr. Croll in making the announcement. "The economic situation is far healthier, and during 1936 we ran about 25 per cent lower than in 1935. We can look forward to a greater reduction in 1937."

While there was less relief in 1936 than 1935, there is still too much, declared the minister. "Municipalities haven't slashed into their rolls the way they should. In very many cases our maxima last year were too high, out of line with actual conditions, and cities didn't have to do the thorough house-cleaning we wanted to see."

"Municipalities will have to cleanse their rolls of all but legitimate cases of relief," Mr. Croll said. "They won't be permitted to cut standards, but they will be required to remove from the lists all those who have no valid right to public help."

Mr. Croll said 1937 should see a steady reduction "in the present expensive administrative units" built up for relief in the larger centres.

"They were necessary when relief was at its peak but the whole system has become top-heavy and we ought to be able to get away from lavish expenditure on municipal relief administration," he added.

If the municipalities co-operate

2 MAIN DEMANDS MADE BY CANADA IN ANGLO-TREATY

Asks Britain Stabilize Margin Of Preference Between Canadian, Foreign Goods

GIVE PROTECTION PLEDGE

LONDON, Jan. 15 (CP-Havas) — The Morning Post today published what it claimed were the main items of the new Anglo-Canadian trade agreement which the board of trade announced last night had been reached "in principle."

"I learn that Canada is agreeing upon two main conditions in making substantial concessions to British manufacturers by a reduction of duties," the newspaper's political correspondent wrote.

"First that Britain stabilizes the margin of preference allowed between Canadian and foreign goods; secondly, on an undertaking by the British government that Canada's trade will not suffer under any quota arrangements which the British government may in the future contract with foreign countries.

"The concessions allowed by Canada consist not only of reduced duties but in certain instances of a total removal of duties now in force.

"I understand that antique furniture is among the items on which Canadian duties are being removed.

British agriculture is being safeguarded by quota. British woolen and cotton goods and textiles will benefit under the new tariff."

Sit-Down Strikes Have Cost G.M., Employees $10,000,000

Shutdowns And Curtailment Of Operations In Related Industries Will Boost Figure

OVER 114,000 IDLE

DETROIT, Jan. 15—(AP).— The "sit-down" strikes affecting General Motors' plants have cost the automobile company and its employees close to $10,000,000 to date, an unofficial survey indicated to-day.

Shutdowns and curtailment of operations in related industries, principally steel, flat glass and transportation, have added several more million dollars to this estimate of business losses.

An Associated Press compilation, based on the number of idle employees, working days lost in each plant and the company's report of $7 as its average daily wage, shows that General Motors workers have lost approximately $6,156,661, including to-day.

With more than 114,000 General Motors employees idle, informed sources report that the losses of wages, current profits, prospective stock dividends and trade would amount to a "staggering figure."

Million a Day in Wages.

William S. Knudsen, vice-president of General Motors, has told newsmen that the company's idle employees now are losing about $1,000,000 a day in unpaid wages.

Asked how much General Motors was losing in current profits, he replied: "I hate to think about it," and declined to make an estimate.

Previously a General Motors official commented that the corporation "stands to lose" about $330,000 a day in net profits if all its plants are closed.

Some trade quarters have mentioned $2,000,000 as a "conservative guess" of the company's loss of net profits, allowing for varying numbers of closed plants, since the strike started.

8,000 A DAY FLEE CITY OF MADRID

Government Strengthens Lines In University Section After Successful Forays

MADRID, Jan. 15—(A.P.).—Government defence lines were reinforced against insurgent outposts in University City to-day after a series of successful forays in the northwest section of Madrid.

After capturing the central offices of the Clinic Hospital, Gen. Jose Miaja, chief of the defence Junta, announced. Militiamen repulsed an insurgent charge aimed at recapture of the knoll on which the University Administration Building stands.

In earlier skirmishes, the Socialist forces blew up a wing of the hospital and exploded a mine the insurgents had set for government troops. Gen Miaja said his soldiers stood at a safe distance during the blasting.

Insurgent forces also were reported to have made slight advances northwest of the capital near suburban Pozuelo de Alarcon and El Plantio.

Two towns in the area, Fuencarral and Tetuan de las Victorias, were abandoned by non-combatants complying with the defence Junta's decree, ordering all settlements near the front lines vacated by their civilian population.

About 8,000 workers, mostly homeless, are being removed from Madrid daily to the eastern provinces. Reduction of the city's swelled population and incoming supplies were looked to hopefully to relieve critical food and fuel shortages. In the interim, however, the city went on short rations, mostly olive oil, beans and scanty allowances of Spanish staples.

Rampaging Ontario Rivers Quieten After Brief Fling

Welland And Grand Prove Exceptions, Both Threatening Trouble

PORT HOPE LOSS HIGHEST

TORONTO, Jan. 15 (C.P.).—Urged to violence and destruction during the past 24 hours by lashing rain, Southern Ontario's normally quiet rivers and streams to-day subsided almost as suddenly as they had broken over their banks.

Dropping temperatures in most of the flood-threatened districts helped ease an anxious situation as waters rushed with less insistence. Let up of the heavy rains allowed the streams to slip back into their courses.

At Port Hope where floods caused greatest damage inundating the city's downtown business section raging through low-lying streets and tearing up property, the water fell overnight.

Ganaraska River which had become a roaring torrent in a few hours and swept over its banks into the city, fell as quickly and left business men, merchants and city authorities surveying damage expected to run into thousands of dollars.

Trees Uprooted, Highways Damaged.

In Western Toronto district, residents surveyed wreckage left by the rampaging Humber River which once more had returned to its easy ways.

Actual property damage was slight but trees were uprooted, highway shoulders were torn, and guard rails along the river edge were destroyed. Traffic was at a standstill for several hours.

Hoyt Winchester, lakes region guide and trapper, gave credence to O'Mara's report with the explanation that during high water the trout probably mistook the bridge for a waterfalls and attempted to jump it.

C.C.F. CHIEFTAIN STARTS DEBATE ON OPENING DAY

Woodsworth Criticizes Government On Its Tactics During Abdication

HAS PROTEST ON OATH

Premier States Correspondence Handled In Constitutional Crisis Will Not Be Tabled

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—(CP)—Members of the House of Commons today will consider a message of loyalty to King George VI and any criticism that may be forthcoming regarding the government's handling of the constitutional crisis will be postponed.

On Monday the House will take up the speech from the throne read at the opening of Parliament yesterday and presenting a brief, compact program of important legislation.

The gunfire and rattle of sabres which accompanied yesterday's colorful opening had scarcely died away before the abdication of Edward VIII and accession of King George became subjects of bitter debate in the Green Chamber.

James S. Woodsworth, spirited veteran Labor member for Winnipeg North Centre and leader of the C.C.F., took quick exception to Prime Minister Mackenzie King's proposal to discuss a message of loyalty to His Majesty before Parliament had approved of the succession change.

Introduces Bill.

The Prime Minister had introduced the necessary bill to ratify the government's action in consenting to the British Parliament's inclusion of Canada in the United Kingdom bill providing for the change in succession. He then asked for unanimous consent to placing the loyalty address on the order paper for today.

Debate on the bill would be lacking in reality if it came after the message of loyalty had been passed, Mr. Woodsworth declared. He did not approve of the way the government had conducted itself in the constitutional crisis and he objected also to the fact that he had been required to take the oath of allegiance to the new sovereign before taking his seat this session.

TWEED

STORE IS ROBBED AT SPRINGBROOK

$75 Worth Of Merchandise Is Taken—Post Office Rifled

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Jan. 15.—Removing two large panes of glass, robbers gained entrance to the general store at Springbrook operated by Mrs. H. Mumby, and stole merchandise to the value of $75 on Wednesday night. The large steel safe in the Post Office at Springbrook, that adjoins the store, foiled the thieves in their attempt to steal cash. However, a small amount of cash was removed from the cash register.

The robbery was discovered by Mrs. Mumby as she opened her store for business on Thursday morning. Provincial Constable Dymond of Madoc was called to the scene of the robbery and at noon sufficient clues had been obtained to assure the police of a possible arrest by nightfall. Although nothing had been removed from the Post Office, the building had been thoroughly rifled and attempts had been made to gain access to the contents of the safe without success.

Overalls, shirts and tobaccos to the value of $75.50 were removed from the general store. No disturbances were heard by the residents of the village to warrant suspicions of a robbery taking place. The large window panes were removed, making a space sufficiently large enough to allow a man to crawl inside the building. The receipts of the day's business from the general store, and all monies, were securely locked in the Post Office safe.

Although the owner of the store lived next door to the place of business, she stated to the police that no suspicions had been aroused until she opened her place for business and found the store had been robbed early this morning. Mrs. Mumby operates the store in conjunction with her brother, Mr. Lorne Bateman.

SYRUP FLOW IN DANGER

Belleville Tappers Want Lots of Snow and Cold Weather

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 15—(C.P.).—Probable effects of mild weather upon maple syrup and maple sugar production are being debated in this district. Warmer weather has caused sap to ooze from trees lately, though this is not unusual when such conditions are experienced, it was said. But sugarbush owners say cold weather and lots of snow are needed for a good quality of syrup.

THE BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 39

IN A BLACK evening gown, Lady Severinge was still a very beautiful woman. Her pure white skin and clear complexion would have done credit to a young girl, and her fine eyes still retained much of the brilliance that had attracted Sir Henry when she was a young girl.

Selden observed it all after the pleasant dinner James had served and as he urged Lady Severinge to take him into her confidence, to tell him what she knew.

"What particularly do you wish to know?" she asked Selden.

"Nothing that you don't wish to tell; but your late husband led a queer wandering life, didn't he before he returned to this place?"

"He never told me," she said with relief, fearing more intimate question. "He hinted at times that he had been all over the world, and I never could understand his attitude towards James——"

"I think I can understand that," Selden said. "They had been together for many years, and were more like friends than master and servant." He leant forward and emphasized his words with his cigar. "Let me tell you, Lady Severinge, James is a better friend to you than you know—I am fully aware of the position, and it must be awkward for both of you, but remember that for years James has been occupying a menial position deliberately, and has never presumed on it. Have you ever stopped to inquire what the reason may have been?"

"I can't say that I have—I am afraid we have never hit it off together. I suppose because, as you say, he was my husband's friend, and"—she paused and a strained look came to her face—"he objected to our marriage from the first."

"Perhaps there were others, into which I don't propose to enter, to which he also objected," Selden said sternly.

Hilda's eyes flashed, and then she dropped her gaze from his face and up, and I shan't mention it again, flushed with shame.

"I am sorry to have to bring that but it is vital to the problem I am investigating. We have wandered from the point. I asked you whether you had guessed why James occupied this peculiar position. Don't you think it likely he did so to watch over Sir Henry, and try to prevent the very disaster that occurred?"

Hilda started; several obscure point; were suddenly clarified. "But from whom? Where was the danger? You don't think that I——"

"If I did, I should hardly be talking to you in this way, Lady Severing. But that is not to say that James may not have suspicions of you."

"And Eric has suspicions of James," she blurted out before she thought—the words were an expression of what was passing in her mind.

"Exactly. Now I think we are beginning to understand each other. I am going to tell you something—you remember how angry you were when I asked to be allowed to search your bedroom?"

Hilda smiled. "I was, at the time," she replied.

"I did have a look in, and among other things I saw that the missing candlestick was on a table, hidden behind a curtain."

"I found it in my room and hid it—I was afraid."

"Exactly—I thought as much," Selden said.

"But who did put it in the room, and for what object?"

"I am going to find out, Lady Severinge, but I will hasard a guess—James must have found the candlestick when he searched the house. He came to see you, to find out what you knew, and discovered you were not in your rooms at the moment. He left the candlestick there—why? I can't tell at present, but that is my supposition."

"Then James knows more about the murder than he will say. Really Mr. Selden, you are making a very black case against him."

"I am quite certain that James had nothing to do with the crime," Selden said firmly; "but for some reason Sir Henry was in fear of his life and shut himself up here almost in a fortress. Colonel Graham is also in mortal dread of some danger, and guards himself with steel shutters and bloodhounds and his native servants."

"What fearful thing are you hinting at?" Her eyes strayed round the room in horror ,as though she saw some lurking form in the shadows.

"That is what I hoped you would help me to find out," he said quietly. "Hasn't it occurred to you during all these years to wonder how your husband acquired a considerable fortune before he took possession of the Abbey?"

"I never had the courage to ask him, and later I had not the opportunity. I always supposed that he made it in some gold mine or speculations."

"Fortunes aren't made so easily or so privately as that. Sir Henry, from what I hear, was never a business man, and remember, he and James and Graham came back at the same time, with considerable wealth—I have found out all that."

"I wish I could help, but I believe you must be right, from vague hints my husband uttered from time to time, but somehow I had the idea that Henry was afraid of Colonel Graham."

"That was my first idea, but I now think it was wrong. Suppose there is some secret in the past connected with this money—some discreditable secret. Follow the train of events. For some years nothing happens—Sir Henry marries and Graham settles down as a magistrate and county gentleman. Then an attempt is made on Sir Henry's life. From that time onwards he shuts himself up here, and Graham takes extraordinary precautions. They are hunted men. If there were no secret, why did they not seek police protection?"

"Why are you telling me all this?" Hilda exclaimed, resting her chin on her hands, and staring gloomily at the detective.

"Because," he said firmly, "I want your help, and I particularly want you to be on your guard with Eric Colindale."

He saw the start she gave, but made no sign. Only he gazed gravely at her and saw terror and something more—suspicion—spring to her expressive features. "He is coming down here," she murmered.

"I am not surprised to hear it. I suppose you have seen him today?"

Hilda nodded. She could not speak—suspicions crowding into her mind. Eric had threatened blackmail—he was dependent upon her for everything, and that meant dependence on James, but she could not betray him; that was unthinkable.

"He had no hand in the murder," she said defiantly.

"I know that—he had a perfect alibi," Selden said with emphasis, and Lady Severinge leant her head on her hands, and a sob escaped her.

"Now listen," Selden went on, "I don't want you to act as a spy, and I should not ask you to do anything against Colindale, but I want you to be on your guard, and not discuss anything with him about the murder or the disappearance of the children. Will you do that?"

"I'll promise that, Mr. Selden. But can't you give an idea where the twins are?"

"They are safe, and in good hands," he answered emphatically.

"Thank God for that!" she exclaimed fervently.

"What is more, they will remain so, but it is better that you should not know—or even see them."

"You don't trust me?"

"It is not that at all," he said impatiently. "But, forgive me—you would want to see them, and you have a tell-tale face. If you were asked whether you knew anything you would betray yourself. That is why I was able to get information from you without your knowing it."

"You're a terrible man, Mr. Selden."

A knock at the door made Hilda cry out. The house had been so deadly still that the sudden rap seemed like a note of doom.

James entered and closed the door behind him silently. "Hucks from the Bull Inn has come," he said, and Lady Severinge looked in amazement at the butler.

"I'm glad he's come," Selden said. "Hutchins, the inspector, thought it might be a good thing to have a night watchman in the house, not knowing, of course, that I should be here. He's a useful man to have—it's like employing a gladiator."

"He is having supper in my room," James said. "What instructions shall I give him?"

"Fit him out with a pair of slippers that won't make a noise," Selden said with a grin, "and show him round the house."

"You know, sir, that the servant's quarters are locked at night and I keep the key," James remarked.

"Leave the door unfastened so that Hucks may have a free run."

James understood perfectly and nodded with meaning.

"I think I'll go to bed," Hilda said, when James had gone. "I've got a terrible headache, and I'm very tired."

"You will be quite safe tonight. I will see you as far as your room."

"But where are you going to sleep? I ought to have arranged it, but everything seems to have gone out of my head."

"Don't worry about me; I shall not do much sleeping tonight. If I feel sleepy, I'll dose down on a sofa."

"I am so glad to have had this talk, Mr. Selden," Hilda said at the door of her room. "It has relieved my mind, although it has worried me as well."

"And now to business," Selden observed to himself, when he heard the key turn in Lady Severinge's lock.

PORT HOPE FLOOD COSTS THOUSANDS DOLLARS DAMAGE

Business Is Paralyzed For Day, Buildings Undermined, Families Forced To Move

MANY CLOSE CALLS

PORT HOPE, Ont., Jan. 15 (CP).—Loss of many thousands of dollars was estimated today as Port Hope surveyed the damage caused by one of the most devastating floods in years when the swollen Ganaraska River poured out over its banks yesterday.

Business was paralyzed, children were unable to go to school, workers were stopped from reaching factories, a dozen families were forced to vacate their homes, and several persons narrowly escaped death.

Roy Croft, chain store manager, swept into the swirling waters a short distance north of here, was reported to be recovering. He was unconscious when snatched from the river.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Hills waded thigh deep through the yellow flood carrying their two-year-old daughter, ill with pneumonia, to safety and medical care.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Barrett also brought a baby safely from their threatened home.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haydon ferried their six children from their flood-swept home. They were all reported well tonight. "About seven o'clock the flood came up five feet in a half-hour," said Mr. Haydon. The rescued Haydon children are: Ann, 9; Bob, 7; Joan, 4; Mary, 3; Pat, 2, and Katherine, a baby of 10 months.

Thomas Uglow, recluse and town character, was saved from death when rescued from his shack as muddy waters were coming close to washing it away.

Sidewalk Washed Away.

In front of an apartment building on Mill Street, the water gouged out a sidewalk clear to bedrock, making a hole 30 by 8 feet and about 9 feet deep. On the opposite side of the road, an expansive driveway into a large garage was extensively washed away.

The lower floor of the Ontario hotel was completely inundated. Guests and staff were marooned in the building for the greater part of the day.

Unprecedented water levels driven into torrent, ripped up the concrete approach to the Roy Dayman public garage. Gasoline pumps were twisted, and the entire building was dropped six feet when the soil underneath was washed away. Garage equipment was washed into the river.

The waters demolished the corner of a concrete block building next door, a motor car showroom of Delbert Smith. A car owned by George E. Caldwell was carried into the flood and with the recession of the water, was found on its side, several yards away and on the very brink of the river's main channel.

More than 100 ft. of the Canadian National Railway line was washed out on the Port-Hope-Peterborough branch.

ONTARIO FARMERS ARE GIVEN HOPES

Marshall Promises Discussion Of Their Plight At Coming Session

TORONTO, Jan. 15 (C.P.).—Ontario farmers to-day were assured of discussion of their plight at the forthcoming session of the Ontario Legislature concerning establishment of conditions under which they might receive better return for their efforts. Hon. Duncan Marshall, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, promised the helping hand last night in an address to the Ontario Vegetable growers' Association.

Mr. Marshall said the Government should help in attempts to organize a co-operative control over produce sale, but he did not think it should be expected to do all the financing.

"Charge it against the fellow who is going to eat the vegetables," he said. "But I hope we shall be able to do something to help you make more progress than you have done in the past."

Although he believed in the success of free trade, the minister said he could not overlook the fact a measure of control over sale of cheese had been beneficial to Ontario farmers. He said he hoped the Privy Council decision on the Natural Products Marketing Act would be made "in good time so that necessary Provincial and Federal legislation could be passed at this session."

"Tom's got a job.... and....we're going to get married!"

SOONER or later this moment comes in every parent's life. Your little baby, your rollicking tomboy, grows into a sweet young woman. And what a tug at your heart strings when the break in the family circle comes. But at least you're happy to know she will have the protection and support of strong young arms.

So you're glad Tom has a job; glad that industry has been able to provide a place for this eager, intelligent young man, and give him the opportunity to make a home of his own and carve out a path to success.

Many a Canadian family gets its start in just this way with the automotive industry. Thousands are employed in automotive plants and distributing and selling organizations. Thousands more earn their livings in plants that make the materials used in building motor cars, and in the making and handling of food products, clothing, furniture, purchased by automotive workers.

The money put in circulation reaches the farmer, fisherman, miner, lumberman, railway worker. So the true value of the automotive industry to Canada is measured by the number of Canadians it puts to work. That is why we need a strong, prosperous automotive industry in Canada.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRIES OF CANADA

For Instance, take Our Own Industry

Over $22,000,000.00 was paid by the Automobile Manufacturers in salaries and wages during 1936. Yet this huge sum is dwarfed by the wages paid in the factories that produce the materials and parts that go into a completed car, which wages are built in large part on our purchases. Other Canadian industries — glass, steel, rubber, textile, paint, chemical; to name a few — are stimulated by the manufacture and sale of Canadian-built cars. The prosperity of their employees is likewise affected as is that of those who supply their individual living needs.

For statistical and further information about this Industry, write to Automotive Industries, 1006 Lumsden Building, Toronto.

Coming To Canada

LADY HAIG.

On the first leg of a world tour which will eventually take her to Canada, Countess Haig, widow of the British Great War commander, has left England for India. The countess will tour the British empire, consulting war veterans on parts of her late husband's wartime diary. Most of her travelling in Canada will be done by aeroplane.

District Ladies Attend One-Day Course.

A number of interested women representatives of various branches of the Women's Institute in the surrounding district were in the city for the one-day course in Buymanship given at the Department of Agriculture offices on George Street by Miss Edith Collins of the Women's Institute branch at the Provincial departmental offices in Toronto.

The ladies in attendance included Mrs. F. J. Bullied, representative of the Apsley branch of the Women's Institute; Mrs. R. T. Dunlop and Mrs. H. L. Scott, of Belmont; Miss Ina Morrison of Havelock; Miss Genevieve Armstrong of Hall's Bridge; Mrs. Howard Bullock of the Senior branch at Lakefield, and Miss Ethel Blakely of the Lakefield Junior branch; Mrs. Earl Cuthbertson and Mrs. William Buchanan of Norwood; Mrs. James Longmuir and Miss E. Longmuir, of Trent Bridge; Mrs. W. H. Clements of Warsaw; Mrs. James Clydesdale and Mrs. Don Cameron, of Westwood.

Miss Collins will return on February 10th to give a second day's course in Buymanship, which is really instruction in the appreciation and perception of better-class materials, with samples to illustrate the theme. The Departmental idea is to encourage the appreciation of better-class goods, so that reliable manufacturers of good quality lines will be patronized instead of makers of shoddy goods.

Fashion Service

Besides being smart, they're grand for the limited income, because you wear them right through the spring.

Soft shirred wide shoulders that make the waist seem slender, are the outstanding feature of this charming print crepe dress. It has a four gored skirt with moderate flared fulness at the hem. The hips are extremely snug.

An amateur at sewing can make it. The fronts and the back with kimono sleeves are simply shirred to the shoulder. The skirt is stitched to the waist. The pattern includes the cross-over vestee (seen in small view).

Crepe silk, lustrous satin crepe, sheer wools, etc., are other appropriate materials for your choice.

Style No. 3363 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48-inches bust. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 35-inch material.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

A VEXATION arises, and our expressions of impatience hinder others from taking it patiently. Disappointments, ailment, or even weather depresses us, and our look or tone hinder others from maintaining a cheerful and thankful spirit. . . How sadly, too, we may hinder without word or act. . . especially the various phases of ill-temper, gloominess, touchiness, discontent, irritability,—do we know how catching this is?—F. R. Havergal.

Dear Friends:

How little we realize the way in which our moods affect those around us. Let one of a family get up with a grouch and start finding fault with everything, and see how soon they get all the others going in the same way.

Let another feel depressed, and in a little while all those within sound of his voice get apprehensive of some bad thing coming along. And sometimes they do not even have to speak a word to depress others.

Which brings to my mind a woman I used to know in another city far from here. She, like the rest of us had her occasional "off" days, but would not admit it. Instead of coming straight out and saying she had a headache as we would do, she would go around snapping and snarling at everyone.

This was wrong, and the other wasn't right, and you could not get a civil word out of her. If you asked if she did not feel good, she vowed she was 'perfectly alright, you wouldn't hear her complaining," when all the time she was doing nothing else, and in a most aggravating manner.

So at last I said to her, "you are either sick and should be in bed, or the devil himself has got into you. if you go to bed we shall do our best to make you well again, and if an evil spirit is in you we shall just leave you to fight it out, until you ask for help."

After awhile she could stand it no longer, and went to bed, but the ungracious way she accepted our help disgusted me, and I refused to pander to her ill-nature any longer, and left her severely alone.

When she was well again she said to me, "I am always like that when I do not feel well." I asked her how she would like it if we all acted like that when we were under the weather, and told her that if she would not stand it from us, we should not have to take it from her.

And so it is with many of us. Something goes wrong with us, and we take it out on those around us. We gloom and grouch, we take no interest in anything, spoiling the day for ourselves and for everyone else, and what does it get us?

What would have passed in a little while, stretches out sometimes into a quarrel, into misunderstandings, and sometimes into active dislike. If only we would stop to think that the darned thing will either get better quickly, or develop into something for which we will need the help of a doctor, we would not let these things get the best of us.

I still say it is as easy to get into the habit of looking on the cheerful side as it is to look on the gloomy side. It is as easy to laugh as to frown, to be hopeful as to be depressed. I know that we all get down at times, but we can try to get up again, and while we are trying our gloom disappears.

And so, if you are inclined to take your ill-nature out on your family, or those around you, just stop and think if you would like anyone to act to you as you are acting to them, and you will pull yourself up short, and be a nicer person to live with, and to know.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

ANGLO-IRISH TRADE ICE MAY BE BROKEN

Dominions' Secretary Sees Valera In Five-Hour Session—Statement Expected

LONDON, Jan. 15 (CP)—An understanding leading to the thawing of the tide of Anglo-Irish trade, frozen five years ago as a result of a political dispute, was hoped for today following informal conferences between Malcolm Macdonald, Secretary for the Dominions, and President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State.

A number of matters outstanding between the two governments were said to have been taken up, including the question of banning the departure of volunteers to Spain — a point in which De Valera was said to be in complete agreement with the British government.

Imperial conferences are usually attended by all the Dominion prime ministers. In 1932, at Ottawa, the Irish Free State was represented by Sean O'Kelly, vice-president of the executive council. Whether De Valera himself will attend the forthcoming conference has not been announced.

Statement Tuesday?

A statement Tuesday by Macdonald in the House of Commons was believed likely.

Calling at the hotel at which the Irish premier was staying on his way home from a visit to a Zurich eye specialist, Macdonald met De Valera and his aides in a five-hour discussion which spread over two sessions. He left late last night without making any statement as to the ground covered. Earlier an important statement had been predicted following the second meeting.

De Valera, who left for Dublin this morning, contented himself with the announcement that "an informal discussion took place on a number of matters affecting the relations between the two countries."

OLD WAR MYSTERY WORRYING FRANCE

Still Unable To Find Germany's Official Declaration Of War In 1914

PARIS, Jan. 15 (A.P.). — A mystery which has defied the best minds in the French Foreign Office cropped up again to-day: The disappearance of Germany's official declaration of war on France in 1914.

French Rightists resurrected the puzzle of the missing document, linking it with the arrest of Suzanne Linder, Foreign Office employee charged with forging documents.

One newspaper asserted Mme. Linder's arrest brought the disappearance to light but Government officials said the historic note had been sought since it was found to be missing from the files in 1928.

Just what became of it after Baron Von Schoen, German Ambassador to Paris, handed it to Premier Rene Viviani on August 3, 1914, is not known. Presumably it was filed but a committee forced in 1928 to edit documents concerning the origins of the Great War was unable to find it.

The late Raymond Poincare quoted it in his memoirs. It is believed he worked from the original.

Irish volunteers to both sides in the Spanish conflict traveled together on the same ship from Dublin to Liverpool.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

YOU lose vital nerve force if you allow your stomach to distress you. Acid stomach, indigestion, gas or biliousness and "costiveness" cause the blood to be poisoned and will eventually destroy health and nerve force. This is what W. J. Fisher of 4 Sanford Ave., N., Hamilton, Ont., said: "I suffered with my stomach, could eat but very little and that would cause distress. I grew weaker daily and suffered from headaches. My weight went from 176 to 154 pounds. I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and was soon able to eat normally. I gained in weight and strength and could resume my work. The 'Discovery' made a well person of me." Buy now!

Punishing Independence

Joseph E. Crawford is Liberal member in the Ontario Legislature for Fort William, but he will not be invited to attend meetings of the party in caucus. The explanation is that in the last session he voted against the Government on the separate school tax legislation. Two other Liberal members who voted the same way will attend caucus meeting, and the difference in treatment is explained by the fact that the Liberal association in Fort William "disowned" Mr. Crawford after he registered his vote. So the Government is doing just what the local association had previously done.

We do not think much of such tactics. It smacks too much of holding a club over a man once he has been elected, and it deprives him of the right to use his own brains in determining his course of action.

When a Government is certain of its followers regardless of what move it may make there is not apt to be much restraint. It will be known in advance there will be no bolters. If, on the other hand, the Government knows it is dealing with a number of representatives who are keen thinkers and who have a desire to vote for what they think is best, regardless of its political color, then there is bound to be more hard thinking and better planning on the part of the Government.

There are few political leaders who would encourage political independence, but there are a great many ordinary people scattered all over the country who would welcome more of it.

How the New Sheep Came

Elsewhere on this page there is printed an article from the Kingston Whig-Standard regarding the presentation of a pen of prize-winning sheep to the Ontario Agricultural Society by the Kerry Hill (Wales) Flock Book Society. That is also the name of the sheep—Kerry Hills, although they carry with them local nomenclature which describes them as "the speckled-faced rentpayers," that tribute possibly being the same in origin as the phrase "mortgage lifters" applied to hogs on our own farms.

The editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard says the new breed has been introduced into Ontario by Hon. Duncan Marshall at no cost to the province. That is one way of stating the case by an editor who has a passion for keeping his own name out of the paper. Truth is that W. Rupert Davies, editor of the Whig-Standard, and himself an annual visitor to his old home in Wales, had the matter well in hand as a result of his own efforts and negotiations before Mr. Marshall came into the picture as the official to accept the gift on behalf of the O. A. C. When the pen landed at Saint John Mr. Davies went there personally to see how the shipment had fared in crossing, and also to make certain the animals passed through quarantine. We believe such things should be mentioned publicly. Mr. Davies knew from observation and experience that the Kerry Hill breed was good for wool and meat and he hopes the farmers of Ontario may find them as valuable as the folk in Wales have found them to be. That is how the prize-winning pen at the Kerry Hill sheep sale in Montgomeryshire last September happen to be at the Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph today.

The Floods at Port Hope

Peterborough's neighbor to the south, Port Hope, is getting another deluge of surplus water from the Ganaraska river. And it happened because there was a heavy rain at a time when the ground would not absorb much of it. Port Hope is a picturesque spot, much of it built on high hills where floods do not come, but there is that valley in between where the Ganaraska in season is raging or docile to the point of sluggishness.

The Ganaraska is pretty much a Durham county affair, and at no place in normal times does it appear formidable. But it serves a watershed which is hilly and from which the rainfall over a considerable area seeks an outlet to the lake, and at this season it all wants to get there immediately. There is nothing to hold it back.

Unfortunately for Port Hope a section of its business district is in line of the flood waters, and the water will act so quickly—as it has within recent days—that there is bound to be damage before protective efforts amount to much. To turn once more to the unfortunate feature, there is nothing much that Port Hope can do about it. The valley is there between the hills, and so is the Ganaraska, and so is the watershed to the north which feeds the river. Peterborough extends Port Hope its sympathy. Floods are a miserable thing with which to contend for the patent reason no one can do anything about it.

Let Us Hasten There

"G. L. White, two miles down the railway tracks from Lochalsh station, is picking free gold from the rocks with a pair of tweezers and sending it outside by the bottleful."

That bit of information we secured from a report from Lochalsh, described as being 500 miles north and west from Toronto. Bruce West writes about it in the Globe and Mail.

We are not exactly surprised to learn of the existence of places where gold can be so easily secured. On a number of occasions men have approached us telling of mines where the gold lay thick and almost pure. It would be necessary to have only a contraption something like a fanning mill in order to blow away the dust and other impure matter. There was such exuberance of high hope in these salesmen that we even parted with good ducats to become associated with this form of rapid wealth. In the years between we have had occasion to gaze upon certificates, and the dull conclusion has been forced upon us that the fanning mill had become broken.

It is well though to have a man bring forth this scheme of mining again and do so under his own name. There is something about having merely a pair of tweezers and a bottle of which we heartily approve. It would be so much easier than going about in the north country weighted down with a couple of picks and a shovel and a hammer and a spike.

One could go about his day's work gladly and unbent. The tweezers could be placed in the vest pocket and a bottle could be secreted in the larger pocket of the jacket. Much superior we should think to the old method of gouging deep holes in the ground and burrowing hither and thither in search of precious metal secreted in great chunks of rock.

Such news arouses within one strong desire and a bit of yearning to be off to that place 500 miles north and west of Toronto. We saw a pair of tweezers out in the composing room just this morning and it is not much bother to carry an empty bottle. If the thing was liable to turn out well one might even take two bottles. We have heard a number of people say 1937 is going to be a great year, and we are beginning to believe it.

The Prodigal Son of 1937

Police in Toronto arrested a youth of 15 years whose home is in Perth. He is described as being well developed and would readily pass for 18. The charge against him is that he stole $1,060, the savings of an uncle, a retired railway worker.

We learn from the report the money has been spent. All of it. Three hundred dollars went to buy clothing. He went hunting near Collingwood in $23 breeches and a $10 hunting jacket, and with two friends he shot with an expensive rifle for which he had secured 1,000 rounds of ammunition. He stayed seven days at a Toronto hotel; $24 went for flowers for his best girl and several $5 bills are reported as going for candy. He lost an unstated amount playing cards, and it is related that with his girl he saw all the shows in Toronto and visited most of the night dancing places.

The $1,060 represented the savings of an uncle who worked hard for his money. Possibly it took him a long time to put aside something for the day when he would be working steadily no more. Right there is the hard part of the story because it brings to the front the part of the youth's character which is not easy to remedy. To him the money was something which was to be pitched around to gratify all the whims of a selfish mind. The fact that an uncle, and a man who had worked hard for what he possessed, depended on that money was not even seriously considered. The history of similar cases will show it may be possible to punish such a youth, but it will be difficult to make a man of him because one of the essentials of manhood is missing—that form of honor which recognizes and appreciates the struggles and the problems of other people.

Repeating an Old Error

Due to the strike at the Empire Cotton Mill at Welland 800 workers have been out of work for more than three weeks. The strike does not remain a matter for the company and its employees to deal with alone, as the city is being drawn in. Already there have been representatives in Toronto seeking advice from the Hon. David Croll. They want to know if Welland is going to secure any added assistance in extending relief to those who are on strike, and the answer is that the government is not prepared to grant assistance.

So it is that a strike of that size within a very short time becomes a matter for municipal consideration. Relief, it is stated, has already increased $900, and each day sees more requests being made. What was in the first place an industrial dispute has been changed into a growing demand for civic expenditure.

An old mistake has been made again in Welland, that of hastily forming a union and then going on strike, knowing the union has no financial backing to finance a strike. We are not for a moment considering the merits of the case, but rather the tactics employed to try and gain more for the workers. Probably the people working in that mill have been hanging to their jobs, knowing they could not afford to quit. But unitedly they do quit, and unitedly they are no better off than they were as individuals. The whole history of strikes shows that if there is going to be prospect of success there must be the ability to finance the workers while they are idle. If that is not done then the strikers are in short order thrown on relief or charity, and that in turn breaks their spirit as rapidly as anything could do.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Austrian beggars were found to be travelling in a $12,000 car. Probably operating the thing kept them poor.

There seems to be the feeling that there is too much reality in present realty taxation.

It looks as if the Toronto ball club will not be allowed to play on Sunday. There were times last year when it seemed that they could not play ball on any day in the week.

Professor Einstein we are told has a new theory in regard to gravitation and after we have absorbed all the details of his earlier theories we may get around to this fresh one some day.

Eight persons were rescued from a burning Port Colborne rooming-house when a pet cat gave the alarm. We always claimed there was some use for those animals.

And now the Nazis claim that the biblical screen play "Green Pastures" is an instrument of Jewish propaganda. That was one Premier Hepburn never even thought of when he sought to bar the picture in Ontario.

Packs of roving timber wolves are destroying the big game in Northern Alberta, according to a despatch. We always were under the impression that poker was a big game in that part of Canada.

The Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association wants the government to appoint an agricultural metereologist. We presume they would like a weather expert to announce officially when the frost is on the pumpkin.

Australian government had 300 applicants for a $12,500 job as London representative of the meat board and not one had the necessary qualifications. That is usually not an obstacle in the way of securing a government plum.

Those Japanese recruits for the Spanish front rather remind folk of the Russian armies which passed through England to fight in France during the great war. There was much talk about them but the trouble was they never existed.

Under the farm placement scheme 37,381 men and 4,944 women and girls have been placed in farm jobs for the winter. That sounds like good business but it means little to Ontario whose government has refused to co-operate in the plan.

Ottawa has come back into her own again with the session under way, even if the present gathering of parliament is to be a hurry-up affair aimed at getting Premier King out of the parliamentary trenches in time to attend the coronation.

J. V. McAree uses his fourth column in the Globe and Mail to describe how he house-cleaned his desk. We are afraid he could not have made a very good job of it or he never would have been able to crowd the report into one column.

York Township has done away with its school health services and medical officer of health. With the Ontario government dispensing with district health officers and the municipalities following suit as in this York township case, we are fast getting back to the old days when public health was a pure matter of chance.

EQUIPPED

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When Christmas came around last year, they gave me flappers for my ear, for I am growing old; my niece in kindness knit a pair, to shield me from the biting air, on days when it grew cold.

¶ My nephew brought me wristbands too, and they were made in grey and blue, he bears the family name; he figured when I did the chores, on stormy days went out of doors, they'd shield my crippled frame.

¶ And such a scarf from Aunt Lucile, 'twould loop around a wagon wheel, has wool to fill a peck; if zero weather came e'er spring, why I could run and wind the thing, three times about my neck.

¶ And Cousin Dan sent me some socks, so bright they glitter for three blocks, but they are very thick; and Dan explained about my feet, they needed more degrees of heat, if I would not be sick.

¶ Before there came this gift affair, I'd bought red flannel underwear, it covers chest and knees; I like some padding on my spine, when comes to cold in winter time, or else I'm sure to sneeze.

¶ I've had small chance to air my stuff, for weather has not turned up rough, I don't protect my flues; but I am sure with wraps I own, I could with safely leave my home—and join some polar cruise.

Keeping the Unfit Off the Highways

(From the St. Thomas Time-Journal)

THE DEPARTMENT of Highways now requires every driver who has had a bad accident record to be examined by a doctor to see if any physical defect is responsible for the accidents. This suggests that it might be a good thing from the standpoint of the safety of those using the highways, if more attention was paid to the physical qualifications of all who drive motor vehicles. Why wait until a driver has established a reputation for accidents before subjecting him to an examination regarding his physical fitness? Plain, ordinary common sense suggests that the time for such an examination is before and not after an accident, in which perhaps, there has been a loss of life.

That many people are driving motor vehicles who should not be is demonstrated by the records of New York State in which road tests are compulsory. In the first nine months of 1936, nearly one-third, or 91,856 of the 270,985 applicants for driving licenses who took tests, were disqualified. Eye test failures alone numbered 3,480. These statistics indicate plainly that more attention should be paid to the physical fitness of all drivers and would-be drivers. The driving of a motor car should be regarded as a very serious matter. In the hands of incompetent drivers the modern pleasure car may easily become a juggernaut of death. The locomotive engineer is required to undergo periodic physical tests, and the time will no doubt come when drivers of all motor vehicles will be required to do the same. Many more people are killed by autos and trucks than by locomotives. No doubt one reason why the locomotive kills so few is the fact that the man at the throttle has to be physically fit for his task.

It was suggested on this page the other day that suspension of licenses should be more widely followed as a punishment for drivers who flagrantly disregard the rules for safe driving. It is reassuring to learn that the Department of Highways is becoming increasingly alive to this necessity. Last year nearly 1,000 license plates were confiscated from drivers whom the courts found unduly reckless, or who were adjudged by the department to be unfit to drive because of physical defects or other reasons.

The knowledge that they may lose their driving licenses should act as a check to those who are inclined to be reckless. Another deterring agency should be the reminder, just made by the department, that according to Section 42 of the Highways Traffic Act, the onus of disproving negligence rests on the drivers when their motor vehicles come in contact with pedestrians or cyclists. This responsibility, of course, does not apply in cases where motor vehicles collide on the highway or when suit is brought by a passenger of the car in respect to injuries suffered.

The department, which is apparently determined vigorously to enforce the law with the view of reducing highway accidents, further points out the Act also provides that the owner of a motor vehicle shall be liable for loss or damage sustained by any person by reason of negligence in the operation of such motor vehicle on a highway unless such motor vehicle was, without the owner's consent, in the possession of some person other than the owner or his chauffeur, and the driver of a motor vehicle, not being the owner, shall be liable to the same extent as such owner.

By every means possible should the way be made harder for the reckless and incompetent driver.

A RADICAL MOVE.

(Lethbridge Herald)

THERE doesn't seem to be much doubt about what is in the mind of a considerable number of the Social Credit rank and file members of the Legislature if hints dropped by Mr. Kuhl, Member of Parliament for Jasper-Edson, Mr. Ansley and Mr. Unwin, members of the Legislature, at a recent Social Credit conference in Edmonton, can be taken as the opinion of the majority of the legislators. Mr. Kuhl told the members of the convention that Alberta should establish legal tender money in the province through establishment of a Provincial Bank, and "should make every other money in the province illegal tender."

That is about the wildest statement yet made, and Premier Aberhart hurried to offset it on his return from his holiday at the coast by declaring that nothing radical would be done.

Certainly what Mr. Kuhl suggests would be radical, Mr. Kuhl appeared to appreciate just how radical when, in the next breath, he talked about "armies" to enforce the Social Credit principles now being considered by the Premier and his Cabinet. That it would take an army, and a big one, to force Alberta money on every Albertan and make every other money in the province—including Bank of Canada notes—illegal tender, goes without saying.

AN EMPTY EMPIRE.

(Hamilton Spectator)

RIGHT Hon. R. B. Bennett is now on the Atlantic ,returning to Canada after a tour of the British Empire. In a radio speech he has given some of his reactions to the tour, emphasizing particularly the impression of bigness and emptiness of the dominions and the wisdom and necessity of redistributing the population of the Empire, so that it will be less congested in some countries and better filled in others. Even without making a personal inspection, anybody who gives any thought to the matter at all must realize that the conditions referred to by Mr. Bennett are not only undesirable, but menacing. They inspire feelings of envy and such feelings prompts aggressive action.

Trying a New Breed of Sheep.

(From the Kingston Standard-Whig.)

THERE HAS arrived at the Guelph Agricultural College within the last month, a pen of a breed of sheep which is new in Canada. They are called the Kerry Hills, and this pen, which was the prize one at the big Kerry Hill sheep sale in Montgomeryshire last September, has been presented to the O.A.C. by the Kerry Hill Flock Book Society.

The Kerry Hill breed of sheep is one of the predominant breeds of Wales. These sheep are known as "the speckled faced rentpayers." They are exceedingly popular in Mongomeryshire, and Radnorshire, as well as in parts of Shropshire and Hertfordshire, because of their hardiness and the quality of both their mutton and wool.

Referring to the Kerry Hills in his pamphlet on "Types of Mountain and Hill Sheep in Wales," reprinted from the Welsh Journal of Agriculture, Prof. J. Glynne Williams, B.Sc., M.S., of University College Aberystwith, says:

The Kerry Hill sheep, another native breed, are somewhat more localized than the Welsh breed. They are found on their native hills in Montgomeryshire, and also in the border counties of Brecon and Radnor. Under the influence of a very active Flock Book Society, considerable changes have taken place in the general type which has been popularized. For lowland and lower hill conditions and in breeding rams for crossing, these changes represent improvements, but the smaller, more compact and hardier, earlier type of the breed are preferred for the higher and poorer hill conditions. The breed generally, and the improved rams, particularly, are used in many districts for fat lamb production. However, the small unimproved mountain ewes are still in demand for crossing with Down rams on the lowlands, and many are used in flying flocks in North Wales. These ewes are hardy, easily maintained, and have not the same tendency to ramble in a strange country as the Welsh mountain ewe and are thus more popular than the latter on badly fenced lowland farms.

This new breed of sheep has been introduced into Ontario by Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, at no cost to the province. They come with an excellent record behind them. Time alone will tell whether they will prove as valuable to the farmer in this country as they have to the farmers and small-holders in the border counties of Wales.

Letters To The Editor

Corresopndents Discuss Various Topics

WHAT WAS SAID

Editor Examiner.

Sir: A statement appeared in the report of the Children's Aid Society in your paper of Wednesday, January 13, 1937, to the effect that I said the woman who had charge of the child mentioned in this report had been in court on a bigamy charge. I absolutely deny ever having made such a statement.

So far as the immorality charge against the woman in question I also deny absolutely, having made any such statement of immorality. What I did say was that she and her husband are legally married and therefore there cannot be any immorality between husband and wife.

I trust you will give this letter the same prominence in your paper as that accorded the reports of the Society.

Yours Truly,
JOHN EDGAR.
Local Superintendant.
Children's Aid Society.
City and County of Peterborough.

Ed. Note—The report as published in the Examiner did not state that Mr. Edgar made the charge the woman referred to was immoral, although that question was freely discussed. It is also a matter of record that the question of bigamy had also entered the case at a previous time.—Ed. Examiner.

PARK BENCHES

Editor Examiner.

Sir: Regarding some recent remarks concerning our city parks particularly Confederation Square, may I say the term "park pests" as used by Alderman Stocker, is very fitting.

Girls and women have been subjected to annoyance from this particular brand who while away the time making audible remarks of not exactly complimentary nature as the unfortunate female passes.

Also it is not too pleasant an experience to pass a long row of park benches placed to the sidewalk all occupied by men staring. Not very often can a girl find a place to sit even if she cared to do so.

I have often wished I could sit and rest on a hot summer day while on the way home burdened with a heavy shopping bag but these benches so placed are not exactly inviting although the surroundings are.

If one wishes to admire this well-kept little oasis of beauty one must do so on foot it seems or saunter along pursued by a battery of eyes.

It does seem a pity the less fortunate who have not cars to get out and enjoy the beauties of nature are not able to sit in comfort in the shade and enjoy an hour's leisure. Surely that is a public park's primary purpose.

It might be as well to have no benches in this park another Summer or else place them in a less public position than on a public thoroughfare directly in the glare of a blazing sun.

No doubt this would encourage a few park loafers to patronize the place still more, but would also provide comfort and rest to worthy people in search of same. Do not penalise them for the sake of the few who abuse privileges.

As it is now one gets the feeling there ought to be a notice up: "No trespassing—Keep Out."

THE MONEY

Sir:Would you please put this question in the paper.

Where is the money coming from for the banquet for Senator Iva Fallis that the City Council has voted unanimously on?

MAMIE LUNDY.

To Run Their Own Show?

(From the Lindsay Post.)

SINCE the tourist industry has become the Nation's second largest business, districts that are fortunate enough to be endowed with the natural requisites to attract tourists, such as lakes, streams, scenic beauty, fishing, etc., have become very much awake to the fact that they should do something to entice visitors to their particular locality. Some towns and cities as well as many actual summer resorts have been carrying on an intensive advertising campaign for many years while others have just trusted to luck and have taken what has come their way. For some years the Rotary Club in Lindsay has carried on an advertising campaign in a small way. There have been many concrete cases of definite results from their efforts.

It is now proposed that Lindsay link with Peterborough in a campaign to advertise the entire Kawartha Lakes district on a much larger scale than has heretofore been possible. The idea has many good points which will be brought forward and explained at a meeting of the tourist association. As one prominent local man explained to the council when asked his feeling regarding the proposed joint effort:

"Where MacGregor sits is the head of the table." He meant by this that Lindsay as a town, in his opinion, would reap more benefit from a properly organized campaign than it might put on without taking in the broader field. In other words, let Lindsay conduct its own campaign along the lines that seem most advisable and let whatever other centres might be interested do likewise. We are inclined to the belief that it would not be a bad idea. Lindsay is the very hub, the gateway, to the Kawartha Lakes district and as such is in a very enviable position geographically with any other large centre that might consider joining with us. If Lindsay merchants would get whole-heartedly behind a tourist promotion scheme and go out of their way to give a little extra service to tourists in the way of free attractions, keeping their places of business open when the tourist season is here and in many other ways, such as are employed in the winter resorts of the South, we believe Lindsay would enjoy an increase in tourist business that would be most gratifying.

While we are open to hear the plans advanced by the joint association, at the present time we are in favor of putting all our effort behind boosting Lindsay and the Kawartha Lakes district to the North including the County of Haliburton which has everything to offer in the way of tourist attraction.

GROWING WHEAT.

(Brantford Expositor)

INASMUCH as Italy is suffering at present from a large shortage in wheat production, estimated in some circles as high as thirty per cent., Premier Mussolini has instituted a campaign for the cultivation of the most extensive acreage in its history. The annual consumption averages about 8,500,000 tons, whereas the yield this year was only about 5,000,000 tons. The complaint in Italy is that not only is there not sufficient wheat, but it is not of good enough quality. It is a question whether wheat of high quality can be produced profitably in Italy. This attempt on the part of certain countries to make themselves independent in food supplies has proved to be a failure.

THE ARMS' RACE.

(Washington Post)

IT IS, at bottom, a fool's game. Temporarily rearmament has given a fillip to industry, particularly in the field of production goods, and in so doing has reduced unemployment. But the application of so much energy to basically unproductive purposes can in the long run serve no good end. As President Roosevelt pointed out in his speech at Buenos Aires, this piling up of armaments is bound sooner or later to lead to war or economic disaster or both. In Germany's case the fork in the road may not be very far distant.

RUSSIA'S NEW PORT.

(Business Week)

THE NEW city of Komsomelisk on the Amur now has its own giant metallurgical plant practically completed. About 5,000,000 tons of coal are being mined in that vicinity this year; 23 new electric plants have been opened up within the last two years; hundreds of miles of automobile roads have been constructed, and an especially large number of railroad trunk lines built. The Far East now possesses its own ammunition, aviation and cement plants, as well as numerous industries which have never been publicly announced.

EPILOGUE
We The Living

The Torch we hold — thruout the years
Is still held high, withhold your fears
We the living heed your plea
To "Carry On," to set you free
From sacrifice yet unattained,
Until our pledge to you is gained
We the living will not yield
Our debt to you in Flanders Field.

The Poppy shall our emblem be
To wrest you from your Calvary,
To bring the torch at last to rest,
We the living press the quest
To end all war, to all man give
Our hand in peace, that all may live
In harmony, and by cooperative will,
Unite all men in love, His wish fulfill,
We the living, in Christ's name steeled
To keep our pledge—with Flanders Field.

Now She Sleeps Like a Top

Tonic Way Re-makes Tired, Depressed Sufferers.

Why envy people who can relax like a baby and sink quickly into deep restful slumber every night? You can do it, too, instead of tossing and turning, vainly wooing sleep while each tick of the clock seems like a minute, and minutes drag as slowly as hours. PHOSPERINE, the great British tonic, will help you.

"When I feel washed out," writes Mr. L. Nordman, Dunston-on-Tyne, England, "all I have to do to feel fine again is to take two tablets of PHOSPERINE. A friend of mine, who seldom sleeps well, finds that by taking one tablet she sleeps like a top."

PHOSPERINE'S great success is due to the fact that it nourishes starved nerves. And when your nerves are in sound, normal condition, you drop off to sleep as nature intended you to. What's more, you wake with a feeling of renewed vigor each morning. Start taking PHOSPERINE to-day. Get it from your druggist. 50c, $1.00 (4 times as much), $1.50 (8 times as much—get this large, economical size). 60

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 15. — All news was bearish on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday, leading to material setbacks in wheat prices. The close was 1¼ to 1⅛ cents lower.

A lull in foreign demand for wheat, heavy Argentine shipments this week and reports of heavy snowfalls in sections of the United States winter wheat area brought out selling that left values at the close at the lowest levels of the day.

Adding to prospective 6,000,000 bushels wheat exports from Argentina this week, against less than 4,000,000 last week, as a depressing market influence were sharp recessions in outside markets. No figure was placed upon yesterday's small export sales of Canadian varieties.

Cash-grains operations were inactive with spreads little changed. Oats and barley prices soared to new seasonal high levels to highlight coarse grains trading before falling off with wheat toward the last.

SHEEP AND LAMBS STRONGER TONE

Heavy Supply Of Cattle Tended To Drag Market To Lower Level

TORONTO, Jan. 15 — (C.P.). — The sheep and lamb division of the Toronto Livestock Market displayed a strong tone this week, the Dominion Livestock Branch reported, and prices moved about 50 cents higher. A heavy supply of cattle made that section lose most of its recent advance. Calves lost an early advance in later trading. Hog prices firmed after a soft start and closed 15 cents higher.

Some 500 cattle were sold last Friday and Saturday at prices 50 cents cwt. above last Thursday's close. Monday's market opened at previous levels, but most grades suffered a decline of 50 cents cwt. by the close. A holdover of 1,200 cattle from Monday was reduced to around 200 by Thursday.

Butcher cattle sold from $4.25 to $6.75, with some at $6. A high mark of $7 cwt. was posted last Staurday for good butchers. Choice weighty steers closed at $6.50 to $6.75 with Monday's top at $7.25. Cows opened at $4.50 for tops but eased to $4 with plain grades as low as $3. Canners and cutters brought $1.75 to $2.75.

Bulls were steady under export demand, good butchers and heavies bringing $4 to $4.50, and bolognas $3.25 to $3.75. Most fed calves traded at steady prices of $6 to $7.50 with occasional tops reaching $8.

Small lots of stockers went from $4 to $5.10 cwt. Good tested milkers and springers were priced at $65 to $70 each.

Export shipments to United States were 700 cattle, including six carloads of bulls.

Calves opened the week 50 cents higher under keen export buying but faded again as orders were filled. Exports were 1,130 head. Choice vealers ranged from $11 to $12, closing at $11 to $11.50. Common light calves brought $6 to $8 cwt., and some heavies went between $5.50 and $7. Grass calves were $4 to $4.50.

Hog prices started the period 10 cents lower at $8.50 off trucks for bacons. The close was $8.60 to $8.75, long hauls bringing the higher price. Car hogs were quoted at $8.25 f.o.b. and at $9 weighed off cars. Market tone was soft at the end of the week.

Lamb receipts included 850 Westerns. All the Prairie lambs sold at $10 with no culling done for a rise of 50 to 60 cents, quality considered. Small lots of Ontario lambs of medium to good quality ranged from $9.50 to $10, culls downward to $7.25. Sheep were about 50 cents up at $4.50 to $5.25 cwt. for best light ewes.

Losses Edge Gains In Mining Issues

TORONTO, Jan. 15 — (C.P.). — Losses had the edge on gains on the Toronto Mining Share Market but, with a very few exceptions recessions were not important. Chibougamau and O'Brien were sold in quantity, the former at a net loss of about 35 cents and the latter at a drop of about 20 cents. A fairly firm tone was maintained by the base metals, and the oils recorded minor declines.

A blood-stained automobile, stolen and abandoned—believed to be the one in which the nude body was taken to a point near Everett and left to freeze in the snow.

A machinist's hammer picked up near the spot where a young hunter stumbled on the victim's body.

Among the missing pieces of the puzzle were the 1936 license plates on the car when it was stolen from an Arlington, Wash., resident.

Information that little Charles, apparently at the dictation of his cruel abductor, wrote three letters to his family, was reported in a copyrighted story by the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. It quoted a source "above question."

At Portland, Seattle's Mayor, John F. Dore, asserted in an interview "we could have caught that guy who stole the Mattson boy if it hadn't been for the G-men, but the government says hands off until the victim is returned."

(Dr. L. W. Mattson, the boy's father, requested cessation of all police activities at the time, fearing the kidnapper might become terrorized and kill his son).

Prices Ease Off In Late Trading

TORONTO, Jan. 15 — (C.P.). — Prices for the active industrial issues eased off in the late trading to-day to give the board a moderately weak appearance at the close. Dominion Steel and Coal "B" dropped about a point, Abitibi Common took a half point loss after hitting a new high in the morning trading, and narrow losses were showing finally for the liquor and oil stocks. Gypsum, C.P.R. and Nickel. Ford "A" held to the up side with a gain of about 1½ points and the close was stronger for Cockshutt Plow, British American Oil, Smelters and most of the other building stocks.

Royal Commission Is Urged To Study Financial Relations

Royal Bank President Believes Canada's Financial Set-Up Needs Overhauling

ANNUAL MEETING

MONTREAL, Jan. 15.—(CP)— A Royal Commission investigation of the financial relationships between Dominion, provincial and municipal government with a view to thorough overhauling was urged here yesterday by Morris W. Wilson, president and managing director of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Speaking before the banks annual shareholders' meeting just before Parliament was due to assemble, the financier called for a "review of the whole subject" to consolidate the present "piecemeal" delineation of government relations, resting on the British North America Act and nearly 150 interpreting Privy council decisions.

At present, he said, over a wide field of economic legislation, it was "virtually impossible to guess whether ultimate authority rests with the Province or with the Dominion." Further, he said, changed conditions had thrown new responsibilities on various government bodies, and some found it difficult to meet the new burdens from present revenue sources.

"Let us secure a review of the subject by a Royal Commission," Mr. Wilson said, "with the object of resolving these complexities . . . The financial relationships of the Dominion, Provincial and civic governments should be thoroughly overhauled."

Reviewing Canadian economic progress for 1936 Mr. Wilson said national income had risen and the buying power of almost all groups has increased.

Agriculture alone suffered during the year, he said. Drought in the west was "disastrous" to farmers and the value of Canadian agricultural products amounted to about $750,000,000 as compared with an average of $1,482,000,000 in the period 1925-1928. Reestablishment of foreign markets with the cooperation of Canadian and foreign governments was suggested as a solution.

Investors who created the newsprint industry "by the investment of many millions of dollars have been without any returns on their investment for a number of years," said Mr. Wilson. "It is to be hoped this condition will not long continue." Improvements in prices and production were noted in 1936.

New high record production was established in mining, he said, and volume in the manufacturing industries in October reached the highest level since July, 1929.

Travel From Kinmount To Bancroft Impossible—C.N.R. Washout Reported

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Jan. 15.—The announcement of the establishment of another battery unit in Lindsay has been officially confirmed. It will be an artillery unit using larger guns than the howitzer, Major Jones will be the O.C. in command.

Thanks to the alertness of employees of the C.N.R. a serious washout on the line near Nxbridge in the early hours of yesterday morning was noticed before any serious damage resulted. A staff of men was sent to the scene from Lindsay and took charge of the situation.

High water has completely inundated some of the highways in the north country. There is no traffic on some of the roads, and it is impossible to travel from Kinmount to Bancroft and other northern points.

Railway Changes

While no official confirmation is given to the report, it is understood in railway circles that, commencing April 1, the C.N.R. will take over the C.P.R. line running from Lindsay to Bobcaygeon, running one train daily. The C.P.R., it is also announced, has decided to tear up the section of the Port McNicholl line running from Orillia through Lindsay to Bethany. Local C.P.R. and C.N.R. officials state that they have received no official information concerning the reports.

Large Funeral

All classes of citizens united in paying the last tribute of respect to the late Harry Reeves, C.N.R. engineer, who died suddenly in Campbellford this week. Members of the railway brotherhoods, Independent Order of Oddfellows and railway officials attended the funeral. Interment took place at Riverside cemetery, the services being conducted by Rev. A. J. Goldring, rector of St. Paul's church.

Visit From Papa Dionne.

Papa Dionne, of Callander, father of the world-famous quintuplets, visited Lindsay this week, visiting a relative who is a member of St. Joseph's Community. He was accompanied by Rev. Father Bunyan, of Callander.

30TH ANNIVERSARY OF ROSENEATH W.I.

Organization Plans To Mark Occasion With Euchre And Dance

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Jan. 14.—The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon in the town hall with Miss Irene Brown as hostess and the president, Mrs. E. Braithwaite presiding.

Following the opening exercises the members answered the roll call with various suggestions on how to amuse children on a rainy day.

During the business session much time was taken in completing the arrangements for the euchre and dance to be held in the Orange hall on Friday night, January 15. As it is 30 years ago this month since the Roseneath Women's Institute was organized, the euchre and dance are being held to celebrate this anniversary.

The miniature silver cup to be presented by the society to Eileen Fanning, winner of the third prize in the oratorical contest, was on exhibit and arrangements were made to present the cup to Eileen. It was arranged to hold the February meeting in the town hall. Mrs. A. Halstead will be the hostess. Her assistants are Mrs. B. Thackeray, Mrs. J. Webb, Mrs. T. Waldie and Mrs. W. Thomas. Mrs. W. Smith and Mrs. D. Brisbin are the members of the program committee.

During the program period Mrs. W. Smith gave a comprehensive report of current events during the past month, Miss Jessie Smith sang "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen." She was accompanied by Mrs. S. Thackeray. Two interesting contests were arranged by Mrs. J. W. Pacey and Mrs. A. Braithwaite. Mrs. E. Blodgett, who was to have given a talk and demonstration on the care of clothing, postponed it until the next meeting owing to the lateness of the hour.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and the hostess and her assistants served refreshments.

PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, CANADA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1937

Attacked By Dog: TORONTO — Attacked by a bulldog at the rear of their home, a woman and her son took refuge in their garage. "The dog bit into one door, and it was all we could do to hold them shut," she said. Although he was wearing heavy rubber boots, Constable J. R. McNaughton was bitten on the foot when he was called by neighbors. After beating off the dog about ten times, Constable McNaughton stunned it with a kick.

FIVE PER CENT. OF SALARY CUT IS RESTORED

Board Of Education Adopts Report Of Committee On Appointments

10 PER CENT. CUT REMAINS

Five per cent of the 15 per cent salary reductions were on Thursday evening restored to employees of Peterborough Board of Education at a special meeting held in the board room in the offices of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company.

Adopting a report of the committee on appointments, which met under chairmanship of John R. Marshall, the Board decided:

"That 5 per cent of the salary reduction be returned to employees of the Board effective from January 1, 1937.

That Fred Finnie, supervisor of property be allowed the sum of twenty dollars per month for the use of his automobile.

"That the salary of G. H. Thompson, secretary-treasurer be restored to the original sum of $1,500 per annum."

Mr. Thompson told the press the 5 per cent restoration would mean an approximate increase in expenditure for the current year of around $13,600. Of this amount he explained $7,500 would be on the public schools account; $2,600 on the Collegiate (academic department) account; and around $2,500 on the Collegiate (vocational department) account.

Last year he said salaries in round figures were as follows: public schools, $137,000; Collegiate (vocational department), $47,000; Collegiate (academic department), $47,000.

Volunteered 5 Per Cent Cut

Four years ago it will be recalled the school teachers of the city volunteered a 5 per cent salary reduction for the purpose of city relief and in the Fall of the following year received an additional involuntary reduction in salary of 10 per cent, making 15 per cent in all.

Last year the public and high school teachers made representations to the Board requesting that in view of improved conditions they be given a partial restoration of pay cuts. The matter was taken under consideration by the 1936 Board and at the final meeting of last year, a recommendation was made to the incoming Board that the matter of salaries be given further consideration.

It was claimed by the teachers of the city in representations which they made to the Board last year, that Peterborough although claiming to be in a sound financial condition, had effected salary cuts rated as among the highest in the province.

The Rambling REPORTERS

WHAT THEY EAT.

The young ladies who wait on the public behind the eating counters of Peterborough evidently don't take much stock in the vitamin theory, and yet they look healthy enough. Two were observed recently picking their own lunch after a busy session. One chose a large slice of layer cake, a double portion of ice cream and a bottle of orangeade. The other's preference leaned to a hot dog with plenty of relish and a bottle of Coca-Cola.—C.L.M.

FISHING FOR SUCKERS.

The 1936 fishing season was inaugurated Friday. Suckers were running at Nassau and a number of Peterborough anglers were making the best of the unseasonable opportunity, yanking the slothful fish out of the flood waters with gaff hooks. One gentleman returned to the city with quite a bag.

Further Spring weather note: The door at the City Hall was left open during the greater part of Friday to allow a draught of fresh warm air through the building. No employee could recall any previous January 14 on which the door was left open with comfort. —C.P.K.

A LOST DOG FINDS CHUM.

Wallace Coombs, 12 years of age, a resident of Benson avenue, appeared at The Examiner office Thursday evening.

"Can I look at one of tonight's papers?" he asked an attendant in the business office.

"What for?" the attendant asked.

"I want to look in the lost column and see if anybody lost a dog. A dog's been following me around for an hour and he looks lost." He went to the door and whistled and a small black and white collie trotted in.

A search of the lost ads failed to reveal any mention of a lost dog so the boy and the dog moved on companionably, the boy determined to watch further issues for a clue to the dog's identity.—C.P.K.

NOSEY REPORTER.

Among its reporters, The Examiner has one of those individuals who, when he sees a "Wet Paint" sign, immediately touches the paint to see if it is wet.

Last evening he spied in The Examiner office a switch he had not noted before.

"Don't touch that," a fellow-worker warned him. "That's a fire alarm switch."

Idly he clicked the switch and then looked at the words inscribed below the switch, "Fire Alarm."

"It really is a fire alarm switch," he exclaimed.

A hurried telephone call to the Fire Department stopped the fire reels on their way out of the Fire Hall.—C.P.K.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY SEED GROWERS

Plans Completed For Opening Of Seed Cleaning Plant In City

LONG-FELT NEED

At the annual meeting of Peterborough and District Seed Growers' Association held in the offices of the Department of Agriculture on Thursday night, final arrangements were completed for the early establishment here of a seed cleaning plant.

Fulfilling a long-felt need among the farmers of the district, the equipment is to be installed in the old Houedry Pea Mill east of George Street alongside the C.N.R. tracks in the vicinity of the Children's Shelter. The order for the equipment was placed to-day.

President Howard Quinn intimated to a reporter that the machinery will be operated for the members of the Association under private ownership. Part of the cost of installation, which will be around the thousand dollar mark, will be borne by farmers of the district who will take it out again by way of seed cleaning.

J. D. McLeod of the Seeds Branch Ontario Department of Agriculture, addressed the meeting, and speaking of the importance of clean seed, said there are approximately seventy seed-cleaning machines in operation in Ontario at the present time.

The equipment which will consist of a power cleaner, scutcher, cleaner and grader, will be used for preparing malting barley, different kinds of clover and timothy and for the cleaning and grading of seed grain.

It was announced that any farmer in the district who patronizes the new cleaning plant to be established within the next three weeks, will receive free membership in the Association for one year.

Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

Honorary president, J. J. Duffus, M.P.; president, Howard Quinn; vice-president, Robert Armstrong, Cavan; secretary-treasurer, Gordon Hancock, Smith Township; directors—Smith Township, C. E. Moore and Albert Armstrong; Cavan, Fred McIndoo and C. Seymour; North Monaghan, Willard Waterman and Fred Campbell; South Monaghan, Harold Bebee and W. C. Dawson; Douro, B. Campbell and Ralph Garbutt; Asphodel, James Humphries and William Heffernan; Otonabee, Alex. Huston, R. E. Drummond, and E. O'Toole; Ennismore, James Gifford and Ralph Hanbidge; Emily, Harry Jackson; Dummer, James Hawthorne; Harvey, J. L. Elliott; Belmont, W. J. Barrie.

RELIEF SCHEDULE SEEMS VERY FAIR ALDERMAN STATES

Peterborough's Maximum Set At $99,750—Government To Pay Part

BELOW LAST YEAR

"The Government's new schedule of monthly relief contributions for 1937 seems very fair," Alderman Dutton, chairman of the relief committee, commented to The Examiner to-day.

"I haven't had a chance to go into the figures yet. Apparently there is some reduction, but I think we will be able to take care of the difference."

A letter received at the City Clerk's office, confirming a morning news despatch from Toronto, allots to Peterborough a maximum of $99,750 for this year, of which the government will pay 75 per cent.

$166,933 Total in 1936

The total cost of unemployment relief in Peterborough last year was $166,933.86, including salaries and medical charges to which government assistance does not apply.

The government's contribution last year was $98,522.76, and the remainder, $68,411.10, was paid out of the city treasury.

Hon. D. A. Croll's letter announcing that the Province, with the help of a grant from the Dominion government, will pay 75 per cent. of a maximum relief bill here this year, means apparently that its estimated payment will not be more than $75,000, which is practically 75 per cent. of the fixed maximum of $99,750.

A basis of comparison, therefore, seems to be afforded by comparing the actual payment of $98,522.76 with $75,000.

Change in Policy

It may be recalled that last year the government paid 75 per cent. of the actual disbursements for relief during the first three months. In April it adopted the maximum basis, agreeing to pay 75 per cent. of a maximum amount which the government determined.

The lowest monthly maximum last year was $6,900, and the monthly maxima range up to around $9,000. If relief costs exceeded these sums the government would not make any contribution on the excess; but if the cost was less, then the contribution was 75 per cent. of the actual expenditure.

Last October the maximum was $8,000 and the disbursement in relief that month was $7,712.89. But, in the following month the government made up the slight resulting difference in its allowance by paying some $60 more than the maximum provided for.

Second Reduction

A further cut of 7½ per cent. was decided upon by the government beginning last May, and the whole trend of assistance from the two government has been downward.

Hon. Mr. Croll declares that the scale of relief must not be reduced, but that local committees should comb the relief lists more thoroughly to exclude those who for one reason or another are not entitled to relief.

And one of those reasons is the ability to work, and the personal obligation of rustling around and getting employment.

BABY SWALLOWS OPEN SAFETY PIN

Nine-Months Old Baby Swallows Pin While Playing On Floor

Sandia Shaw, little nine-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shaw, 134 Dublin street, is today cooing happily and playing contentedly with her toes unaware that she had a very narrow escape from death this week.

On Tuesday she was playing on the floor and her mother heard her gag suddenly. With the instinctive and instantaneous fear of a mother in such a situation, Mrs. Shaw searched frantically for a safety pin which had been lying near the baby and found it missing.

Little Sandia was rushed to Nicholls hospital and X-ray plates confirmed the mother's fear. The safety pin was far down in the child's esophagus, on the way to the stomach. And the pin was open.

Endless hours of tense suspense followed. Yesterday the emergency passed when the pin was eliminated through natural processes. Fortunately the pin was a small one. If it had been a large one, the story might have been different.

Dr. H. M. Yelland was the attending doctor.

In a ruling handed down by Chief Justice Rose of the Supreme Court of Ontario, the cancellation of power contracts with the Beauharnois Light, Heat & Power Co. by the Ontario Hydro Commission was declared invalid and subsequently awarded the Quebec firm damages amounting to $373,750. The Ontario government in 1935 passed legislation under the Power Commission Act a section which declared invalid the 1929 power contracts entered into by a previous administration.

BOY HIT ON NOSE BY PELLET FIRED FROM AIR RIFLE

Police Investigate And Find Shot Was Fired By 17-Year-Old Youths

WARNING TO PARENTS

Struck on the nose by a pellet from an air rifle as he was walking in a laneway between houses on Romaine Street, an 11-year-old boy escaped serious injury.

The incident, however, stresses the danger of air guns, sling shots, and catapults, and is the subject of a stern warning from Chief Constable Samuel Newhall.

Chief Newhall declared that an investigation by an officer of his department disclosed that the pellet which struck the lad on the nose was fired from an air rifle in the hands of two 17-year-old youths who discharged the air gun from the back verandah of a Romaine Street house.

Stating that he has not yet decided whether or not to lay charges against the youths under the city by-law which prohibits the use of any firearms, air guns, sling shots, or catapults within the city, the Chief remarked he feels strongly inclined to do so.

"Parents should know better than to permit their children to use air guns, sling shots, and catapults," he said. Stressing the danger of promiscuous shooting within the city, he recalled that some years ago a girl was killed in the neighborhood of Murray Street when she was accidentally struck in the neck by the pellet from an air rifle.

"This is the season of the year when sling shots and such weapons are likely to make their appearance, but I wish this incident to serve as a warning that this sort of thing is not going to be tolerated. Prosecutions will have to be made if the nuisance cannot be stopped by warnings,' the Chief stated.

BODY OF YOUTH FROM OTONABEE FOUND MANGLED

Indian River Boy Returns To His Home After Brother Killed

IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Mourning the loss of his 20-year-old brother who was mangled by a Canadian National train while they were dozing by the rails on the right-of-way 50 miles west of Sudbury last week, Gordon Heath, 15, returned to Peterborough on his way to his father's home at Indian River yesterday. The Heath family lived until recent removal on Princess Street in this city, and Gordon Heath attended King Edward School.

The pair were making their way to Allandale to visit their mother, and were walking the tracks to Foleyet where they intended to catch a freight train. They lay down by the side of the tracks when night fell, and, waking up later, Gordon missed his brother. He walked a short distance down the tracks and found Edward's mangled body.

CYCLIST IS HURT STRUCK BY CAR

Guido Mattuci Fractures Small Bone In Right Foot—Taken To Hospital

Struck from his bicycle by a motor car as he was riding east on Hunter street on Thursday afternoon Guido Mattuci, 590 Chamberlain street sustained injury necessitating his removal to St. Joseph's Hospital.

It was reported that X-ray examination disclosed that Mattuci suffered the fracture of a small bone in his right foot. His cycle damaged as a result of the accident was removed to the police station by David Ferguson, 177 Sherbrooke street and Charles Holland, Hunter street east.

Donald Clarke, 92 Douro street alleged driver of the car involved reported to city police he was proceeding in the same direction as the cyclist at a speed of about 15-miles-an-hour and when fifty feet east of Queen street struck Mattuci who was riding his machine 8-feet from the south curb.

Attributing the accident to poor visibility and claiming that it was raining at the time, Clarke further reported that he picked-up the injured cyclist and conveyed him to Dr. W. S. Fitzpatrick's surgery.

WHO WOULD PAY FOR CIVIC DINNER?

Decision Of Dinner To Senator Fallis Rests With City Council

An enquiry today by a reader of The Examiner as to who would pay for the banquet to Senator Fallis which was proposed by Alderman Gordon at the council meeting Monday night was mentioned to Mayor Macdonald by a reporter this afternoon.

"I don't know what the council intends to do." His Worship replied. "That decision rests with the members of course, but I suppose it will be in the ordinary way. The only civic dinner that I recall over a considerable period was given by the council, as representing the citizens generally, to Premier M. F. Hepburn when he came here last August to open the Exhibition. That was entirely according to precedent in honor of the Premier of the province on his first visit to Peterborough.

There have been other dinners to the Lieutenant-Governor, Colonel the Honorable H. A. Bruce, to Senator O'Connor, to ex-Mayor Denne and R. M. Glover, but they did not cost the city anything. I hope the ratepayers do not think that these affairs have in any way been an expense to them. The exception was the dinner to Premier Hepburn. The Lieutenant-Governor was the guest of The Examiner as were the visiting editors and other guests. That dinner was arranged by Mr. Giffen. The dinners to Senator O'Connor, Mr. Denne and Mr. Glover were managed by a committee of citizens who took charge of the details and costs. The men who attended bought their own tickets."

Group Hospitalization Plan Has Had Phenomenal Growth

Dr. Harvey Agnew Outlines Plan To The Kiwanis Club At Weekly Luncheon

125,000 N.Y. MEMBERS

"One out of every fifteen of us spend time in the hospital each year," Dr. Harvey Agnew of the Department of Hospitalization, Canadian Medical Association, told the Kiwanis Club as he explained group hospitalization in an address at noon to-day. Group hospitalization plans are now in effect of scores of American and Canadian centres, citizens lightening the individual costs of sickness through group contribution, he said.

"Much is seen in the press about the New York three-cents-a-day plan," he said. "Its growth has been phenomenal. In 16 months, 125,000 members have been enrolled. In the last four or five years the project has spread like wildfire over the continent, particularly in the United States, which now has 100 centres. There are thirty plans in operation in Canada and they are meeting with increasing favor."

He defined group hospitalization as "a plan by which groups of individuals make regular periodic payments to a common fund, in return for which subscription such individuals (and often their dependents) receive free hospitalization for a specified period in one or more designated hospitals."

Periods Shortened.

"The cost of sickness is high and yet never in the history of the care of sickness has the patient received as much for his money as in present-day hospitals, Dr. Agnew continued. Lives were now being saved which would not have been saved in an earlier day. Periods of hospitalization were being shortened by a speeding up of medical and surgical remedies.

"Still the cost is high and if we can not reduce the costs in total we can take the sting out of that cost by spreading it over a group," he said. He said most plans cover employment groups, although any type of group can be covered. The most common rate of contribution is around 75 cents a month or $9 a year, the rates depending on the number of days per year in hospital allowed and other benefits. Provision of free hospitalization for an individual for 21 or 28 days of the year covers 95 per cent of all illnesses, he stated.

Dr. Agnew was introduced to the club by Dr. F. C. Neal and Dr. Charles Scott voiced a motion of thanks. Mayor George A. Macdonald, several members of the City Council and representatives of the local medical fraternity were guests of the club on the occasion.

For Saturday, January 16

ACCORDING to the lunar and mutual aspects of the major planets, this may prove to be a day of surprising developments, with affairs moving under high pressure and excitement. Sudden circumstances may be precipitated, calling for calmness and control. Make changes, removals and journeys with wise deliberation. The illness or anxiety of an elder may be at the root of impetuous moves.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of sudden and surprising developments, resulting in hastily-devised plans and decisions. These might prove regrettable unless managed with calmness and self-control. Benefits should follow wisely-managed situations. A bereavement or the illness of an elderly person may inspire such sudden activities.

A child born on this day may be kindly and gentle as well as gracious, but he may be inclined to melancholy or erratic conduct at times, unless given a buoyant and optimistic outlook on life. It may shun the multitude, loving solitude, introspection and unusual studies.

JOHN A. SMITH NEW PRESIDENT FLOWER LOVERS

Peterborough Horticultural Society Holds Its 43rd Annual Meeting

HAVE SOCIAL AFFAIRS

John A. Smith was elected president of the Peterborough Horticultural Society at its 43rd annual meeting in the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night. He succeeds S. T. Harris who has borne the leadership of the society during the last three years, one of the most difficult periods in its long and useful service to civic beauty.

Accompanying Mr. Harris into well earned retirement from office, W. G. P. Benton asked to be relieved of the duties of secretary-treasurer, and William C. Wilks was elected in his place.

The society expressed its appreciation of the faithful work of these two officers who together during the last three years have shared a large part of the responsibility of surmounting the obstacles of the depression.

H. H. Graham and William Turnbull were elected vice-presidents; Rev. W. P. Robertson was chosen a director for one year, succeeding the Rev. C. D. Daniel; and five directors were elected for two years, J. Mathews, Chamberlain street, Don Jordan, Fred Dummitt, George East and Fred Dainton.

Mr. Smith and Mr. Wolks were chairman and secretary, respectively, of the flower show committee last year and succeeded so well, attracting 372 exhibits, that they were urged to take over the work so effectively performed by Mr. Harris and Mr. George Benton, Jr.

Important Society

Mr. Smith asked for the hearty support of all the members in an endeavour to take advantage of returning prosperity to enlist a larger number of citizens as members for the continuing beautification of Peterborough. He had read recently in the Examiner a reference to the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society thirty years ago when the late Magistrate D. W. Dumble was elected president. The item from days gone by was a reminder of the contribution of the society to Peterborough and its citizens through all those years, and should be an encouragement for the accomplishment of even better things in the present.

It was also mentioned that Hrrry Beal was secretary of the association with Mr. Dumble, and was president the next year or thereabouts. W. H. Young said it was twenty-seven years ago, for it was the year Mr. Young joined the society.

Mr. Beal said Magistrate Dumble had been an active president, greatly interested in improving the city's appearance and its parks during the time that the Horticultural Society was the custodian of the parks, receiving a grant from the council for their maintenance.

Have Social Affairs

Mr. Smith paid a tribute to the women who are members. They assist to a large extent in the society's general program, hold garden parties in the summer, and social affairs during the winter, thereby enabling members to become better acquainted and to continue their interest while the snow covers the lawns and gardens.

Joseph S. Bell's energetic direction of the beautification committee last year was particularly mentioned, and all the other chairmen received votes of thanks for their co-operation. Mr. Bell's committee planted 30 walnut, beech and butternut trees along the scenic drive in the city.

The junior branch of which F. H. Dearborn was chairman last year distributed a large number of packages of seeds, and was in a position to report a season of progress. Thanks were also extended to Frank Biddle for judging the lawns and gardens in the society's annual competition.

Have Credit Balance

Mr. Benton's financial statement showed a credit balance of $66.68 after the expenses of the flower show, lawn and garden competition, and the cost of trees and seeds were paid.

Committees will be reorganized for this year in the near future, and the members were confident that 1937 would place the Society on a stronger footing than ever.

Wanted for immediate delivery 1,000,000,000 tons of snow, size, shape and color not essential, but must be of the dry, cold variety. And it looks very much as if we were going to get it at last. At the present time all ski meets in Ontario have been cancelled and the number of skiers in various centres waiting for an announcement of snow in any locality should start a rush to that city. If we have snow for the week-end of our Winter Sports Carnival there is no doubt now that skiers from every section of the country will be present.

A letter from Angus McKenzie and Jacque Fache, famous jumpers, now with the R.C.A.F. in Trenton, states that at least twenty fliers will be up for the ski meet January 30. The winter sports committee is working night and day organizing various groups to look after this, and that, and it is up to the individual members of the club to lend their support to this great community venture which will advertise Peterborough all over the Dominion as a splendid winter sport centre as well as a summer playground. If this snow keeps up it is likely we will have a run this week-end. Notification will appear in tomorrow's (Saturday) paper, but in case the snow drops off, though it remains cold, we will then organize a club skating party on Chemong Lake Sunday afternoon, so bring a lunch and a sail if you can. (Think of all the snow you threw away in snowballs).

C.G.E. Soccer Club Ask Toronto Entry

(Toronto Star)

Keenly interested in the activities of the Toronto and District Senior Soccer Leagues, the Canadian General Electric soccer club of Peterborough has applied to the local association for a membership in these leagues during the coming season. After noting the brilliant race the clubs staged last year for the championship, and lacking the same opportunity in their own vicinity, the C.G.E. club, which, according to reports, is a fairly strong outfit, would like to make a bid this season for those same honors.

The C.G.E. application outlines their idea of how the matter could be arranged. They would play under a similar schedule as that used by the National Soccer League with the Hamilton clubs, counting four points for each game, and playing a single schedule, while the other clubs played a double one.

Unfortunately, the distance from Toronto to Peterborough, some 88-odd miles, is likely to prove the stumbling-block to the Peterborough club's ambitions. The application will be taken up at the annual general meeting of the leagues, when, no doubt, it will be pointed out that Toronto clubs, with the players working up to 1 p.m. on Saturdays, would have difficulty in making the trip in time, and then there is the matter of expenses, which, with the collections on the public parks as low as they were last season, would provide another obstacle.

It would be nice to see inter-city rivalry between the Senior Leagues and the Peterborough club, and maybe, failing arrangements to include the C.G.E. team in the league the Senior Leagues could send a selected team to Peterborough to give the boys some competition.

Kingston Scribe . . . . Describes Fliers

(Whig-Standard)

Trenton's R.C.A.F. team, winners of the George VanHorne Memorial Cup series, are all pepped up for their debut in the O.H.A., to be staged at Belleville tonight and they ought to be as powerful there as they were through most of the VanHorne series. They were mighty good most of the way in the VanHorne series, but certainly not as outstanding as the Belleville Ontario - Intelligencer sports writer would lead you to believe when he says that they "won the VanHorne series with comparative ease." Considering the fact that the Belleville pencil-shover has yet to see the Airmen play, his comments are certainly refreshing, even if not original. As a matter of fact the Airmen were given a tough run in the finals, losing the first game and having to battle hard to win the title from the team that played every night for eight nights.

Of course the Fliers may get some opposition from Belleville, that is, if the latter don't drop out before the season is half over, as they did in the VanHorne series. On paper Belleville don't appear to have a chance against the R.C.A.F. Those McNeeley lads, Cowley, Lowrey, Wingate and Partridge can certainly travel fast, and that gentle hombre on defence, Lalonde, can use his weight in a manner that ought to shiver the rafters in the Belleville rink.

17. THE SQUAT—INCORRECT

The squat position as illustrated above is too deep a posture for skiing, giving too little elasticity. The squat requires knee and hip joints to be bent as far as they will go, and the resulting posture is much too low to admit of the necessary springy "give" upwards and downwards when the ground is uneven. In addition the field of stability, which govern balance is too small, as the posterior is too low. Fatigue sets in easily and the body and joints become cramped.

Every movement on skis requires a certain amount of action by the joints and the joints must be bent more or less to enable the work of the muscles to be immediately transformed into movement. If however the joints are strained to their extreme bending position, the strain must first be removed before they can be called into action.

In other words they must first be returned to a state of medium, controlled, bend so that the force necessary to movement can become effective. This requires the expenditure of time and energy instead of the instantaneous response of muscle and joint which is imperative to easy and enjoyable skiing.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

(C.J.P.)

NO HOCKEY here tonight. On account of a heavy "California dew" which has been pouring down in sheets and blankets the past several days. The Trenton Fliers were not permitted to fly here in their amphibian planes, and the Petes aren't water-proof either. Ditto the fans. So one more O.H.A. postponement will be chalked up on the wall. Best excuse we've heard yet was that of Eddie Thomas, Belleville manager, who declined to play a postponed intermediate tilt in Peterborough last Monday as he wished to remain at home for the junior game that night. It's a celluloid cinch that our Colts and Petes in future will take great pleasure in beating the pants off Czar Thomas' two outfits.

* * * * * * *

LET US look over the O.H.A. schedules for next week. Our Colts have one game on the road and none at home. Belleville Juniors are here on Monday night while the locals go back to Tweed on Wednesday. The Quinte kids are slated to meet Tweed tonight in Belleville. The intermediate Petes travel Tuesday to tackle the Fliers; while Belleville is in Trenton the next day. Next Friday sees Trenton at Peterborough and the Fliers in Belleville. Our postponed game with Belleville here will not be till the 26th.

ENCLOSED IN a heavy black border, this item appeared the other day in the Belleville paper: "DIED—Senior Baseball—in Belleville on January 12th, 1937. Senior baseball in the C.O.B.L., after a lengthy illness caused principally by indifference. R.I.P." A sad death notice, though a bit unseasonable. 'Cause wasn't it pretty dead the last half of last summer? And especially for the final two defaulted games? However, we imagine someone will take over the task again of rebuilding baseball in Belleville—long a mainstay in the Central League, and producer of many league and Ontario senior titles. Our own future is somewhat uncertain at present, but things generally iron themselves out in due course.

EFFORTS ARE being made to organize a Boy Scout Hockey League here. We understand there are about 10 local Troops, and about six teams would be okay, playing at the Sacred Heart or All Saints' rinks. No entry fee but those wishing entry should notify Ernie Wolff by this Sunday at the latest. Phone 700 or, if on Saturday, 3044M. Play will start shortly. This sounds like a good loop for the "good deed a day" lads, who number up to 40 to a Troop. Hockey officers for the scouts are: E. Wolff, E. Creighton, R. Baldwin, G. Houghton, L. Tomkins, W. Anderson and S. Leggitt.

* * * * * * *

SENIOR CITY Hockey League games last night were washed out, and these postponed tussles will be arranged for later. Meantime, the loop will continue on according to schedule. Next games will not be till next Thursday at the Brock, Millbrook playing Westclox at seven, Lakefield and Outboard Marines clashing at eight, and Bewdley battling Mayfairs at nine. Protest Committee should not wait too long to settle Bewdley's protest of Buster Whitton of Lakefield. He played O.H.A. this year, but whether or not he can still be considered an O.H.A. player at the present time is the main problem for the officers to decide. Some argue that if he got his release from O.H.A. before playing City League, he is okay. Others say no. At least, we imagine the burden of proof as to him obtaining his release would lie with the Lakefield Club.

OUR SYMPATHY goes out to the two active Lindsay athletes who are also sports writers. Not only must they play a tough grid or hockey game, but they must then head for the workshop and pound out the dope on a typewriter, letting rubdowns, cuts, sleep and aching muscles wait. Also they may star during the game but naturally may not write themselves up as starring We'd suggest a working agreement whereby each boosts the other in his column. In a tilt there the other day, Ford Loucks of the Warder wrote: "While we seldom shatter our dignity to the extent of commending him for his literary gems"—meaning his rival scribe—"it becomes our painful duty to laud him for two goals tallied last night." And Leo Begley of the Post says: "Loucks, he of the writing fraternity, played a heads-up game and was particularly efficient in back-checking." It must be quite a strain.

LAST NIGHT'S Church Puck Loop games were called off, leaving the league eight tilts behind. No tussles tonight, either. Monday eve sees Park St. Bantams play George St. at six, All Saints vs. Mark St. Bantams at seven, Trinity Juveniles against Mark St. at eight, and the January 8th postponed Murray St.-St. George's senior scrap at nine. It may yet be necessary to shorten the bantam schedule to a single half. Prexy Lloyd Parnall is the only casualty to date in 13 games played, he having strained a leg ligament Monday. The league standings are in tonight.

A CHAP called up to inform us of the death yesterday of Charlie Hills, who handled the C.C.F. soccer team in the local league the last part of last season. "He was a popular soccer enthusiast and liked by everyone," this fellow stated, "and he'd fight for his team on the field or at meetings." The funeral will be Saturday and no doubt many soccer officials, players and followers will attend. Speaking of soccer, there is an item in today, taken from the Star, about the local C.G.E. club applying for entry in the Toronto Senior Soccer League.

Text of Speech From Throne

Following is the text of the Speech from the Throne, read in the Senate yesterday by Governor-General Lord Tweedsmuir at the opening of Parliament:

Honorable Members of the Senate:
Members of the House of Commons:

It affords me much pleasure to meet you at the commencement of another session of Parliament.

The people of Canada, in common with the peoples of the other parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations, learned with deep concern of the decision of His Majesty King Edward the Eighth to renounce the throne for himself and his descendants. In accordance with the statute of Westminster, steps were immediately taken to set forth the results and consent of Canada to the enactment of legislation by the Parliament at Westminster for the purpose of giving effect to His Majesty's instrument of abdication and providing for the succession to the throne. In accordance with the same statute, the assent of the Parliament of Canada will be sought to the alteration in the law touching the succession.

Resolution of Loyalty.

You will be invited to adopt a resolution expressive of the loyalty of the members of both Houses of Parliament to His Majesty King George the Sixth.

His Majesty has been graciously pleased to set the twelfth of May as the date for his coronation. Provision will be recommended for the appropriate representation of Canada at the coronation ceremonies.

An Imperial conference will be held in London, beginning in May of this year, for the consideration of questions of interest to the various members of the British Commonwealth.

The International situation continues to give much ground for anxiety. The September assembly of the League of Nations gave earnest consideration to the bearing of recent developments upon the activities of the League, and a committee was appointed, on which Canada is represented, to consider the question of the application of the principles of the covenant.

Happily, International relations on this continent, and conditions in Canada, present a striking contrast to those of many other countries.

The visit of the President of the United States to Canada in July last year was a much-appreciated expression of international friendliness and good-will.

Year of Improvement

The year just closed has witnessed a steady improvement in conditions throughout Canada, and has borne testimony to the beneficial effects of the fiscal policies of the administration, and of other methods employed to achieve national recovery.

A very definite restoration of confidence is in itself an augury of the continuance of recovery.

A marked increase in trade and commerce has been accompanied by a noticeable improvement in the general economic position. Outstanding features of this improvement have been an expansion of markets, revival of industry, an increase in employment, ascending government revenues, and upward trends in wages and prices. In the primary industries improvement has been especially noteworthy.

There has been a pronounced increase in the volume of farm products exported. It is the intention of the government to continue a vigorous promotion of the sale of agricultural products at home and abroad.

The government's efforts to expand Canada's trade have been unremitting. Since the last session of Parliament ministers of the Crown have visited Great Britain and other countries, to participate personally in the negotiation of trade agreements. At the present time, the Minister of Trade and Commerce is on the way to Australia and New Zealand to discuss the revision of existing agreements.

New Pact With Britain

You will be pleased to learn that an agreement in principle has been reached between His Majesty's governments in the United Kingdom and Canada with respect to a new trade agreement. The agreement itself will be submitted for your approval during the present session.

With the assistance and co-operation of the National Employment Commission, progress has been made in coping with unemployment and relief. Relief camps were closed on July 1. A registration of unemployed persons on relief has been completed. Dominion-Provincial agreements have been entered into respecting a farm employment plan, under the terms of which work has been provided for thousands of single homeless men. A home improvement plan has been put into operation. Despite these measures, however, and the substantial increase of employment, the provision for large numbers still on relief remains a foremost problem.

Work For Jobless Youth.

Measures will be taken, in co-operation with the Provinces, to assist in the establishment of unemployed young people.

A comprehensive program to meet the serious conditions created by widespread and intense drought in Western Canada was adopted during the summer months.

The amalgamation and consolidation of certain branches of the public service, for which provision was made at the last session, have been effected. The Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the board of directors of the Canadian National Railways have been appointed and have entered upon their duties. Through the purchase of stock and the appointment of directors, authorized by Parliament, the Government has assumed a predominant interest in the ownership, and an effective control of the Bank of Canada.

Measures will be introduced to provide for the establishment of a Trans-Canada air service; to extend the authority of the Board of Railway Commissioners, and to revise the capital structure of the Canadian National Railways. Among other proposed legislative enactments to which your attention will be invited, will be Bills to facilitate the making of loans for the repair and improvement of rural and urban homes; to amend and consolidate the Acts which relate to combines in trade and industry, and to provide for pensions to the blind at a lower age than seventy years.

Currency Payments.

A measure will also be submitted with respect to the discharge, in any coin or currency which is legal tender, of debt payments at present required to be made in gold or gold coin.

Members of the House of Commons:

The public accounts of the last fiscal year and the estimates for the coming year will be submitted for your consideration.

Honorable Members of the Senate:
Members of the House of Commons:

In again inviting your careful consideration of the important matters which will engage your attention, I pray that Divine Providence may guide and bless your deliberations.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN S.S. OFFICERS

Executive Of Sunday School Holds Meeting To Effect Appointments

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 15.—A meeting of the Sunday school executive was held Tuesday night at the United Church. Rev. S. A. Kemp opened the meeting with prayer. The Sunday School superintendent, R. W. Umphrey, took the chair. Mrs. Thomas J. Brown supplied as secretary and read the report of the executive meeting held in December when a number of new officers and teachers were appointed since which time another change has been made which was the purpose of this meeting.

Miss Ruth Glenn was appointed as teacher for Class No. 4 to succeed Mrs. H. B. Wood, with Mrs. Harold Brown and Mrs. Thomas J. Brown as assistants. The assistant to Miss Phyllis Brown's class (No. 3) to be Miss Leatha Davidson. Miss B. French resigned as pianist; Miss Betty Ormiston was appointed in her place, with assistants, Miss Margaret Brown, Mrs. Harold Brown and Mrs. Bert Robson. It was decided to organize a Sunday school choir, and a special number to be given by them each Sunday. Considerable discussion was taken up regarding the time for opening Sunday school. It was decided to change the hour from half-past one to a quarter to two o'clock for the time being, with church service to begin at a quarter to three o'clock. Miss Margaret Brown was appointed assistant secretary-treasurer, with Lyle Lewis as secretary-treasurer. Rev. Mr. Kemp suggested having the Robert Raikes' attendance certificates procured for the Sunday school; this method is to be adopted.

CAMPBELLFORD

SAYS "CONTROL" IS ONLY A MISNOMER

Dr. Coburn Advises Campbellford Audience To Vote Against Liquor Store

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 15. — A crowd which nearly filled the High School Auditorium listened with careful attention to Dr. John Coburn, Toronto, speak on the temperance question which will be decided when the electors go to the polls here on February 8.

"The words 'Government Control' are a misnomer," stated the speaker. "It only controls the liquor while it is in the bottle, but it is when it leaves the bottle that the damage is done."

Arguing that the greatest interests of the town were moral and spiritual rather than business, the speaker drew attention to the fact that if a liquor store were established in the town it would no doubt be the cause of some boys and girls starting to drink. He thus urged the citizens to weigh well their responsibility before they gave assent to the L.C.A.

Won't Eliminate Bootlegger.

"The repeal of the Temperance Act will not eliminate the bootlegger," he continued. "While under prohibition the bootlegger has two difficulties to overcome— first to obtain the liquor and second to sell it. Under the Liquor Control Act he has only the difficulty of selling, as it is much more easy to buy."

Continuing, Dr. Coburn pointed out that those engaged in the illegal sale of liquor had a further advantage over the liquor stores in that they could dilute the liquor and thus undersell them. Saying that it was not the drunk driver that did the damage on the highways, but rather the one who had but one or two drinks, the speaker declared that liquor was a menace to the highways.

Mr. Ruthven MacDonald, vocalist of Toronto, entertained with a number of songs, and opened the meeting by leading in community singing. He was accompanied by Arnold Batee. Richard Weston occupied the chair.

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

The main event for next week is our open bonspiel for the W. G. Morrow Trophy.

Notices have been sent out, and already entries have been received from Oshawa, Lindsay, and Millbrook.

Play commences sharp at 9 a.m. on Tuesday, and all entries must be in by 8.30 on Monday night. This will enable the committee to make the draw on Monday night and be able to start right on time next morning.

Each eam will play three 12-end games and the fee is $4.00 per rink.

Stones and brooms will be supplied by the club and splendid prizes will be given to the winners.

All that is needed to make this one of the best is, first, some real, sparkling cold weather, and second, co-operation on the part of our local members.

And once more we have to announce—no curling to-night.

About to-morrow's bonspiel — we don't know. But give us a ring at 200J, and we will be able to give a definite answer.

MAROONS PASTE CHICAGO HAWKS FOR 7-3 DRUBBING

Detroit Red Wings At Same Time Blank Rangers 2 To 0

LIVELY WEEK-END

This Saturday night's clash between Maroons and Canadiens didn't need a build-up because Montreal fans are just crazy to see it, but Maroons provided one anyway. They defeated Chicago Black Hawks 7-3 last night and moved up to within four points of the Habitants.

That provides the interesting possibility that Tommy Gorman's men will defeat Canadiens and leave only a game separating them, making the National Hockey League's Canadian division right something near an all-Montreal battle if it isn't that now.

Apart from the high-scoring affair in Montreal, last night's program provided only the Detroit Red Wings' 2-0 win over Rangers in New York to keep the fans interested until the week-end bunching of games. The victory sent Wings four points up on Lester Patrick's team at the top of the American section standing.

The Maroon-Hawk game set a record for goals scored this season. Eight goals have been scored in five different games, but no contest but last night's has provided more than that. The avalanche of Maroon counters halted the Hawk two-game winning streak at just that.

t looked close in the first period until Maroons rapped in two goals to take a 3-1 lead, one of them coming while Marty Burke, Hawk defenceman, was serving a penalty. Jerry Shannon had scored for the Montrealers in the first minute of the game and Larochelle had evened it up four minutes later.

Hawks' Hand Forced.

But when Dave Trottier and Herb Cain gave Tommy Gorman's team the edge, Hawks had to open things up and leave Mike Karakas in the Hawk net, with little protection.

Trottier scored the only goal of the second period and Jimmy Ward, Baldy Northcott and Gus Marker made it 7-1 before Hawks finally broke through for goals by Larochelle and Glenn Brydson.

Larry Aurie and Marty Barry demonstrated in New York they can work almost as well with Johnny Sorsell filling out their trio as when Herb Lewis is playing. The left-winger was missing again through illness last night, and Aurie took a pass from Barry and scored a spectacular goal with a backhander while pivoting on one skate.

That was in the first period, and there was no more scoring until halfway through the third, when Orville Roulston gave Wally Kilrea a pass for the goal that made a Wing victory sure.

While Rangers were being beaten, the other New York team, Americans, were making efforts to strengthen their squad. Manager Red Dutton announced he has traded Deed Klein of Saskatoon to Cleveland Indians of the International-American League for Les Cunningham, a left wing. Cunningham will report in time to play for Amerks against Boston Sunday.

TRACK AND FIELD RECORDS BROKEN

Big Year In 1936 For Athletes With Fine Marks Hung Up Frequently

By DANIEL J. FERRIS
Secretary-Treasurer, Amateur Athletic Union

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP) — Man's ultimate in sport, especially in track and field where marks are measurable, still remains a matter of conjecture. The magnificent accomplishments of the past year where records were toppled with astonishing frequency demonstrated that the perfection of technique and other factors still bring forth incredible performances.

Although the same razor-edge keenness of interest which prevails in an Olympic year cannot be expected in a post-Olympic year there will be no relaxing insofar as the athletes are concerned during 1937. The improvement in the calibre of our athletes seems to be steady. New stars are developing in greater numbers today than in years gone by.

Twin Brothers

The recent performance of Wayne Rideout, of Texas, when he defeated Donald Lash, the world's two-mile record holder, in the second fastest time ever made outdoors in the United States, is a splendid illustration of how athletes develop overnight. Wayne and his brother Blaine have been competing in college meets for three or four years. Until last fall they confined their efforts to middle distance races without much success. Henceforth no two-mile race will be complete without one or both.

With Lash back in the form he displayed last June, he will be a hard man to beat at any distance from a mile to five. Other long distance stars who probably will compete indoors are Norman Bright, of the Olympic Club, San Francisco; Ray Sears, former Butler University champion who has run two-miles indoors faster than any other American; Joe McCluskey, New York Athletic Club veteran; and Floyd Lochner, of Oklahoma, former National Collegiate A.A. two-mile champion.

Americans' Dave Schriner, the defending champion, and Johny Gagnon of Canadiens, were idle and held to a division of third and fourth places with 22 points each. The leaders:

Sport Spice
By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (A.P.). — The Brooklyn directors may as well know it now as later: Van Mungo wants $15,000 to toss that horsehide this season—and not a dime less, gents....A certain New York fellow has $5,000 to bet on Bob Pastor at prevailing odds....Looks like old-age will catch up with Bitsy Grant before he gets a well-deserved chance on the Davis Cup team.

Well, well....So they're going to give Boston Bees a regular place to eat in St. Pete this spring. The hotel where the club was quartered last year had everything but a dining-room....So prexy Bob Quinn gave each player $6 per day and told him to put on the feed bag where he pleased....Most of the money went into slot machines.... This year the Bees will move into a hotel down the block.

If the anti-fight boycott goes through, Joe Jacobs will cancel Max Schmeling's southern exhibition tour....Chuck Dressen says: "The Cubs will be weaker, the Giants no better, and the rest of the league stronger."....So there you are.

Hockey clubs hold skull practice just like baseball teams....Before each New York Ranger game, Trainer Harry Westerby shoos guests out of th dressing-room....Then Coach Lester Patrick gets a players' forum going....Every man, regular and rookie, gets a chance to shoot off steam and advance ideas for the common good.

No matter who is champion of the middleweights, he'll never feel quite safe with guys like Teddy Yarosz and Fred Apostoli hanging around.

Dynamiters To Represent Canada At World Tourney

There doesn't appear to be any trace of homesickness in this collection of Canadian hockey players, pictured in Berlin before a recent game. They are the Kimberley Dynamiters, who are touring Europe and who will represent Canada in the world's ice hockey championship games this winter. The Dynamiters defeated the Berlin skating club 4-1 recently. Dynamiters also captured the Allan Cup last fall by defeating Sudbury Falcons.

D. T. ROSS TO HEAD SYNDICATE RULING LEAFS BALL CLUB

Five Others Step In To Save Franchise Going Across Border

HOWLEY MANAGING

TORONTO, Jan. 15—(CP)—Backed by a syndicate headed by a prominent sportsman - lawyer and handled by the capable Dan Howley, Toronto baseball club of the International League was launched on a new career today.

Genial Dan will toss all his lengthy experience into building up a winning team for the home town supporters, breathing easier today now that the club is not slated for transfer across the border. Donald G. Ross, member of the legal firm of Ross and Miller, led the syndicate into the battle to retain the club for Toronto. During the week-end an organization meeting will be held and Mr. Ross is expected to be chosen president of the new company.

A discussion with an associate in his office as to what the summer held for them resulted in Ross deciding to enter the baseball field. During their talk the fear was expressed there would be no baseball game to see, for at that time the Toronto club seemed destined for a United States berth.

"We arrived at a more serious discussion," Ross related, "with the result that I interested some other Toronto business men."

Howley was contacted—"and, well, we just made the deal, that's all," he described his jump into the sport. There are five men in the syndicate who purchased the franchise and other assets of the club.

Not All Business.

"And I want to make it clear that this isn't a business venture in the ordinary sense of the word," continued Ross. "We went into the thing because we didn't want to see Toronto lose its International League baseball team.'

The deal was completed yesterday with Cliff Oakley and Robert Fennell, former club heads, and a cash deposit was made. Ross, however, did not reveal the purchase price.

Dan Howley will have charge of sales, trades and will bear complete responsibility in whipping the team into shape. He plans starting on his job immediately, making a tour of major league baseball cities.

"I'll visit Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and contact both the Boston clubs," Howley said. "Out of that bunch I should get a few results for a good start."

"This Toronto club has plenty of money behind it, all a good manager needs and more," Dan continued. "We are in a position to buy young players when we want to and eventually we should be independent of the majors to a greater extent than any other class AA club."

Howley came up from the hard-fisted empire-rating brigade of ball players, leaving high school to enter pro ball 31 years ago when he signed with the Indianapolis club. He went to Grand Rapids and they won the pennant. He went back to Indianapolis, then to Utica Club which sold him to Cleveland.

He refused to report to Cleveland Indians and went to Portland, Ore., from where he made the jump into a uniform of the Philadelphia Nationals. As manager he was first with Montreal, starting in 1914, then to Boston Red Sox and later to Toronto Leafs who he guided to a pennant in his first season in 1918. He managed St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds, coming to Toronto in 1933.

KINGSTON.—George M. Kenty of North Cobalt, first year science student at Queen's University has been awarded the 1937 O.H.A. scholarship at the university. Kenty is a center player with Queen's senior international intercollegiate hockey team and has been outstanding so far this season.

Dizzy threatens to hold out again next season for a higher salary and Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cards, threatens to sell him but it is likely he'll be back on the mound for the St. Louis team.

GORMAN RESIGNS ENGLISH CLUB JOB

Not Given Free Hand He Says —Joe Smith Takes Up Job

LONDON, Jan. 15.—(CP).—Frank Gorman, son of Tommy Gorman, manager of Montreal Maroons, has resigned as coach of Earl's Court Royals, cellar team in the National League. He has been succeeded by Joe Smith, well known in Vancouver hockey circles and former scout for New York Rangers.

Gorman said he left the club because he was not given a free hand in running the team. He intends returning to Canada but hopes to come back to England next season.

Rangers, the other Earl's Court team, are having more success than Royals. They are in fourth place in the league standing and recently eliminated Wembley Lions, the leaders, from the national "knock-out" tournament in one of the biggest upsets of the English hockey season.

Without Alex Archer of Winnipeg and Eddie Murphy of Ottawa, who were injured, Lions won the first game 2-0 before 11,000 persons at Wembley pool. But in the second game Rangers took them 3-4 and won the round 6-6.

Lions, in the second battle, also were without their regular goalie, bespectacled Roy Musgrove of Winnipeg, who had just undergone a minor operation.

Buster Anandea, another Winnipeger and spare netminder for the two Wembley clubs, took Musgrove's place. Anandea starred in his first two seasons in England, but he has seen little action lately. In three games 29 goals were scored against him.

Tigers Put Out.

Another upset in the knockout tournament was the elemination of British Tigers who had just won seven consecutive league battles. In the first round of the knockout they beat Herringay Racers two games, but fell before Streatham in the next round.

Coach Don Penniston of Montreal immediately tried to strengthen Tigers by the acquisition of Frankie LeBlanc of St. John, N.B., He is still trying, but his chances of convincing Wembley Monarchs they should part with the smooth centre seem poor.

Th battle for the National Cup now lies between Earlscourt Rangers, Streatham, Manchester Rapids and Harringay Greyhounds, Rapids and Greyhounds have started their semi-final series, the Manchester team winning the first game 4-3.

The participating teams continue with their regular National League games while playing in the knock-out tournament which is sort of an added attraction, the winning team receiving a cup.

NO TEMPERMENTAL SLUGGERS WANTED RED SOX WIGWAM

Tom Yawkey After 'Big-Name' Players Makes His Point Plain

OTHER BALL DOPE

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (A.P.). — Cooling off with the Hot Stovers:

Tom Yawkey has not only quit tossing his bankroll around for big-name baseballers, but he's going to take personal pains this season to see that those already on hand forget all about "Prima Donna-itis." Word from the Red Sox wigwam tells that Boss Tom is working on a plan by which the temperamental members of his cast will learn to leave their temperament in the closet at home along with the family skeleton and last summer's straw hat.

Pittsburgh Pirates are toying with the idea of benching Woody Jensen and letting Rookie Johnnie Dickshot roam his outfield beat. Dickshot, up for his third big-league tryout this spring, packed plenty of batting punch for the Buffalo International League Bisons last year, finishing with a .335 average for the pennant winners.

If he sticks this season, it will have taken Frank McGowan, Boston Bees' slugging prospect, 17 years of roaming around the bushes to make the big time. He's had tryouts galore in that time, showing up at the Philadelphia Athletics' training camp as far back as 1922 and with St. Louis Browns in 1928, but each time he barely lasted long enough for the grapefruit league windup. Meantime, he's been doing duty in such double A organizations as Milwaukee, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Baltimore, and lately, Buffalo.

Washington Senators are sure of the baritone in their clubhouse quartette for the season. Joe Cascarella, who warbles a nifty tune, has signed up.

Col Jake Ruppert, who'd rather own his farms than have working agreements with them, may buy into the Pacific Coast loop to add another Double A outfit to his New York Yankees' chain. He has his eyes on the Oakland Oaks.

SPAIN DESCRIBED TO KINSMEN CLUB BY DR. C. V. McLEAN

Always Been a Land Greatly Sought After By The Invader

TREASURE HOUSE

Taking as his subject the land which until recently has been given very little attention by Canadians and Americans, Dr. Charles McLean of St. Andrew's United church on Thursday night addressed the Kinsmen club on Spain. It was the first dinner meeting of the year and during the evening the chair was turned over from 1936 president, Dr. Robert Nott to the new president Donald Loucks.

Dr. McLean described Spain especially that portion along the coast as a great treasure house where grain, vegetables and fruits grow in abundance and a country which has had to suffer through invasions principally on account of the desire of races to live in this treasure land.

Neolithic Spain was occupied by the Iberians the speaker said in telling of the various peoples who have occupied the land. Later on its mineral wealth attracted the attention of the metal seekers who were a branch of the Pict family which early settled in Scotland. It was about 1,100 B.C. that the Phoenicians established their first colonies in Spain and but a little later when the Greeks arrived. Both contented themselves with settlements along the coast, but it was otherwise with the Carthaginians. They extended their authority into the interior. About 300 B.C. came the Romans who named it Hispania. The Jews also when driven out of the Holy Land found refuge in Spain.

Internal Strife.

In the fifth century Roman's rule wavered and the Visgoths from the north came and for 200 years ruled the land but in the end their internal troubles caused rival kings to be set up and the Moslems or Moors invaded the land. The Moors' rule lasted about 600 years but at last Isabella and Ferdinand drove them from the land and the Jews along with them.

Then followed a great period of expansion. The people were united and Christopher Columbus discovered America sailing in vessels supplied by Isabella. Spaniards crossed the Atlantic to Peru and Mexico, the wealth from which formed an almost inexhaustible treasure house. But this power failed to last and Spain is found today a much disturbed land.

A hearty vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Ed. Riley and solos were beautifully rendered by Adam Hawley.

Ohioan Asks Compensation For Accident North of City—Probe Shows It In Canda.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 15 (CP)— An automobile salesman wrote to the State Idustrial Commission that he was injured "north of the city while demonstrating a new car." He asked compensation and his employer certified the claim.

However, Robert Nott, state supervisor of information, recommended the claim be rejected and the commission agreed with him.

"The accident occurred north of a city," Nott reported, after an investigation, "but it was north of Toronto, Canada, while the salesman and his boss were on a fishing trip."

Peace Society Fears Effect on Minds of Nations' Youngsters

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—(C.P.). — The World Peaceways Society, fearing that toy weapons will foster in youth the desire for war, has begun a drive to abolish such playthings, urging parents to substitute midget canon and revolvers with more peace provoking toys.

"Children have not been aided to understand that guns are not playthings; that they are symbols of death," says a statement issued yesterday by Miss Mary West of the society.

As a substitute for make-believe wars of children, the society offers such games as "Snach the Handkerchief," and "Fox and Geese."

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S WARM NOSE.

When Uncle Wiggily and Mr. Twistytail again came within sight of the store of Mrs. Mew all of a sudden the pig grunted:

"Fall down, Wiggy! Fall down!"

"Why should I fall down, especially in the snow?" asked the rabbit.

"Because the Bad Chaps are coming this way!" whispered the pig. "If you fell down in the snow it will partly cover you. Then I'll sit on you and——"

"Sit on me!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "What do you mean? If you, a big, fat pig, sit on me you'll squash me as flat as a pancake."

"No, I promise not to," said the pig. "But something must be done to hide you from the Bad Chaps. The snow will help hide you and I'll do the rest by sitting on you. The Bad Chaps will think I'm sitting on a stump, or something, and they'll pass by. But you'll have to hurry. Here they come!"

"Well," said Uncle Wiggily, resigned like and patient, "I know I live in a hollow stump bungalow but this is the first time I ever thought I'd have to pretend to be a stump so the Bad Chaps would be fooled. Oh, all right. Have it your way, Twisty."

Nose Almost Froze

Down Uncle Wiggily flopped in the soft, deep snow. The ear muffs, like stocking legs, the cat lady had given him kept his ears from getting cold. But his pink, twinkling nose was almost freezing in the snow.

There was no help for it, however, Mr. Twistytail sat down as gently as he could on top of Uncle Wiggily, who stretched out and was half covered by the snow.

Along came the Fox, the Wolf and the Bob Cat. They were talking of how they had hidden near the cat lady's store to catch Uncle Wiggily when he came out.

"But he never came out," said the Fox.

"Mr. Twistytail came out but not Mr. Longears," said the Wolf.

"There was some animal with the pig," mewed the bad Bob Cat, "but it wasn't Uncle Wiggily. This animal didn't have any long ears."

Uncle Wiggily hearing this and knowing how he had fooled the Bad Chaps, laughed so hard in the snow he almost jiggled off the pig who was sitting on him to hide him.

But Mr. Twistytail kept his place. The Bad Chaps looked sharply at him as they passed but they didn't see the rabbit beneath him.

"We're looking for Uncle Wiggily!" growled the Wolf.

"Oh, are you?" grunted the pig, casual like and non-committal.

"I don't s'pose you've seen him, have you?" asked the Fox.

Couldn't See Him

"I don't see him now, that's sure," grunted Mr. Twistytail. And that was true. Though he was sitting on Uncle Wiggily he couldn't see him. For I'll tell you a secret, the pig closed his eyes.

So the Bad Chaps passed on and then Mr. Twistytail arose and Mr. Longears got up out of the snow, his poor nose colder than ever.

"Oh, what shall I do to get it warm?" he cried.

"Maybe the cat lady has some nose muffs," said the pig.

So they went to the store of Mrs. Mew. Uncle Wiggily paid her for the ear muffs, which he had forgotten to do, and then Mrs. Mew said:

"I'll warm your cold nose for you. I'll do as they do in Russia or at the North Pole." Quickly she caught up a pawful of snow. She rubbed this snow on Uncle Wiggily's cold nose and in a moment, as truly as I'm telling you, his nose was as warm as toast. You try it some time when your nose is cold. So that's how it happened.

And if the garage will jump over the back fence and turn into a play house for the clothes posts. I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the spots.

How to Relieve Head Noises.

If you suffer from head noises, roaring and hissing in the ears, the chances are that they are caused by catarrh. Catarrh is a condition to which people generally give little thought but it can do a lot of damage if treatment is neglected. Loss of taste and smell and a lazy, let-down feeling often result when the seriousness of catarrh is not known. Sometimes the hearing becomes impaired to such an extent there is partial deafness. The ears have a full, stuffy feeling in the morning when you awake. These are symptoms you should watch for and take immediate steps to correct.

For this purpose secure from your druggist a bottle of Parmint Concentrate (double strength) which is an old reliable English formula. One ounce of this concentrate will make 8 ounces of medicine by adding a little sugar and water.

Parmint Concentrate is a convenient home treatment for those symptoms which lead to catarrhal deafness and head noises and should be used by everyone who has this trouble. Any druggist can supply Parmint Concentrate and you can easily add sugar and water to make a big bottle of the medicine. It is a fine preparation and is widely used by our English cousins. If you have any symptoms of catarrh, don't run the risk of letting it become so deep seated that you may become totally or partly deaf.

C.C.F. CHIEFTAIN STARTS DEBATE

The motion set down for today, waiving the regulation 48 hours notice, was "another attempt to deprive members of their right to express themselves fully," Mr. Woodsworth declared. He did not press his objection but declared he would discuss the matter in the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Statment to Come Later.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House the government's correspondence on Edward's abdication would not be tabled. He was adopting the attitude already taken by the British government and some of the Dominions. He would, however, make a statement later and would endeavor to satisfy questioners, he said. Lord Tweedsmuir, presiding for the second time at the opening of Parliament, read a throne speech that was brief but meaty. Outstanding among the legislative proposals were:

Ratification of an Anglo-Canadian trade agreement now agreed in principle, pensions for the blind, measures to assist in the establishment of unemployed youth, legislation for a trans-Canada air service, revision of the capital structure of the Canadian National Railways, home-repair loans, amendments to the Combines Investigation Act and removal of the gold clause from public and private bonds and debentures.

Today's proceedings will probably be short. A great number of returns and reports will be tabled and Prime Minister Mackenzie King will lead in tributes to members who died during the recess. The main discussion will be on the message of loyalty to His Majesty and to this it is expected Rt. Hon. Sir George Perley, acting leader of the official opposition, J. H. Blackmore, leader of the Social Credit group, and Mr. Woodsworth will lend support.

Opposition leader Bennett will arrive home from his empire tour over the week-end and is expected to be in his seat when the House resumes Monday. The address in reply to the speech from the throne will be moved Monday by Norman McLarty (Lib. Essex West), and seconded by Dr. P. X. Veniot, (Lib. Gloucester).

with the government in reducing relief lists, they will continue to receive help on the 75 per cent basis, said Mr. Croll.

Rate Highest in History

"That rate, the highest in relief history, stands for the present," he declared. "We cannot be more definite than that because we have no way of knowing what treatment we will receive from the Federal government. They've announced 'progressive reduction' in their grant-in-aid. We have to reserve the right to reconsider our basis of help to municiplities."

Mr. Croll's letter to the municipalities has a note of warning. It is: "It must be realized governmental assistance is contingent upon maintenance of adequate relief stndards in your municipality. If those standards are educed, hen the govenment will take such action, under the terms of the unemployment relief act, as it deems appropriate."

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Jan. 15.—The first meeting in the new year of the Women's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. A. Nichol.

The new president, Mrs. L. W. Scott, presided and the opening exercises, hymns and prayers were all appropriate to the beginning of the new year.

The principal feature in the meeting was the presentation of the chapter in the study book, dealing with the "Spirit of Christian Education." Mrs. R. Crego had charge of this feature and had prepared a chart showing the work being done in home and foreign missions. Other articles in connection with this work were read by Mrs. Flex. McMillan, telling of Miss Shaw's boarding school in northern Rhodesia; Mrs. L. Turner who read of the work being done for old people; Miss Ruby Jewell who told of the efforts of young Syrian woman to lead her family in the way of light, and Mrs. A. Nill who read an article entitled "On the Way of the Truth."

Two musical numbers were enjoyed also. Mrs. S. Thackeray played a piano solo and Miss Jessie Smith sang, "Let the Lower Light Be Burning."

Invite Fenella Choir

It was decided to use the envelopes for systematic giving. It was also decided to ask the Fenella choir to present the cantata, "The Lost Star," as soon as a date can be arranged.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Robert Mouncey, when Mrs. Kennard Harvie will have charge of the study book and program.

and had informed Captain C. J. Goodwin he would not be allowed to proceed to Vancouver unless he dropped his tow of logs.

The launch was reported standing by, and its occupants were said to have threatened the tugs crew of six with violence if they attempted to proceed.

After an emergency meeting of the Vancouver Merchants' Exchange a message of protest was telegraphed to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, asking representations be made to the United States Government for immediate release of the tug and its tow.

"If this practice is allowed to pass without strong protest it is obvious considerable damage will result to Canadian trade now legitimately carried on—and further, the stoppage of a British vessel properly cleared through American customs would appear to be an act of piracy," the message said in part. It was signed by President P. E. Burke of the Exchange.

HEPBURN GOING SOUTH FOR REST INTO ARIZONA

Bronchial Trouble And High Blood Pressure May Keep Him Away Month

TROUBLED ON POWER

First Job On Return Will Be Review Of Situation In Ontario

TORONTO, Jan. 16 (C.P.). — Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario prepared to-day for a trip to Arizona where he will seek relief from a bronchial ailment. Cabinet ministers said he planned to return in two or three weeks to lead the Government in the Legislature.

Late to-day it was expected Mr. Hepburn would motor to his St. Thomas home, joining Mrs. Hepburn and his two children for the Arizona trip.

While it was explained high blood pressure and a kidney affliction complicated the Premier's condition, rumors that he considered retiring as Government Leader were quickly denied by Cabinet members. They were confident Mr. Hepburn would be back for the latter part of the session which opens on Tuesday.

"There is not a tittle of truth in it," Acting Premier Harry Nixon said, referring to the retirement rumor. There has not even been such a suggestion. We have every expectation Mr. Hepburn's bronchial condition will clear up at once, as it has always cleared up with the change of climate. Even before he was Premier he found it necessary to go south every winter."

Mr. Hepburn said yesterday he would consult members and engineers of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission on his return regarding power needs.

In Competent Hands.

"Let me say that the great Hydro enterprise is in the hands of competent engineers—but if I'm not satisfied with their appraisal of the power need I shall glady institute an outside appraisal, to be made by an independent electrical engineer of high standing," he added.

"Rightly or wrongly there is an attempt being made to create the impression across the length and breadth of Ontario that we are faced with a power shortage," he continued. "The charge has actually been raised that I, as Prime Minister, have been misinformed as to Hydro's needs. I do not believe that, judging from information which I have, and I'm fully confident that the power needs of this province are looked after for many years to come."

MYSTERY WOMAN'S PASSPORT SEIZED

Oslo Press Hints Her Attempt To Collect Peace Prize Cash Nazi Plot

OSLO, Norway, Jan. 16.—(AP).—Police to-day seized the passport of the "mystery woman" who attempted to collect the $37,000 Nobel prize awarded to the German pacifist, Karl Von Ossietzky.

The woman, supposedly a German, who gave the name of Mrs. Alexandra Kreutzberger, was confined to her hotel where she refused to see anyone. She said she was secretary to a Dr. Kurt Wannow, of Berlin, and was acting at his instructions.

"I don't know Ossietzky or his wife personally, and am only acting on orders," she declared.

A section of the Norwegian press charged her action was an attempt by Nazi authorities to seize the Nobel prize money. (Ossietzky was released from a Nazi concentration camp shortly before he received the prize).

It was understood the bank, to which the Nobel committee entrusted the funds for payment, turned down Mrs. Kreutzberger because it did not consider her authorization satisfactory."

Believe 25,000 Troops Maximum They Can Send Franco—Costing $5 a Day Each

BAYONNE, France, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Thousands of demonstrators were reported parading the streets of the insurgent Spanish city of Pamplona today, threatening to storm the city's prisons and execute "eye for eye" vengeance on more than 2,000 Socialist prisoners.

The demonstrators were reported incensed over the alleged massacre early in the week of 208 insurgent hostages at the Basque capital of Bilbao in retaliation for an aerial bombardment. Reports reaching the border said authorities had invoked strict military control to prevent an assault on the prisoners.

25,000 Germany's Limit.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—(AP)—German experts were reported today to have made an appraisal of resources with an eye to the practical cost of open intervention in Spain. They were said to have set a force of 25,000 troops as the maximum contribution possible to aid General Franco.

They expressed doubt anywhere near the 25,000 limit already had been sent from Germany to General Franco's army. According to the best information available, each man sent to Spain is costing Germany $5 a day.

British Cyclists Free Of Flag-Waving Law

London, Jan. 16 (AP)

GREAT Britain is said to be considering a license tax for her 10,000,000 cyclists—but an obsolete law requiring a man with a red flag to walk in front of the bicycle definitely has been dropped.

The tax proposal calls for a fee of $1.25, the price including the cost of a half-ton registration plate. Estimated revenue would be about $12,500,000.

Harassed cyclists asked about the man-with-a-red-flag law, no longer enforced but still in existence. They may rest assured, officials said, the law will be forgotten completely.

OTTAWA TO ASSIST MAKING AIRPORTS FOR FAST PLANES

Increase Of 100 Miles Per Hour In Last Five Years Made Many Fields Unsuitable

CITIES MUST BE SERVED

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—(CP). —The increase of nearly 100 miles an hour in cruising speed of commercial airplanes in the past five years has provided a problem for airports on the trans-Canada airway that the government is meeting with direct financial assistance.

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, to-day explained the purpose behind a recently-signed order-in-council empowering the government to assist municipalities on the Trans-Canada Airway which will be inaugurated next summer.

"Some years ago," he said, "a number of cities on this route provided airports at their own expense, but progress in aviation has brought larger and faster aircraft into use and facilities which were satisfactory at that time no longer meet the needs of modern air services.

"It is felt that the efficient operation of the Trans-Canada Airway is contingent on the provision of proper airports in the principal cities to be served and the financial position of those cities to-day renders it difficult for them to undertake the improvement of existing airports or the provision of new airports suitable to modern requirements.

"The Government has, therefore, undertaken to extend a measure of financial assistance to the municipalities concerned to the extent of not more than one-third of the amount already expended by such municipalities on approved airports; also not more than one-third of the amount which any municipality on the Trans-Canada Airway may agree to expend on improvements to existing or new airports on the Airway."

Hangars and buildings do not come within the order-in-council.

Aged Ontarioan Finds Solace On Lonely Tomahawk Island

Octogenarian Spends Hours Each Day Putting Curl In It Around Ram's Horn

FINDS OIL HELPS

MIDLAND, Ont., Jan. 16—(C.P.)—Suffering 10 days alone in the Christmas season with a broken hip have not deterred 87-year-old Jim Drummond from planning to-day to return this week-end to his lonely cabin at Tomawhawk Island, just north of Honey Harbor.

During his two weeks in Midland Drummond has been impatient to return to the island where he has lived alone for the past 37 years and where he declared he wants to end his days. This time his brother, Abram, 80, of Picton, will accompany him and remain with him until he is completely recovered from the hip injury. He now walks with the aid of a cane.

On December 19, Mr. Drummond fell on the ice, breaking the cavity joint of the hip. He dragged himself to his cabin, where he kept a fire going and prepared his meals. Two days later he fed his hens, reaching the barn with the aid of a chair and a stick, the round trip taking a full hour. He brought in wood by filling a tub outside and while sitting inside the house pulling the tub in with a rope attached to the handle.

Two lads who walked over the ice to visit him December 29 took a note back to John Stacey, who brought Mr. Drummond to Midland by dog team, and placed him in hospital.

CAR CRASHES POLE MAN, GIRL INJURED

Break In Power Line Puts Napanee In Darkness—Blame Crowding Transport

NAPANEE, Ont., Jan. 16 (CP). — Two Kingston residents were injured, one seriously, eight miles east of Napanee, last night, when a car driven by John K. Bruce (428 Brock Street), Kingston, was allegedly forced off the road by an approaching transport. The car crashed sideways into a Hydro pole. Miss Ann Pitt (Concession Street), Kingston, riding in the front seat with Bruce, suffered severe arm injuries, body bruises and shock. She was taken to the house of Archie McCracken on the Provincial highway and Dr. T. M. Galbraith of Napanee, after giving first aid, ordered the girl removed to Kingston Hospital. Bruce only suffered minor injuries. Provincial Officer F. W. Barrett of Napanee was called and is investigating.

The impact snapped a Hydro pole, breaking the power line wires and plunged Napanee into darkness. In the rural area to the south lights were off for more than an hour.

Dam Site At Locks Obscured By January Rains

The highest winter flow of the Otonabee River in many years temporarily obliterated the dam at the Peterborough lock below No. 7 highway bridge. The normal drop of 8 feet had shrunk Friday to 1 foot 8 inches leaving hardly a trace of the dam as the water poured over it with no sign of the usual fall. Approximately six inches of rain and equivalent snow since Christmas raised the level of the river to a new recorded high for January. Ice was gone from the lock to Rice Lake, and the excessive January volume was flowing along without disturbance, but was backed up relatively higher at the dam where the movement was most confined.

Net Profit Of $2,600 Is Shown On The 1936 Exhibition

RECEIPTS $28,536

Showing a net profit of $2,600 last year, the members of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition re-elected Tom Brown president at the annual meeting in the council chamber Friday afternoon.

E. F. Mason was retained as first vice-president and Gordon Hancock second vice-president. Appointment of the other officers, secretary, treasurer and managing director, was turned over to the first meeting of the new directorate.

R. M. Glover and Mr. Mason were authorized to attend the convention of the Ontario Fairs' Association, and W. R. Morris and D. J. Lawrie were again appointed auditors.

Receipts last year totalled $28,563.59, including items due from 1935, and disbursements were $22,090 which also included some unpaid 1935 accounts.

The improved financial position resulting from last year's efforts stimulated a discussion directed toward arousing livelier support from the citizens. It was also proposed that the substantial recovery in business and industry should encourage merchants and manufacturers to renew their contributions of other years before the depression reached its peak. Roland Denne said that both these groups had materially helped the Board, and their contributions in some of the best years totalled $3,000. He recalled that in one afternoon W. R. Breyfogle and himself collected $1,300 in a round of calls.

"The support of the merchants and manufacturers has always been a great asset to the Exhibition," Mr. Denne said. "We hadn't the heart to approach them during the last few years, but I believe conditions warrant us appealing to them for grants and other active interest again this year."

Plans for 1937's general program were deferred until the directors organize their committees. Mr. Brown urged that this preliminary be completed as soon as possible to facilitate early publication of the prize list.

W. W. Dawson, Sam S. Staples, Joseph Tully and J. P. Flood were added to the directorate. The other directors are:

WM. LEAHY DROPS DEAD IN LINDSAY

Well-Known Resident Passes Suddenly Shortly After Evening Meal

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Jan. 16. — William Leahy, a well-known resident, dropped dead at his home on Mill Street shortly after the supper hour on Friday. The deceased, who was in his seventy-eighth year, was a resident of Lindsay for the past 16 years, formerly residing in the Township of Brock, near Sunderland, where he was a successful farmer. He is survived by his wife, two daughters and one son.

Spare Goat Donated Regiment By King

London, Jan. 16 (CP).

THE Welsh Regiment, which always has a goat as its mascot, has been presented by King George with a "spare" mascot from the Royal herd in Windsor Great Park.

The Windsor herd was established from goats given to Queen Victoria by the Shah of Persia more than fifty years ago. During the short previous reign it had been decided to disband the herd, most of which were sent to the zoo in London.

MICHIGAN HOLDS TROOPS AT FLINT

Rescind Partial Demobilization Order Suddenly As Peace Deal Opens

DETROIT, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Michigan's National Guard troops remained on duty in the automotive strike zone at Flint today as plans went forward for the opening of peace negotiations between General Motors and union representatives and the evacuation of sit-down strikers in the company's United States plants.

Orders for partial demobilization of troops were rescinded suddenly; more than 600 of them were about to board a train for home when instructions to remain were received. The 2,300 troops, Mayor Harold E. Bradshaw said, will remain during Sunday and Monday.

The mayor, who conferred with Governor Frank Murphy before the new orders were issued insisted that neither he nor the governor anticipated a renewal of last Monday night's violence, but that he recommended retention of the soldiers over the week-end, during which the "sit down" strikers in the two Fisher body plants at Flint are to vacate.

To speed the formal negotiations for permanent settlement of the strike, representatives of General Motors and the United Automobile Workers of America met at the corporation offices here today. The conference brought together again William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of the corporation, and Homer S. Martin, union president.

They planned to draft rules of procedure for the negotiations that will start Monday.

DISOWNED RACER TO GO ON AUCTION

Toronto Owner Refuses To Take Him Back, Mrs. Whitney Doesn't Want Him

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP).—Cypress De Beau, a horse without a country, will go on sale Monday.

Cypress, disowned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney and by the man who shipped him from Canada, has cost the American Express Company $150 for board and lodging. A Federal Judge yesterday ordered him sold to pay this expense.

The horse came here by train, addressed to Mrs. Whitney, who has a Virginia estate. The court learned, however, she "refused and declined" the animal on November 25.

The Express Company wrote to the shipper—a Mr. L. M. Briden or Bredtin of Toronto. Mr. B. replied the hunter was the "sole property of Mrs. Whitney," and he wouldn't take him back.

If Monday's sale brings more than the cost of keeping Cypress, the court ruled, the balance should be paid to the owner. But there's the problem—who is the owner?

HONORARY ARMY OF LIEUT.-COLONELS AROUSES POULIOT

Temiscouata Liberal Would Know Who Recommended Them, Their Military Record

WHAT DO THEY COST?

OTTAWA, Jan 16.—(CP)—Canada's grand old army of honorary lieutenant colonels is under fire. To Jean Francois Pouliot, Liberal member of the commons for Temiscouata, has fallen the task of opening against them a vigorous offensive.

Mr. Pouliot's curiosity is piqued by the number of honorary lieutenant colonels scattered through the country, and a question placed in today's "rotes and proceedings" demands their names and addresses.

He wants their dates of appointment, their military service and the name of whoever recommended them for that high dignity.

"What," asks Mr. Pouliot "are their privileges? What formalities are required for the appointment of an honorary lieutenant colonel? Are they supplied with uniforms and arms by the state? If so, what uniforms and what arms, and what is the annual cost of each individual?"

Tied up with these are several more questions. For example, do honorary lieutenant colonels pay a tax to the state in that capacity? What do they cost the country? What services have they rendered to the state?

The Temiscouata member also desires information on the number of militia regiments in Canada, and the distribution of honorary lieutenant colonels and lieutenant colonels.

State Medicine For Alberta Aim Of Social Credit League

Convention Also Favors Extending Mothers' Allowances And Relief Rules

COVER BORDER-LINE CASES

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

EDMONTON, Jan. 16 (C.P.). — State medicine for Alberta was urged in a resolution passed last night by the Social Credit League at the concluding session of its two-day convention here.

The resolution, which will be sent to the Provincial Government for action, called for state medicine within the reach of every person at the earliest possible date. The Government also will consider resolutions favoring extension of the Mothers' Allowance Act, redrafting of relief regulations to cover border-line cases, and amendments to the Compensation Act to deal with burnt-out industrial workers.

The Provincial Government was commended for its efforts to foster exchange of Alberta products with British Columbia organizations and was urged to extend the scheme.

The League, the political organization behind the Social Credit Government, decided to amend its constitution to provide for women's auxiliaries and youth associations.

A resolution urging a Government investigation of every wholesale, manufacturing and financial company operating in Alberta was discussed and tabled, it was learned in unofficial circles.

The following officers were elected: President, C. H. Tade, Colinton; vice-president, H. A. Walker, Calgary; secretary, R. E. Ansley, M.L.A., Leduc.

OLD-AGE PENSION TEST

Town Expert Would See How Man Over 60 Spent $200 In Month.

CHELAN, Wash., Jan. 16 (AP).—Hand $200 to a person of 60 or over and tell him he must spend it in a month...that's Isom Lamb's idea of how to prove if old age pensions will work. He has posted $1,200 in a bank for a six months' test.

Lamb, Townsend Club supervisor, sponsoring the test, appealed today for suggestions on the fairest way to choose the spenders.

Lamb asserted Chelan merchants almost unanimously had agreed to co-operate by paying a 2 per cent. transaction "tax" on each ear-marked dollar spent with them. This 'tax' money would go into the fund for the succeeding months' spending test.

Not Enough Clothing For Their Children Curve Lake Reserve

No Playing Dead For Fleet Admiral

London, Jan. 16 (CP).

THE will of Admiral of the Fleet, Sir John Donald Kelly, who died last November, left approximately $125,000 to his wife and family, and included as a last wish: "I desire that a surgeon should open a vein in my body after my death in order to ensure that I am dead. I also desire to be buried at sea."

Al. Sharpe Charges Great Lack Of Children's Clothing At Reserve

CONSIDERING APPEAL

Fred Marshall Claims Money Not Used For Food And Clothing

During the annual meeting of Peterborough Fish and Game Association on Friday evening when the need of more stringent law enforcement, particularly as it relates to unlawful selling of game fish, was under discussion, Al Sharpe, President of Kiwanis Club, stood forth in defence of the Indian guide.

Not denying Indians might be peddling fish in the city and in the summer time at lake resorts, he declared they were forced to break game and fishery laws in order to provide clothing for their children.

"I do not believe if you went to Curve Lake reserve," he declared, "you would find enough clothes for one child, let alone for the children of the entire reservation."

He intimated that as a service club member he is interested in the plight of the Indians, whom he claimed are not in receipt of relief. He hinted the service club to which he belongs is considering an appeal to provide for the needs of the Indians at Curve Lake.

Ex-member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and former game and fisheries officer for Peterborough county, Fred C. Marshall, believed if fur bearing animals were protected as they should be Indians could earn livelihood trapping and would not need to poach for fish.

While agreeing some of the Indians of the district might be in necessitous circumstances, he gave it as his opinion: "The Indian cannot see past tomorrow. He would take the last fish in creation in order to buy the things he likes. He is not a conservationalist at all. Back in the wilderness where he is away from the influence of the white man conditions are different. But I am sorry to say it is my experience that Indians living close to towns and cities seem to inherit all the vices of the white man and few of his virtues."

Mr. Marshall claimed most of the Indians have to have a car and radio, and he charged the majority of them who sell fish unlawfully use the money for any purpose but to buy food and clothing for their families.

MANITOBA'S LEVY ON OUTSIDE BEER TO BE CONTINUED

Bracken Hopes To Block Inroads Taken At Advantage Of Province's Industries

SELF-DEFENCE

WINNIPEG, Jan. 16—(C.P.). — Manitoba will continue present restrictions against beer brewed in other provinces "purely as a measure of self defence," it is announced by Premier John Bracken.

In an address yesterday to the Manitoba Liberal Association executive, the premier said the additional $1.20 charged by the Government Liquor Commission on outside beer over the $3.30 charged for Manitoba-brewed beer would be continued unless the Legislature decided upon some other restrictive measure.

The price increase, announced a month ago, brought protests from Quebec and Ontario brewers.

The Premier stated his Liberal-Progresive government had always believed in the principle of free trade between the provinces, but that the objective of a wholly united Canada was illusory if the tendency of imposing disabilities upon the sale of products of other provinces was allowed to grow.

"The principle of free inter-provincial trade for many years has been honored more in the breach than in the observance by practically every province of Canada," he said. Quebec and Manitoba had been the only provinces without barriers against outside beer.

Mr. Bracken charged "outside breweries from the East had taken advantage of illegitimate as well as legitimate ways of our lack of defensive measures to make serious inroads on the local industry and and other related industries of this province with results unfavorable to our taxpayers and our employers of labor."

The executive adopted a statement reiterating the association's opposition to restrictions on external and internal trade, but recognizing "that if other provinces take deliberate steps to prevent or make difficult the entry into and sale within those provinces of the products of Manitoba, the government of this province is justified in adopting measures of self defence."

COLD WAVE CHECKS FLOODS IN WEST

Many Families However Still Unable To Reach Homes In Ohio, Mississippi Valleys

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 (AP).—Menace of dangerous floods in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys subsided today in the face of an advancing cold wave that checked protracted rains.

High water still prevented many hundreds of families from reaching their homes in the lowlands and some streams continued to rise but observers said the crisis in most sections had passed.

Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio and Missouri were the States harassed by the week's floods, caused by torrential winter rains.

City and county officials at Poplar Bluff, Mo., sheltered more than 100 families who evacuated their flooded lowland homes. The turbulent St. Francis River ripped through levees in many spots, but damage was slight and no lives were believed lost.

Two levees broke under the force of flood waters that swept over more than eight square miles of farmland in Union and Alexander Counties, Illinois.

Thirty-five persons rescued at Marion, Ill., took shelter in a school building. Boat crews moved 75 families to higher ground near Harrisburg, Ill.

POTATO STRIKE SENDS BUYERS TO MARITIMES

No Organized Body, Merely Agreement Among Farmers Themselves

PLENTY IN EAST

Prices Up 25 Cents—Brokers Think People Will Pay More For Better Quality

TORONTO, Jan. 16 — (C.P.). — Scarcity of Ontario potatoes, due to farmers holding their product for higher prices, turned dealers to-day towards the Maritimes to fill consumers' needs.

In parts of Western Ontario, farmers are reported determined to keep their potatoes off the market until they receive what they consider a fair price. Reports from Stratford, describing a "sit down strike" by the producers, said the decision was not made through any organized body, but merely arrived at by agreements among the farmers themselves.

London reports also told of potatoes being withheld from district markets in the last two weeks by some Middlesex county growers. John McDougall of Strathroy, president of the Middlesex potato growers, said individual opinion prices were bound to improve prompted growers to hold up deliveries. He said during the last two days prices jumped from $1.35 to $1.50 a bag and that potatoes were moving freely in Middlesex.

W. K. Riddell, Middlesex country agricultural representative, said he didn't believe there was an organized movement to force prices upward, but that growers were taking advantage of the situation that seemed to justify increased prices. It was the time of year growers were considering their seed question when they usually arranged for a plentiful supply.

No Ontario Potatoes Left

Samuel Hisey, of Samuel Hisey and Sons Limited, one of the largest produce brokers in Ontario, told of his firm's inability to obtain Ontario potatoes. He said he hadn't one bag of these potatoes left.

"It took the farmer a long time to get wise to himself that he was selling too cheaply," said Mr. Hisey. "When he was selling for $1 a bushel he should have been getting $1.35 but now he wants more than we pay for New Brunswick potatoes and he's wrong again. He won't get more."

"The farmer can ask what he likes for his product, but we won't pay more than $1.50 bushel," he said. "There were 35 carloads of Eastern potatoes on the railway tracks Monday morning and more are coming all the time. We can get all the New Brunswick potatoes we want."

He said the Maritime product was of better quality and that the consumer would "gladly" pay more for these potatoes than pay higher prices for the Ontario variety.

Robert Luddtcombe, buyer for Lloyd's wholesale product company, Stratford, said the farmer expected to get $2 a bushel. He also said his firm had ordered a carload from New Brunswick, after failing to obtain potatoes from the Stratford district and other areas, with as high as $1.60 a bushel offered the farmer.

CROLL WELCOMES MOVE FOR BLIND

Hopes To See Pension Age Set At 40—Province To Bear Municipalities' Share

TORONTO, Jan. 16 (CP) — Ontario Government to-day welcomed the announcement in the Ottawa Throne Speech of pensions for the blind, "at a lower age than 70 years."

Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs, Welfare and Labor, said he had hopes the age for blind persons would be 40 years. The province will, he said, pay the full 25 per cent. of the cost of pensions for the blind not borne by the Dominion. The municipalities will not contribute.

The Minister recalled passage of the following government resolution by the Ontario Legislature two years ago: "Resolved, that this Assembly approves of pensions being made payable to persons in Canada over the age of 40 years who suffer from blindness and urges amendments be made by the Parliament of Canada to the Old Age Pensions Act so that the said Act will be applicable to such blind persons."

Two years ago it was estimated that 25 per cent of the cost of pensions to the blind would be $30,000.

"The municipalities will be relieved of contributions toward this new social service," said Mr. Croll. "It will mean a substantial saving, especially in the larger cities. Almost half of Ontario's dependent blind live in Toronto."

NO ORGANIZED STRIKE.

TORONTO. — J. T. Cassin, president of Ontario Potato Growers' Association, commenting on reports from Stratford of a potato growers' "sit down strike" said there is no organized movement in the province to keep potatoes off the market.

Wild Wedding Tours Taboo In Wallaceburg

Wallaceburg, Jan. 16.

CHIEF of Police Charles Warwick to-day banned noisy wedding processions. Recently, said he, a line of cars sped around the business district for an hour with pots and pans tied to the rear of the cars. He received so many complaints he had to fine three of the offenders.

VOTE OF LOYALTY TO KING GEORGE MADE UNANIMOUS

Woodsworth Swings In Line After Vigorous Protest Over Procedure

TURNS ON PREMIER

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—(CP).— With the formalities of opening ended, the House of Commons will settle down Monday to the business of what is expected to prove a short session. The address in reply to the Speech from the Throne will be moved then and this will precipitate a debate in which all members who so desire may praise or criticize the government.

Yesterday the House paid tribute to the members who died during the recess, after which a resolution of devotion and loyalty to King George was carried unanimously.

But before it passed J. S. Woodsworth took strong objection to the procedure by which His Majesty became King of Canada and to the manner of presenting measures dealing with his accession in Parliament.

The sharp voice of the bearded leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation injected the only note of controversy into the passing of an address of loyalty to the new King. It was the chief business of the sitting which ended with members and gallery spectators rising to sing "God Save the King."

Social Credit Chief Swings In.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King moved the adoption of the message with Sir George Perley, Acting Conservative Leader, as seconder. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, endorsed it in the French language and John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, joined in the sentiments on behalf of his party. Mr. Woodsworth made it clear he did not object to the passage of the resolution, but he contended it should not be passed until Parliament had passed the bill changing the succession to the throne.

Mr. Woodsworth said he did not believe George VI was King until Parliament had passed the necessary legislation.

He was not so much concerned with who occupied the Throne as with the rights of members of Parliament.

He regretted having to interject debate in this resolution and declared this could have been avoided if the Prime Minister had delayed bringing in this address until the succession bill had been disposed of.

Not Worth "Scene."

When the succession was altered, Mr. Woodsworth said, he believed it should not have been necessary for members of the House of Commons to swear new oaths of allegiance before taking their seats. He had not considered it important enough, however, "to make a scene."

"I have no desire to do any mud-raking," said Mr. Woodsworth, "but the people are entitled to all the facts in relation to the King."

If the action of the government on December 10 was constitutional there was no necessity for the bill government had introduced in Parliament.

Why, he asked, should the Liberal party be in a position to decide who is to be King of the Canadian people. Mr. King interrupted when Mr. Woodsworth said "the cost of pleasing the British government had been too great."

Mr. Woodsworth refused to modify his statement. He charged the Statute of Westminster had been made a farce. The Canadian Government had simply "rubber stamped" a decision of the British government.

He argued the government had no authority to act on behalf of Canada in associating this country with the act of the Imperial Parliament giving effect to the abdication of Edward VIII and the accession of the new King.

It was strange, said Mr. Woodsworth, that in standing up for the rights of the Canadian Parliament, he should have to oppose Mr. Mackenzie King who, in opposition, always made himself a champion of those rights.

If the Prime Minister could place a new King in authority over Canada without consulting Parliament the Prime Minister could declare war. The action of the government had made the statute of Westminster a farce, for that statute clearly stated that no change in the succession to the throne could be made except with the consent of the Parliaments of the Dominions, he declared.

Leaves Debate Over.

Mr. Mackenzie King left discussion of the events leading to the abdication of Edward VIII until a later occasion. He said these events served to bring out clearly the dual nature of the relationship of the King and the people, consecration on the part of the Crown to what was highest and best and loyalty on the part of the people to the Crown as a symbol of the most cherished things in their collective life.

Prime Minister King said there was a great similarity between the present King and his father, and those qualities that had endeared George V to his subjects were largely present in the son. The new sovereign was also like his father, singularly fortunate in the enjoyment of a happy family life. Already Queen Elizabeth and the young princesses had won an abiding place in the hearts of the people. It was well these things were true of the new sovereign, the Prime Minister said, because he was ascending the throne at a time tremendous responsibilities rested upon the Empire.

Sir George Perley, acting Conservative leader, spoke from personal acquaintance with George VI and said he had been impressed with the new King's devotion to duty, with his understanding and knowledge of the constitutional institutions of the Empire.

He predicted the prestige of the monarchy would increase as the years went on during the King's reign.

Tribute to Veniot and Perras

Leaders of all groups and Fisheries Minister Michaud, speaking in French, united in paying tribute to former Postmaster General P. J. Veniot and F. W. Perras, Liberal member for Gloucester, who died since prorogation of the last session.

It is expected that Opposition Leader Bennett will be in his seat when the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne is moved Monday by Norman McLarty (Lib., Essex West). Mr. Bennett is returning from an Empire tour and is expected to reach Ottawa at noon Monday. If he is ready to proceed he will open the debate on the address after it has been seconded by Dr. C. J. Veniot, who succeeded his father in the Gloucester (N.B.) constituency.

Here is the text of the message of loyalty:

Resolved: That an humble address be presented to His Majesty the King in the following words:

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty:

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, the members of the House of Commons of Canada, in Parliament assembled, desire respectfully to extend our greetings upon your Majesty's accession to the throne, and to convey to your Majesty and to Her Majesty the Queen, the assurance of our united loyalty and support.

Your Majesty's gracious New Year's message, sending warmest wishes for the welfare and happiness of your peoples, and dedicating yourself and the Queen to their service, has been deeply appreciated by your Majesty's subjects in Canada in common with those of other parts of the British Empire. We believe that, under the blessings of Divine Providence, your Majesty will be vouchsafed guidance and strength to meet the responsibilities of your noble heritage, and to fulfil your purpose to strengthen the foundations of mutual trust and affection between the sovereign and his people.

We pray that, amid the confusions of the world, and the uncertainties of the times, your Majesty's throne may be established in righteousness; that your Majesty's counsellors may be endowed with wisdom; and that all endeavors of your Majesty may be directed to the well-governing of your peoples, the preservation of freedom, and the advancement of unity and peace.

CIGARETTES TAKEN IN WARSAW THEFT

Hilliard's General Store Is Entered—Thieves Also Break Into Mill

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, Jan. 16.—Thieves were active in the village early Friday morning, visiting at least two places. The grist mill was broken into between midnight and 2 a.m. Friday, probably through a window, a number of burned matches being found on the floor of the office in the morning but only some stamps being taken. There was no money left in the place the previous evening.

Hilliard's general store also reported the loss of a number of cigarettes, the thieves entering by breaking glass in the door and opening it. Arthur Lonsberry, going to his home about two in the morning, reported seeing two men come from the store, get in their car and drive off. He believed he would know one of them again if he met him.

ANN HARDING AIMS TO MARRY AGAIN

Actress Who Fled U.S. Will Wed New York Orchestra Conductor

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Ann Harding, motion picture actress, and Werner Janssen, New York Symphony Orchestra conductor, to-day filed their intention to marry at the London Registry Office.

Janssen, who has been conducting in London, has seen a great deal of the actress since her flight to England last year to retain custody of her daughter. The Hollywood star has been acting on the British stage since then.

Miss Harding fled across the United States and Canada last June to take her daughter outside the jurisdiction of American courts where her former husband, Harry Bannister, was using every legal weapon to gain custody.

Miss Harding recently won permission from Hollywood courts to keep her daughter Jane in England until next May. Then she plans to return to Hollywood with Jane and Janssen.

ACCEPTS 14-INCH GUNS

Italy's Move Leads to Hopes of Slackening in Naval Race

LONDON, Jan. 16—(C.P. Cable)—Italy to-day accepted the 14-inch gun for her battleships.

With the exception of Japan, all the principal naval powers have now accepted the limitation of the 14-inch gun. Negotiations are under way with Japan to secure her acceptance.

Adoption of the 14-inch gun by all naval powers would mean a halt had been called in the threatened upward race in both guns and the size of ships. Italy's decision consequently is received in London with the greatest satisfaction.

THE BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 40

IT WAS A sullen hot night, with thunder about, and the old Abbey had never seemed more desolate or grim.

Selden heard voices in the corridor, echoing faintly in ghostly whispers from the stone walls. James was going round the house with Hucks, showing him the way about. Selden waited till they had passed the door of the library, and followed stealthily. He quietly opened the door and went in, using a torch for light. Not a sound greeted his ear, and Sylvia had evidently done with her charges, as arranged, into the room behind the organ.

He went thoughtfully into the study, which had been kept locked ever since the day after the murder, and dust lay thick on the furniture and carpet. There is always something gruesome about a dead man's room. His small articles lying about, tobacco jar and old pipes, laid down each in its chosen place. Selden had taken stock of the room when he had been there with Hutchins for his brief examination. The single silver candlestick looked oddly lopsided.

Selden took his seat at the desk, and gave himself up to piecing the occurrences of the night of the murder together.

What had taken place in this room? He was quite convinced that the affair started from here. Sir Henry had come here from his bedroom—the bloodhounds had revealed that—and had apparently been here for some time. With whom?

Then Mrs. Thornton had met James coming back from this part of the house, who had told her that Lady Severinge had rung the bell—there was some lying here. For some reason Sir Henry had gone down to the chapel—and here again the use of the silver candlestick indicated that he had gone from this room, and in haste. But if the evidence at his disposal were accurate, the murder of Sir Henry synchronized with an attempt on the twins.

Selden's face assumed a graver aspect. If that were so, then how could anyone hope to get the children away without the certainty that they would cry out and Miss Lawrence be roused?

Selden gazed idly at the telephone on the desk before him. Subconciously something came back to his memory—James had in this very room suggested telephoning, and had gone to the hall to do so. It was curious to say the least, and Selden took the receiver off the hook and waited. Presently a voice came through. "Who's there?"

"Is that you, James?"

"Yes, Mr. Selden. Did you require anything?"

"This telephone goes to your room, then?" Selden asked.

"Yes—it was Sir Henry's private phone to me."

"I didn't know—I thought it was the public phone," Selden told him, and replaced the instrument.

So this was the bell ringing in the night! Sir Henry had summoned James on that fatal night for some reason.

Things began to take definite shape in the detective's mind.

Three days of tense anxiety succeeded. Everyone at the Abbey had the same feeling that things were coming to a crisis. Even the weather intensified the impression, for after the storm succeeded a period of hot damp days, with lowering black masses of cloud that hung on a rainless sky, and seemed to threaten at any moment to discharge their pent-up forces. The very atmosphere was clammy and oppressive while a thin evil mist lay over the lake, like the ghost of a dead man in a seance.

Mrs. Thornton had returned from her visit to London, acid faced and inscrutable as ever. She and Hucks had snatched up a sort of queer friendship, for when he called for his nightly vigil he generally drifted to the housekeeper's room, preferring her company to that of James. The twins were fretting at their enforced confinement, and already showed signs that much more of this would injure their health, though they had the free run of the library, which James had locked up.

To Reid, the waiting time was intolerable. The doctor had sternly warned him that if he attempted to get up without permission it would be his duty to inform Lady Severinge of the true nature of his injuries. His own weakness told him that patience was necessary, and the fact that Selden was watching over events reassured him.

Food was brought from the Abbey, each day James visited him, and when he was unable to come one of the maids was sent.

Darkness had fallen—a sullen impenetrable darkness that might be felt. Reid had put on a dressing gown and gone to his sitting room, where he lay on the couch. He felt restless and uneasy, and intensely lonely. The entire absence of news was disquieting.

A very gentle knock came at the door, so quiet that he hardly heard it. If the night had not been so deathly still he would have imagined that it was merely the wind. It was repeated a little louder, and he called wearily, "Come in." The door opened and shut in the gloom, and he could just make out the form of a maid carrying a basket, and remembered that he was hungry.

"Put it down there, please," he said, and the girl moved to the table, placing her basket carefully down. "Thank you, I shall be able to unpack it."

For some reason the girl fidgeted with the things, and Reid became impatient. She left the table and came over to his couch, throwing a shawl from her head, and even in the darkness he knew her.

"Sylvia!" he cried in a sudden revulsion of feeling.

"Hush! I'm going to lock the door."

He could hardly realize that it was really a living being, and not one of the phantasies that had haunted him. Sylvia came back, and sat on the edge of the couch.

"How are you?" she asked.

"However did you get here?"

"James arranged it for me."

"James; but are you and the children all right?" He was puzzled, and his mind was clouded.

"You mustn't get excited," she said a cool hand on his temples. "I've had a course of nursing and know all about illness."

"But where have you been hiding?"

"One thing at a time," she laughed. "I've heard all about you, and your attempt to get back to the Abbey because I put a light in the window."

"You were in danger," he said simply, "and I, like a fool, had allowed myself to be trapped in the Colonel's house."

She grew grave at that. "I didn't know, but I guessed somehow that was the reason. When you did not return, and James had been waiting up for you, I became anxious, rather naturally, since you had sent the car back without any explanation."

"The cunning dog. He told me he had sent a message," Reid muttered.

"I put the light in the window, thinking it might bring you back. It was really more for your sake than any actual danger, though James seemed strangely disturbed. I am sure he knows more than he will say. Anyhow, he persuaded us that we ought to move from our rooms, and hide for the time being."

"But where? The whole place has been thoroughly searched."

"It was really very simple," Sylvia said with a laugh. "James took us into the library, where a fire was still smouldering, and fetched in bedding. The children rather enjoyed the fun—it was like camping out to them. They are very quick and mentally over-developed, but they know they are in some danger, but rather like it."

"But surely," Reid said in puzzled tone, "the library! Colonel Graham and the detective went in there."

"Of course. James showed them over the whole place, but, you see, when they came in, we weren't there."

"Are you joking?" His mind was confused with fever and he could not grasp her meaning.

Sylvia leant forward and spoke low. "There is a passage from the library leading to the organ loft. None of us ever suspected it, but James used it when he went to the organ, and Sir Henry had shown it to him. He says that before the library was built it was just a door, and a staircase, but then the builders made the door into a panel in the library wall at the end as it suited the room better. James took us in there, and made us comfortable while they were in the library. You see, he only has a key and no one else ever goes there."

"But you can't stay there, and isn't it dangerous your coming here?"

"One thing at a time, and if you will let go of my hand I'll give you a cup of tea."

Reid turned scarlet in the darkness, and released the cool hand he had been holding in his hot one, while Sylvia went into the shadow and lit the oil stove, speaking quietly while the kettle boiled.

There is nothing like OVALTINE

Ovaltine, the famous tonic food beverage, is approved by doctors and dieticians the world over, being used in hospitals, sanatoriums and private homes in more than 100 countries for—

- SLEEPLESSNESS
- NERVOUSNESS
- MAL-NUTRITION
- CONVALESCENTS
- POOR APPETITE
- EXPECTANT AND NURSING MOTHERS

THE world-wide acceptance of Ovaltine by physicians and dieticians, by hospitals and nursing homes, not only in Canada but all over the civilized world marks the triumph of natural methods over artificial ones. It also indicates that in the homes of countless thousands of families Ovaltine is recognized as the tonic food beverage supreme, the highest quality in its class.

Ovaltine fills every requirement of advanced scientific thought to-day, and no other food beverage has received such universal endorsement. Imitations are numerous, and some are made to look like Ovaltine, but there are vitally important differences. For example:

Ovaltine does not contain any Household Sugar to give it bulk and reduce the cost. Sugar is cheap and can be added in the home if desired. Nor does Ovaltine contain a large percentage of cocoa—or chocolate (which in itself is simply sugar and cocoa.) Nor does is contain starch.

Ovaltine is sold by all druggists, grocers and department stores. Simply telephone and have a tin delivered to-day. Take it in a cup of hot milk at bed-time to-night, and see for yourself how refreshed you will feel tomorrow morning, after a night of restful, health-giving sleep.

The Golden Text

John 5:36—"The very works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me."

Two Miracles of Mercy

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 24 is the fifth and sixth chapters of John, especially John 5:2-9 and 6:8-15, the Golden Text being John 5:36, "The very works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.")

* * *

THE LORD JESUS has a genius for seeking and finding the person who most needs His mercy and grace. Many things might have kept Him occupied at the temple when He went up to the annual feast at Jerusalem, but He sought out the needy and afflicted cripples at the healing spring of Bethesda, and found one who had been helpless for 38 years, and gave special attention to him.

Human Selfishness Pictured

When a picture of the world's selfishness is revealed to us in this helpless cripple's complaint, when Jesus asked him, "Wouldst thou be made whole?" "The sick man answered Him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me." How pathetic is this view of human helplessness in the midst of human heartlessness! How it is rebuked by Christ's going out of His way to be the "help of the helpless"! The world is full of helpless and needy folk awaiting the coming of those who have Christ's spirit of pity and helpfulness. "Jesus saith unto him, Arise, take up thy bed and walk. And straightway the man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked." That his healing was spiritual as well as physical must be implied from Jesus' words to him a bit later on finding him in the temple: "Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worse thing befall thee."

An Array of Witnesses

When opposition arose against Jesus for doing this healing on the sabbath, Jesus rebuked their unbelief in the face of a tremendous weight of evidence from five concurrent lines of testimony: (1) the testimony of John the Baptist: "Ye have sent unto John, and he hath borne witness unto the truth"; (2) the testimony of his miracles: "the very works that I do bear witness of me"; (3) the testimony of his Father: "the Father which sent me, he hath borne witness of me"; (4) the testimony of the scriptures: "Ye search the scriptures....and these are they that bear witness of Me"; and (5) the testimony of Moses: "If ye believed Moses, ye would believe Me; for he wrote of Me." What court or jury could disregard the corroborative testimony of five such competent witnesses? Has Jesus of Nazareth won a favorable verdict from you?

"Bread Enough and to Spare"

The second miracle of mercy in our lesson came a year after the first, upon the occasion of another passover, when great multitudes gathered about Jesus to see His miracles and hear His words. It was a desert place, the hour was late and the crowds were hungry. Philip, looking the crowd over, estimated that $36 would not suffice to give each of the thousands a morsel. Andrew surveyed their resources of five barley loaves and two small fishes, and apologized for even mentioning "these among so many." But neither Philip nor Andrew had counted Christ, and no appraisal of life's problems is correct that leaves Christ out of the reckoning. Adding machines have no key labeled "Christ." That's why we need more than adding machines! But Christ took the loaves and the fish, "and having given thanks, distributed to them...as much as they would." And gathering up the fragments that remained "that nothing be lost", they "filled 12 baskets with broken pieces which remained over unto them that had eaten."

CATHEDRAL MUSINGS

THE fact that the school of the prophets on Mount Carmel, was allied to the mystery schools of Egypt and of India, and later on with those of Greece, is not generally known, but such was the case. The training in these school was by no means confined to prophecy, for both the Therapeutai of Greece and the Essenes of Palestine were well versed in the art of healing as well as in the other arts and sciences. The schools were really for the study of the bodily, psychic and spiritual natures of man, and to impart a liberal education in the relationship of man to God, and to the universe. The Magi who visited Bethlehem at the time of the birth of the Holy Child were hierophants of the school at Heliopolis. That they saw His star in the East is not to be wondered at, for the words "Let your light so shine before men" has a meaning known only to those who can see that light, and the star was visible not only on the physical flame but also on that of the super-conscious. It is really to the great mystical brotherhoods that we owe not only the preservation of most of the sacred writings of the world but also the handing on of the inner truths. We owe them a great debt, for when most of the world was sunk into the depths of a debased and literal symbolism, an idolatry of the senses, the mystery schools by the voice of the prophets kept alive the primal and eternal truth of the One Ever Living God "creating and sustaining all things, visible and invisible." Had they failed in this we might perhaps be now still sunk into obscene darknesses of the early Mediterranean worships with their cruel and filthy travesties of the symbols of great truths. But as in the days of Egypt so also in the days of Israel, even as today there was but little connection of the mystic brotherhoods with the established priesthoods. Nor was it essential that there should be, for the priesthood was for the daily ordering of the multitude while the mystery schools were for the training of those few who by temperament were fitted to receive and hand on the torch. The book of Isaiah is very interesting to the mystic as it contains many extracts from the liturgy and teaching of the ancient schools, more or less veiled. For instance "I make peace and create evil; I the Lord, do all these things" is simply a statement of the inviolability of law, which brings peace or evil to the degree in which we keep it or fail to keep it. Passages such as Isaiah, chap. 42, verses 1 to 7; Chap. 11, verses 1 to 9, are more arcane, having reference to mystical experiences, only to be understood by those who have passed through them on the way. The point to be emphasized is that the super-conscious is a real state of being as the saints and mystics of all time attest, and that there is a definite technique leading to it. The true foundation of that technique is love, the attunement of love to love, the love of God, the love of humanity, but not the love of self. Self is but a stepping stone, a stage humanity has to pass through but must not dwell on. It is the veil that hides from us the inner chamber where dwells our God.

A National Message

By REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, LL.D., F.R.G.S., F.R.E.S.

We continue to follow the lead given in the 62nd chapter of Isaiah. —JERUSALEM— "I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night; ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence." "And give him no rest, till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." Isaiah lXII, 6, 7. As the King is set upon the throne of Zion, charged with the administration of the Kingdom, so the watchmen of Jerusalem are set upon the walls with instructions to do a number of things. Their first duty is to preach THE GOSPEL OF SALVATION. This is made clear at the outset, for "Jerusalem's sake will I not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof go forth as a lamp that burneth." Do we need at this late date to say anything regarding this plain and simple matter. It would seem so. A sincere and scholarly minister came to me one day last week. He had heard for the first time the facts and truths of British Israel; and had caught a glimpse of the realities of the covenants, promises and prophecies. He had seen with considerable surprise the fact that World History through the Ages has been fulfilling a Bible prophecy. He commented on the phase of theology which his denomination are passing through. He said, it seems as though they are heading unconsciously in our direction, for they are preaching THE SOCIAL GOSPEL. Now the social gospel standing alone has not the basis which can send forth "Salvation as a lamp that burneth." It is still true that there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved than Jesus Christ and Him crucified. On another occasion in a leading church, evangelical by reputation, in one of the first cities of Scotland, two young ladies came to me after the service where they had been singing in the choir and said: "Dr. Goard, will you not tell us what is meant by New Birth?" Yet this unknown process is so vital that Jesus said: "Except a man be born again he cannot see . . . he cannot enter the Kingdom of God."

They haven't formed a union or held any mass meetings, but have reached an agreement in postoffice lobbies, general stores and at corner fence posts not to sell their potatoes until they get around $2 a bag, it was stated by a local buyer.

Jesus the Water of Life — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — Scripture—John 4:1-54

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Jesus' people hated the people of Samaria and made a detour around that country in traveling between Judea and Samaria. But Jesus entertained no such prejudice. "He must needs go through Samaria."

At noon, weary with his journey, he sat at the well near Sychar when a woman of Samaria came to get water. Jesus asked her for a drink and talked to her about her sin and of himself as her Saviour.

His disciples prepared food they had bought in the village and urged him to eat. He replied, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work."

Having found Christ as her Saviour the woman rushed back to the city and brought many of her friends out that they might accept him, too, and be saved. And many believed through her.

Cities and Relief

The relief grants to cities in Ontario have been announced, and it is apparent the need for relief is much more acute in some municipalities than in others. That would be accounted for by the nature of the industries. Here is the list of a number of the smaller cities, with their population according to the 1931 census and the amount of the government relief appropriation:

City	Population	Relief Grant
Kingston	23,439	87,700
Kitchener	30,793	184,000
Chatham	14,569	46,670
Brockville	9,736	47,250
Brantford	30,107	414,575
Belleville	13,780	63,300
Guelph	21,075	159,975
Oshawa	23,439	220,200
Peterborough	22,327	99,750
St. Thomas	15,430	81,750
Stratford	17,742	95,375
Woodstock	11,396	20,800
Sault Ste. Marie	23,082	97,500

A brief study of the figures shows that population has nothing much to do with determining the amount of relief needed. Oshawa is about the same size as Peterborough, but the amount of relief needed there is well over double the amount called for in this city. Brantford, with a population which is greater than ours on the ratio of 30 to 22, has to receive more than four times the amount of relief allocated to Peterborough. Woodstock, which has about half the population of Peterborough, calls for about one-fifth the amount of relief needed in this city. The nearest point of equality comes in comparing Peterborough and Sault Ste. Marie. Stratford with a population of 17,742 is down for $95,375, while Peterborough with almost 5,000 more population has a vote of $99,750. In cities with a population of over 20,000 Kingston with its figure of $87,700 is evidently in a preferred position. The position of Peterborough, when compared with other cities, is indeed favorable.

Providing for Sickness

If there is sickness in the home it is apt to cost money, and if there is much of it the bills are serious enough. If it is considered advisable to remove the patient to a hospital the cost increases. For the average man it is serious because he has made no provision to meet this added cost. He has not paid for it by the month as he does with his lodge dues. The cost all comes at once and it is apt to put him down financially for a considerable time afterward.

Dr. Harvey Agnew, of the Hospitalization Department of the Canadian Medical Association, discussed a plan to overcome that when he was speaking to the local Kiwanis Club. The method now favored is group hospitalization. Several years ago it started in New York on the "three cents a day" plan, and in 16 months there were 160,000 members enrolled. Within four or five years there have been 100 centres working under the same system. There are now thirty operating in Canada.

It is likely to be started in Peterborough. Just what cost will be established here we do not know. There are places where for 60 cents a month an individual can provide for his hospital expenses, but that does not include the cost of an operation nor the services of the family physician. It does provide for all the services which the hospital is able to give. That figure of 60 cents is not a standard one, but is rather one of the lower ones in the group. The ideal plan is one where the group is large enough to create a fund from which the doctors will be paid as well. That does not necessarily include operations. Paying sufficient to attend to hospitalization is splendid, but it is a limited attempt as it leaves the individual in the hospital sick, but with no provision for the doctor to attend to him.

It is clearly understood that any such scheme must operate on a non-profit basis. That is, those who promote it or look after it must not do so with the hope that they will make any money out of it. The individual should also retain the right to designate the hospital of his preference, and of course the plan does not interfere in any way with the relationship between a patient and the family physician. It is one way by which people can collectively attack a problem which affects them as individuals. And it appears to be a good way.

What a Strike Costs

Word from Detroit tells that idle employees of General Motors, due to the strike, are losing a million dollars a day in wages. One of the officials, when asked what the company was losing in profits, remarked he hated to think about it.

We know, of course that a million dollars a day is a lot of money, but it is not difficult to show how much it is in a way which the people here can understand.

According to the 1935 auditor's report of the City of Peterborough the amount of taxation was $928,905, and we know there are people in the city who found their share of it hard enough to pay. Some could not pay at all.

Paying that amount of taxation required the efforts of all the property owners in Peterborough, and it was less than a million dollars.

The people who are on strike in Detroit are dropping each day more than the collectable taxes in our city for a year.

How Could a Judge Do It?

Glencoe, a village in Western Ontario had a horse deal case in its division court, and claim for $40 on an unpaid note for the balance of the deal was dismissed, and $10 was allowed out of a counterclaim for $25 brought by the man who had purchased the horse but afterward returned it as unsatisfactory. We realize that is all somewhat intricate, but horse deals generally are that way.

When this horse was purchased there was a guarantee with him, and that guarantee would have been made verbally. It never would have been reduced to writing. Of that we are certain as can be. It was even so on the Tenth Concession. In this horse deal it was stated the animal would work single or double. And that of course is taken for granted. It was a point always stressed even on the Tenth Concession. We never yet heard of a work horse traded or sold which would not work double or single, which would not lay so heavy against the tugs that there was danger of pulling the ends off the whiffletrees, and the horse was always sound in limb, had good hocks, was a stranger to the heaves and had a great set of teeth.

People who had horses were always bent on trading them. The wisdom of many years had not sufficiently rested upon us to participate in the horse trading or selling on the Tenth Concession. Such deals were always in the hands of the elders, and occasionally the hired man would chip in. The younger fry had to be content to look and listen from a respectful distance. There it was that the apprenticeship in such matters was supposed to be served and mastered. It may have been the elders in the camp, mindful of impressions and statements which might register and remain as a sore spot in the adolescent mind, preferred that youth stand a little to one side so the full force of all claims and statements would not be plainly audible. Grandfather, we know, was a God-fearing man and in him the quantity of visible wickedness was a picayune amount, but when he got thoroughly immersed in a spell of horse trading there came upon him a certain exuberance as he chanted the praises of his animal and also a slowness of tongue when he was moved to make mention of what might appear to be a touch of poor stepping from spavin or symptoms of a greasy leg. The strong points of the horse were permanent fixtures, while the defects were but passing ailments which might be cured by a change of air from the Tenth to the Twelfth Concession.

We learn a Judge went to Glencoe to settle the horse deal dispute there. Just how a Judge could learn to do that we are at a loss to know. Never could he have secured the information out of many law books, no matter how thick or how impressive their binding. Making a horse deal used to be an art, a gift, or something like that. One had to be wounded financially several times before becoming master of the business, and one had to find out that the horse which was prepared to work single or double would kick and balk and try to bite off a thumb and a couple of fingers each time the bit was put in his mouth. So we are moved to marvel at a Judge being able to enter troubled Glencoe and there proceed to adjust matters between two sets of horse traders. He must be something like the advocate who wandered into Shakespeare's court, and of him it was said that a Daniel had come to judgment.

Belated—But Sincere

Peterborough Examiner notes that "weekly newspapers want the Ontario Government to publish at the end of each session of the Legislature a summary of the legislation passed. This seems to be belated endorsation of something the Sentinel-Review advocated on May 12, 1934.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

How that man in Woodstock knows just on what day of the week or what month or year he has written this, that or something else, is more than we understand. Never have we mastered that art; never do we hope to do so.

If our endorsation of something he wrote in May of 1934 (pardon—to be exact, on the 12th of May) is somewhat belated we hope it will be none the less welcome. We believe the case presented by the weekly newspapers is sound enough, and it would be money well spent for the government at the end of its session to publish a concise summary of changes which have been made in existing laws and regulations. We believe it is true that in the maze of discussion and of amendments and of voting, the fact is often overlooked or unknown by the people generally that a change in some existing legislation has actually taken place and will become effective shortly. To advise the people of such changes through the newspapers would be business like, informative and entirely commendable.

According to London medical men boys and girls of today are taller and heavier than their fathers and mothers were at the same age. There does not seem to be anything particularly new in the discovery. Children have always regarded themselves as bigger than their parents.

Edmonton school teachers administered 565 strappings during November and December. This is an age of statistics. We know such figures were never given out at the little school on The Tenth Concession, and the boastful report of most of the boys was "Aw, she can't hurt."

PLANNING

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Some enterprising little jay, sent me a book the other day, about some gay resort; it said right now that I should plan, about my summer coat of tan, likewise my dish of sport.

¶ And he showed pictures of a lake, and picnic parties filled with cake, and others at their ease; there were no ants or spiders there, and everything looks peaceful, fair, likewise there are no fleas.

¶ I gazed upon the thing a while, it made me grin and also smile, I almost planned to go; and then I thought of days between, the picture did not look so green, I had to holler whoa.

¶ I must pay something on the rent, I can't stand off that splendid gent, the one who sells me coal; I owe on my red underwear, and on the Sunday pants I wear, in fact I'm in the hole.

¶ And long before glad days will come, there are some chores which must be done, I'm shackled and I'm bound; my ground in patches must be laid, and with my goodly neighbor's spade, I'll dig into the ground.

¶ I can't think yet of holidays, I'll have to count the weeks and pays, must be a thrifty man; and if I find my ducats low, why then in summer time I'll go—and sponge on Uncle Dan.

BECOMING A HABIT.

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

IN SPITE of recovery, relief remains one of the major and most difficult problems in Canada. The reduction of relief, in our opinion, cannot be hurried. If pressed too rapidly, it will only leave in its train difficult and troublesome problems.

There has always been in every city and town a number of unemployed or unemployable persons. At one time these people were mainly taken care of by voluntary charitable agencies. For a number of years now they have been taken care of by Governmental agencies and public funds. It will be neither easy nor wise to throw such people back on their own resources.

At the same time there can be no question that with many persons relief has become a habit. To break that habit of dependence a certain amount of pressure will be required to drive them out in search of jobs.

WHEN BUYING POTATOES

Editor Examiner:

Sir: When potatoes are priced at from fifty cents to one dollar per 90 lb. sack, the citizens are not inclined to be too exact in regard to the standards set by government, as to what constitutes a sack of potatoes offered for sale on the market. But when the price runs as high as $1.50 per sack, the purchaser becomes a bit of a critic, and is likely to demand a better quality as to size, cleanliness, bruising, and the odd evidence of rot.

The writer purchased a sack on the market two weeks ago from a sample bag which the vendor had on display, and for which he asked the price of $1.50 per sack. These were of extra large size, very clean, washed in fact, and the only objection made at the time was as to the size, as extra sized potatoes are likely to have hollow hearts. When these were later delivered, they were found to be much stained and dirty, of all sizes, none as large as the sample, and when being prepared many were found partly rotten, others with dark streaks running through, which would later develope rot, and therefore could not be used: and quite a percentage were too small for use.

Of course, the sample sack was not the one delivered. There is a standard set by government decree and all sacks of potatoes offered for sale are supposed to be properly tagged. So far as that goes it does not give the purchaser any safeguard unless the supplies offered from time to time are inspected by a government officer. When potatoes are bringing the grower such a price as they are today bringing on the market it should be expected of him that he would take the time to select his stock when bagging them for sale, instead of shovelling the spuds from the bin into the sacks regardless of size or of quality, and then selecting a sack of the best in the bin and washing them clean for a display on the market. Purchasers would do well to obtain name and address of vendor from whom purchases are made, so they can be proceeded against.

THINKS IT PROPER

Editor Examiner:

Sir: I was more than pleased to notice in Tuesday evening's issue of your paper the suggestion made by Alderman Gordon that we tender Senator Fallis a civic banquet. I cannot understand why this was not done two years ago by the Mayor and Aldermen in office at that time. It was certainly lack of good judgement on their part not to recognize in Senator Fallis a leading woman in the Dominion of Canada and the honor which she has brought to our good city.

I consider Alderman Gordon has shown himself a big man when you consider the fact that he being a prominent Liberal has disregarded politics in this case and desires to recognize merit and ability in a prominent Conservative. I wish to congratulate Mayor Macdonald and his council for endorsing Alderman Gordon's suggestion. Thanking you Mr. Editor

EDUCATED IGNORANCE

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Hoping to acquire knowledge upon unemployment and kindred questions, I listened to a lengthy address on the subject by an M. P. The speech was well delivered, the choice of words good; it bristled with statistics, carefully qualified by innumerable provises etc. As a source of information on cause or cure, it was as barren as a heap of furnace slag. In marked contrast, listen to the few simple words of an illiterate countryman. "The country is not 'run right.'" Could anything be more to the point? The wisdom of this unlearned man knew better than to blame the Creator: he saw clearly that our troubles were caused by the abject folly of our legislators, which indeed passeth knowledge. We read, "though thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar....yet will not his foolishness depart from him," and though I hesitate to include all our legislators in that incurable class, their childlike faith in the efficiency of tariffs, taxes, etc., to encourage and stimulate trade and commerce, ludicrous if it were not so tragic, warrants more than a doubt of their fitness to conduct public business.

With the unemployment problem unsolved, to suggest immigration from the British Isles to Canada is folly. The best of such settlers would be faced with a more or less extended apprenticeship before fitting in, and if their means should first fail, will be discouraged, flock to the cities, to add to the unemployed. Better make farming conditions profitable to our citizens who are qualified to take it on. This can be done by abolishing all taxes upon labor and labor products, taking for public revenue the unimproved rental value of all lands, giving to labor all it can earn and to the community all it is entitled to. Lest any who sit in the seats of the mighty scoff at this plan, let them, with hand on mouth, think for a moment on the chaos their policy has produced, with worse to follow.

WRONG TIME OF YEAR

Editor Examiner:

Sir: For several years the question of when would be the dead line of the procuring of auto licenses has been before the public. The final date has varied from year to year apparently according to the humor of the Minister of Highways.

But the facts are that from the first of December and on through the Christmas season of each year, through advertisements and otherwise, the public are made conscious that if they wish to run their cars and trucks after the New Year they are faced with immediate out-lay of from $10.00 to in many instances several hundred dollars according to the number and type of license required.

I am informed on very good authority that the total amount collected in Ontario is the handsome sum of $8,856,378.91 and in Hamilton office alone $525,000 was collected last year.

As a merchant my contention is that the withdrawal of those sums of money mentioned at the Christmas and New Year season, when normally family expenditures coupled with fuel requirements are at a high peak is very detrimental to the retail business and embarrassing to a great many car owners. And not only is the retail trade affected for if these huge sums of money were not collected by our Ontario Government just at that particular time, it would not be hard to believe that at least one half of those amounts would be spent for other commodities and thus clearing the merchants' shelves, result in large orders for the manufacturers and more work for their employees.

I know the argument, "Well it has to be collected some time." Of course it has, but why not in June or July when there is less unemployment, more building activity and the farmers have money coming in from their early crops and the fuel question is out of the way? I believe even the gasoline companies would benefit as less cars would be withdrawn from use.

In a recent newspaper item Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, is quoted as saying "that there is not likely to be any change in the date of collecting this automobile license tax as the Government needs the money." What does our Government save by imposing this tax on us at this inopportune time? Simply interest on the money at possible three or four per cent. per annum. What is that compared to the detrimental effect on business which I have pointed out?

Our Governments are elected to serve the best interest of the people they represent and I believe that if those interested in having this date changed were to write their representatives or the Hon. Mr. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, emphatically stating their wishes in this matter that proper consideration would be given to a change of date for next year.

At least I should like to see the question opened up for discussion by the press of our province.

Using Up Waste Land.

(From the Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

GEORGE H. Corsan, swimmer and naturalist of Toronto, makes the suggestion that boys living on farms might find a profitable side line in the breeding of wild animals or birds. Mr. Corsan has specialized in growing nut-bearing trees at Islington and he has collected quite a lot of information on kindred subjects. He points out that raising wild game does not require much capital at the beginning, therefore any farm boy, in a district where waste land is available, could start in a small way and eventually own a game farm that might have a revenue of $5,000 a year.

It is well known that many farm boys become tired of the monotony that is inescapable where routine work is concerned. Give these youngsters an undertaking such as raising pheasants, mink, foxes or wild ducks and in the majority of cases there would be new enthusiasm brought to bear on the task. It is pointed out that a boy could readily find waste land in almost any part of Canada. It might be on the farm owned by his parents or a neighbor. Wild game would always command good prices, and while there are restrictions upon sale, it is announced today that the Ontario government is considering modification of the regulations to permit disposal of pheasants on the open market. The fur of wild animals is always in demand and the business of raising foxes, minks, marten and rabbits for commercial purposes has been sufficiently exploited to establish that it can be done successfully.

Under conditions where the orthodox farming is somewhat discouraging in possibilities, the switch to game or fur-bearers might offer opportunities to enterprising and industrious youth of the rural areas. In any event it is an idea that might be studied by boys and girls as well.

STILL TO BE BUILT.

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

THERE IS food for thought in the perfectly accurate contention of a writer in the Philadelphia Messenger that the world has yet to see either a Christian country or a Christian city.

A Christian city, he says would be a city without slums, without jails, without poverty, without unemployment, without injustice, without drunkenness, without vice, without jealousy, without hatred, without bitterness.

A Christian country, the same writer holds, would be a country without guns, without luxury for the few and hunger for the many, without bribery without graft, without oppression.

And in neither a Christian country nor a Christian city, it might be added, would there be presented the spectacle of Christian ministers and Christian people jockeying for personal advantage or attacking other Christian ministers and people because they happen to disagree with them on doctrinal grounds.

Human nature being what it is, we will probably never see the ideal Christian community which has been pictured.

ARE WE QUITTERS?

(La Nouvelliste, Three Rivers)

OUR chief fault is that we are quitters. We gave up the game too soon. It would be better for us to have less talent and more tenacity and perseverance. Let us not be afraid of large and wide views. Let us look around us. Who are they who carry weight in Canada? Is it not the ones who know how to ask, to ask always, to ask insistently, to do more than ask, to demand consistently. Edouard Drummont, if memory serves, wrote: "Liberty is a thing to be conquered." The same thing may be said of our rights and of the respect which is due them. All these things must be conquered in stern battle, every day and every moment.

IN BETTER TASTE.

(Kitchener Record)

IMMEDIATELY after the abdication of King Edward, recently, a Hollywood executive was reported to have cabled an offer of $1,000,000 or so for the appearance of the ex-king and Mrs. Simpson in a screen romance.

To most people, undoubtedly, this breach of good taste revealed the extent to which some film executives would go for publicity.

But another incident has occurred which helps offset this unpleasant impression. Following the death of a young airline hostess, in a plane crash, a Hollywood producer has announced that he has deleted from his new picture a number of scenes in which the girl appeared, sending the negatives to the bereaved family.

That he scorned the opportunity to cash in on the morbid curiosity of fans should help revive faith in filmland ethics.

POTATO PRICES ADVANCE, BUT STRIKE DENIED

Evidences Of Holdout However Are Seen In Western Areas And Ottawa

$1.00 TO $1.75 BAG

Maritime Samples Draw Thirty To Sixty Cents More

TORONTO, Jan. 16 (CP)—Western Ontario farmers may be a bit shy of potatoes and in some cases may be withholding sale for better prices but that doesn't mean they are on strike.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said today if owners of certain stocks hold them until the price goes up "we don't call it a strike."

"Farmers may be holding their potatoes for a higher market and some may call that a strike and all such sorts of nonsense. But what is unusual about a man holding his goods until the price goes up" the minister wanted to know.

"Whether the judgment of farmers in holding potatoes off the market now is good or bad, I wouldn't say offhand," he added. "There are indications of a higher market soon. There are good storage facilities in Western Ontario and the farmers have nothing to worry about."

No Strike at Brantford

The minister's statement was backed up by reports from potato-growing areas in several parts of the province. At Brantford potatomen said although crops were light they moved well and there was no evidence of any "strike."

Prices jumped at Niagara Falls but there was no shortage, dealers said. Galt buyers said farmers in that district were not withholding the remaining part of their supplies in the hope of better prices.

Potatoes prices at Peterborough advanced from $1.50 to $1.75 a bag but supplies were reported as "plentiful." At Kitchener, however, farmers were not offering their tubers for sale at current prices.

In Ottawa, dealers said there was evidence of a "sit-down" strike on the part of district potato growers. There was considerable variance between prices of Ottawa district potatoes and those shipped from the Maritime provinces.

Prices in Ottawa were $1 to $1.20 for 80-lb bags, while from $1.50 to $1.60 was being asked for New Brunswicks and $1.65 to $1.80 for Prince Edward Island stocks.

WAR IN FAR EAST DANGER TO CANADA

Canadians Likely To Hesitate Before Hurrying Into Foreign War

Canadians are likely to hesitate long before hurrying to Britain's aid in any future war of an imperialistic nature, Professor E. W. McInnes of the University of Toronto told members of the Friday Night Supper Club in an informal address at their supper meeting last evening.

Speaking of Canada's national defence, he said Canadians are now thinking in terms of Canada's good fortune in being isolated from the troubles of mad-house Europe and are not anxious to forego that blessing by affording carte blanche support for Britain. Britain may easily become entangled in a war in connection with her imperial interests which would have no bearing on the welfare of Canada, he said.

He suggested as the most imminent danger of war for Canada lies in the Far East. If Britain tangles with Japan over the conflict of British and Japanese imperial interests in the Pacific, Canada will likely be involved due to its exposure to the Pacific, he said.

Eggs Are Higher On Farmers' Market

Eggs were inclined toward a slightly higher level on the Farmers Market today. They ranged from 22 to 27 cents a dozen but the large volume offered suggested that sensational increase in price is not in prospect.

Butter sold firmly at 27 cents. Chickens were 20 cents a pound and a few turkeys went for 25 to 28 cents.

Potatoes sold from $1.60 to $1.80 with $1.75 as the price most frequently asked. Beef cuts were 8 and 10 and pork cuts 12 and 14 cents. Apples were plentiful at 25 to 40 cents a peck. Dark and clear honey brought 10 and 15 cents a pound.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 16. — A burst of selling in late dealings that found the market lacking support sent wheat prices tumbling on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday. The close was at or near the day's lowest levels, 1⅞c to 1½c lower. Comparative strength of the distant month was a feature of the quiet trade.

Prompting the sell-off toward the last were 1¼d declines at Chicago, 1½d at Liverpool, and sharp setbacks in other important markets. Profit-takers were among active sellers.

Supporting export sales of 400,000 bushels of Canadian wheat yesterday failed to stem the recession in the face of the heaviest exports from Argentina in any one week since 1934. Clearances totalled 5,711,000 bushels, compared with 646,000 bushels cleared in the same week of last year.

Cash-grains spreads were easy in dull trading. Coarse-grains prices fell off with wheat. A 3½c tumble in May barley highlighted action in that market.

WALLACE HARVEY RE-ELECTED HEAD GAME ASSOCIATION

Eleven Resolutions Are Sent On To Fish and Game Committee

ASK SHORTER SEASONS

Eleven of thirteen resolutions passed at the annual general meeting of Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, held under the chairmanship of President Wallace Harvey on Friday evening are to go forward to the Fish and Game committee of the provincial legislature.

Framed with the chief object of game and fish conservation and stressing the urgent need of the restocking of local waters, the resolutions were framed at a recent meeting of the executive.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Honorary president: T. P. Lancaster, M.L.A.; President: Wallace Harvey. Vice-presidents: Fred C. Marshall and Hy Wood. Secretary-treasurer: E. A. Outram. Executive Committee: Messrs. Frank Barrett, Laurie Mitchell, Al Sharpe, E. G. Wagar, J. W. Geraghty, Charles Kingan, F. Meeks, A. L. Elliott, Clarence Neal, Sid Black, Max Humphries, Herb Routley, R. A. Green.

Named As Representative

One of the thirteen resolutions referred to above also appointed Mr. Marshall as representative to the Kawartha Lakes District Tourist Association, and another expressed the thanks of the organization to J. K. Hughes for his generous cooperation in supplying transportation for Mr. Werner, the Ontario government biologist who was in the district last summer to make a survey of local waters.

The eleven remaining resolutions which are to go forward to the provincial government were severally carried, and made recommendations in effect as follows:

It is asked that Game and Fisheries Act be amended to make it illegal for guides when working for hire or gain as guides to be included as a member of a fishing party in connection with the days count of fish.

The association again requests the Department to establish a fish hatchery in the Kawartha district, because it is claimed fishing has declined greatly with a consequent loss of tourist revenue.

Endorse Recommendations

Full approval is given by the association in another resolution to recommendations of Mr. Werner, government biologist for setting aside certain portions of lakes in the Kawarthas to serve as breeding grounds for bass and maskinonge, and early action is requested.

More game wardens for the district are asked during the spawning season, and it is asked that the season for shooting ducks be set forward to September 15 to November 10 (both dates inclusive).

It is proposed that the government enact legislation making it illegal for persons to use lights in catching frogs in Peterborough county, and along the marshes of Rice Lake during the duck shooting season, because it is claimed frog-hunting with lights has in past seasons spoiled the duck shooting for hundreds of hunters.

The deer hunting season in Parry Sound district is the subject of a further resolution, and the government is being asked to make the season in that district for the same period as that applying in the district above the French and Mattawa rivers, since the present season is too late in opening, and the freezing of rivers and lakes makes it most hazardous for hunting parties.

Ask Shorter Seasons

Other resolutions ask that pickerel fishing in Peterborough, Northumberland, Durham and Hastings counties be closed annually on October 15 and that lake trout fishing be closed from October 1 to July 1.

"That since Section 39 of the special fishery regulations provides that it is not legal to spear fish in the waters of the counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Northumberland and Durham, the Department be requested to make it illegal to possess a fish spear in this district in the vicinity where fish are obtained.

"That the game and fisheries law be amended to make it an offence to offer game fish for sale, since such a change in the law in the opinion of this association would stop much of the illegal fishing in the Kawarthas since it would check the trafficking in fish and make opportunities for the apprehension of poachers less difficult."

President's Appeal

In accepting the presidency for his second term, Tom Brown said the position was no one man's job. "It is as much yours as it is mine. I will do the best I can and I ask for all the assistance you can give."

Mr. Brown said that the directors and the associate directors had cooperated splendidly last year, and with the same help the Exhibition of 1937 should be a big success.

The federal Department of Agriculture had applied their regulations relating to pedigrees of livestock as required for a Class A show with exacting strictness, and as Peterborough's dates were the earliest in eastern Ontario the effect of this "tightening" was felt rather severly here for the reason that some of the exhibitors did not get their certificates back in time from Ottawa. Some exhibitors who had arrived in the city with their stock, and several of them actually on the grounds, were greatly disappointed, but it was a circumstance for which the Board was not to blame. Mr. Brown said he expected that this year there would be no trouble of that kind.

Carries On Peace Work

Red Cross Society Courses In Home Nursing And Nutrition

The Red Cross Society, which did so much in war time to alleviate the sufferings of soldiers, carries on its peacetime activities with unremitting energy. Nutrition classes and Home Nursing classes form two of its major efforts at the present time. Both are designed for educational purposes in the preparation of food with the greatest amount of nutrition available, and also for the care of suffers attacked by the many diseases to which mankind is heir.

The Nutrition course will include eight lessons, to be given on Thursday evenings at half past seven o'clock in the kitchen of the Vocational School, in charge of Mrs. C. B. Muir and Miss Aileen Morgan, both of whom are graduate dietitians.

There is a growing interest in the modern knowledge with regard to nutrition and the part it plays in building up and protecting health among those who are willing to practice proper habits in eating. At each lesson in this course, a good eating habit will be discussed.

At the initial meeting in the course, held on Thursday evening of this week, and conducted by Miss M. S. McCready of the Provincial department of the Red Cross Society, much interest was displayed in the value of whole grains in diet. Several recent examples of research work were cited to illustrate the important tonic values of Vitamin B. The richest natural source of Vitamin B is the wheat germ, of which many people get very little, or none at all. Instead, the germ and bran portions of our grains are devoted to the feeding of farm animals while the human family under-nourishes itself on many white-flour products.

A whole-wheat porridge, reinforced by a little bran, flaxseed and wheat germ, was made such a mixture having a splendid effect in nourishing the tissues.

Emphasis was laid on the fact that, unless we constantly nourish our body tissues with the best foods, we cannot hope to have a long healthy life free from disease. Good feeding is just as important for adults as for children.

Home Nursing Classes

The modern idea is to prevent disease, rather than to wait and then try to cure it. The Chief Medical Health Officer in England has said: "A nation's health is a nation's wealth," and this is realized by all, especially workers, when an epidemic rages and time and money is lost through illness. The business man, too, knows just how much money it costs him when workers are inefficient and are unable, either mentally or physically, to maintain a desired standard.

How many of us know what the common cold costs humanity?

The course in Home Nursing carried on by the Red Cross Society has given women, girls and boys a knowledge of the laws of physical and mental hygiene, as well as the self-confidence necessary to pass from the defensive to the offensive in the war against man's lifelong enemies: Dirt, Disease and Ignorance.

These lessons are not intended to supplant nursing courses or equip the student for the work of a graduate nurse. They are intended to interest the students in keeping well themselves; in creating wholesome environments; in checking the spread of disease by an early recognition of symptoms; in enabling precautionary measures to be taken to banish pestilence by eliminating the causes; in awakening a community consciousness and enlightened public opinion for group action against these menaces; in showing the expectant mother the importance of caring for herself in the interest of her child, and in safeguarding him later, so that there may arise a happier and healthier people.

Over 33,000 women and girls in Ontario have completed the Red Cross Home Nursing training since the inception of the courses in 1935.

The course, which is available to every woman, comprises twelve lecture demonstrations in as many weeks. Eight of the classes are taught by graduate nurses, three by doctors, one by a graduate dietitian. These assistants, all leaders in their professions, generously give of their time and attention in carrying on this vital work.

ARCADIA, Wis., Jan. 16 (C.P.).—Farmer Edward Sauer's luck has changed.

Last spring he suffered a broken hip when a cow kicked him. During his six months' stay in a hospital he suffered live stock losses. His 22-year-old son died.

Soon after his discharge he broke his hip again while working over a valued horse which fractured a leg in a fall. The horse was destroyed.

Sauer's bad luck has been routed at last. His friends came through with $2,000 in cash, and cancelled debts.

IF BABY IS CROSS FIND OUT WHY

HEALTHY BABIES are not cross. Your baby should not be cross. If he is, then something in his little system is "out of order". Probably Baby's Own Tablets can promptly "put it right". Mrs. H——, of Fenelon Falls, had the experience. She writes: "My little girl was irritable, feverish and sometimes sick at her stomach—what a relief it was, after giving her Baby's Own Tablets, to see how much better she was."

No matter how delicate your baby may be these little sweet-tasting tablets cannot harm him. Easy to take. Promptly effective. Free from opiates and stupefying drugs. Analyst's report on every package.

Just as prompt in clearing up simple fevers, diarrhoea, colds, constipation, simple croup, colic, teething troubles and other minor ills of babyhood.

Never be without a full box of Baby's Own Tablets. Sickness so often strikes in the night.

If you are not satisfied with the results your druggist will give your money back.

Special New Year Service

St. Paul's Church W. M. S. Holds An Inspiring Meeting

The first meeting for the New Year of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was almost entirely devoted to the service prepared for the occasion by two members of the Provincial Board of British Columbia. Hymns, Scripture readings and prayers were all in keeping with the different themes, the first of which was "Worship," with a Psalm read by Mrs. W. Lyburn, followed by prayer of "Confession" by the president, Mrs. J. Dutton. Passages from St. John on "The Holy Spirit" were read by Miss Nina Davidson, with prayers by Mrs. W. C. Steinkrauss and Miss E. Simpson.

The story of "Saul of Tarsus," the "Call to Service," was read by Miss E. Hall; an appeal for blessing on the W.M.S. work carried on in mission stations, schools and hospitals was made by Miss E. Walker; for overseas work in India, China, Japan, Formosa and British Guiana, by Miss Lees; for King and country and world peace, by Mrs. M. B. Chenhall.

The closing theme was "Assurance of Power and Victory," followed by a benediction by the president.

Preceding the special service, a short business session was held when reports were heard. These proved very encouraging, the allocation for 1936 having been reached.

Lauds Work Of Y.M.C.A.

Commending the Young Men's Christian Association for excellent service to the community and to young men in particular, A. R. Kennedy, managing editor of The Examiner, spoke to the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. at their regular meeting held in the Board Room of the 'Y' on Friday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, in the chair.

Mr. Kennedy lauded the association for its work in preparing youth for future activities. He said the Y.M.C.A. also afforded a secure and comfortable home for young men at a small cost, illustrating his theme by references to several who had come to his notice and who had received this assistance from the 'Y'. He closed by congratulating the ladies on their part in furthering this good work.

The ladies decided to hold a community bridge party on February 5th, with tea served at the home of Mrs. H. Martin, Monaghan Road, the funds to be used for upkeep and re-decoration of the dormitories at the 'Y'.

Game Banned: LONDON.—Gravesend Town Council has just passed a by-law banning the obstructive playing of tip-cat in the streets. Play the game, says Council, but play it on the proper grounds. The by-law was none too popular. Fans of tip-cat set up a cry of what about the other sports, such as: Hopscotch, hunch-cuddy-hunch, bab-the-bowster, dobblers, three-holes and cock-a-roost.

PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, CANADA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1937

Out Of Date: LONDON.—Military circles are wondering if the 'bull's-eye' target isn't out of date for experienced shots. It is suggested in some quarters that for trained soldiers landscapes and other targets resembling the character of the target engaged in the field should be used. The bull's-eye would be retained for recruits.

NO HOLD OUT IN POTATOES FARMERS SAY

If Toronto Wholesalers Want Potatoes Get Them In This District

RETAIL $1.60 TO $1.80

If Toronto wholesalers want Ontario potatoes they can get lots in the Peterborough region at $1.30 to $1.50 a bag regardless of the report that Ontario potato growers are planning to hold their product for a higher price, inquiries today indicated. The tubers were to be bought retail at $1.60 to $1.80 on the Farmers Market this morning and no shortage was apparent.

The Farmers Market price of $1.60 to $1.80 for the various grades represents an increase of 25 cents in the past two weeks but no talk of withholding potatoes from the market in an effort to boost prices was to be heard. One local group of chain stores bought 50 bags for $1.50.

Walter J. Oke, large local wholesaler, scouted the idea of a voluntary hold-out on Ontario potatoes. He said he believed wholesalers can buy all they wish for $1.25 to $1.40 to pass on to the retail trade at a price well under the price of Maritime potatoes. No. 1 grade New Brunswick potatoes were quoted $1.68 f.o.b. Peterborough this morning, he reported.

Agricultural Representative A. D. Runions gave the opinion the Toronto report of a hold-out was unfounded. Potatoes are perishable and local growers are not going to let their potatoes rot in the hope of $2 a bag later in the Spring while Maritime potatoes flood the market at $1.75 and $1.80 retail, he said.

BOY SCOUTS TO AID FISH CONSERVATION

Given Honorary Membership In Peterborough Fish And Game Association

In the belief that they can be of great assistance in helping towards the conservation of game and fish, Boy Scouts of the city were on Friday evening given honorary membership in Peterborough Fish and Game Association.

The decision made on motion of Fred C. Marshall, seconded by Harry Lacheur received the hearty endorsation of all present at the annual general meeting of the association.

S. R. Alger, president of the Ontario Federation of Anglers said that the Oshawa Fish and Game Association made the Boy Scouts of that city honorary members of their organization, and he declared the boys turned out over 200 strong to receive their memberships.

A suggestion made by secretary-treasurer E. A. Outram that an essay contest be staged by the association throughout the city and rural schools of the district, in order to get the children interested in such matters as outdoor sportsmanship and conservation of fish and game, was also adopted on motion of Mr. Marshall.

Details in connection with the essay contest are to be worked out by the executive of the association at an early date, and it is probable that the co-operation of the educational authorities throughout the district as well as the publishers of daily and weekly newspapers will be sought.

Calcutt Ale And Porter Souvenirs

Here's a new one for those endless chapters of the incredible which have made a chap named Ripley wealthy. Art Johnston of the Windsor Hotel recently came by two bottles of malt beverages of an ancient Peterborough vintage. One was of Calcutt's champagne ale and its companion Calcutt's porter. The old brewery across the bridge was demolished a few years ago after a long vacancy, but these two bottles had been gathering dust and age and potency in the cellar of a local home. The "believe it or not" aspect of the story is that ale and porter could have been left so long uncorked. Imaginable would be a home where black bottles would be brought up to the sink and emptied down the pipe—the lead pipe of the plumbing system. But, to have been utterly diregarded so long was a refinement of disinterest and probably distaste. A doctor recently heard about them some how or other in the course of a call, and the story goes that he got them as souvenirs, on the strength of his domestic standing, and exchanged modern goods for the old stuff, "new lamps for old". And so they were presented to Art Johnston and some of the Rose Room visitors are told the story and marvel at it.

BASKETBALL UNDERWAY

Doing battle with three teams from Cobourg C.I., the three P.C.V.S. teams, Seniors, Juniors and the Girls' Senior squad, opened their annual basketball activities in the school gymnasium yesterday afternoon and evening. The manner in which they fared is reported elsewhere in this edition.

Good turnouts of spectators witnessed the games and the high interest in the inter-school rivalry justified adherence to the policy of holding the home basketball on Friday afternoons and evenings as far as possible. Cobourg C.I. was represented by a highly-vocal cheering section.

The opening games climaxed a couple of weeks of intensive practice for all three teams. The Junior Boys' team was chosen from the following squad: Captain Don Sedgewick, Harlow Cutting, Jack Dougherty, Ormie Weir, Ralph Johnston, Kenneth Gillespie, Bob Dyer, Ted Cragg, Jack Craig, Nelson Foster. Coach H. A. Craig master-minded operations from the side-lines.

Coach Dorothy Brisbin of the Girls' Senior team had a larger squad to make her selection from. Those who have been turning out regularly are: Mary MacPherson, Margaret Lundy, Beverley Saunders, Joan Ottewell, Isabel Wray, Ruth Ellis, Linden Reid, Marion Juby, Peggy Lawless, Jean Fowler and Doris Glover.

Coach Harvard Bamforth trotted out a squad which included several names of rugby note when the feature contest of the evening went on at 8.15 o'clock. Led by Jack (Gump) Gemmell, the senior squad included Clarence Davern, Herb. (Nip) Galley, Gordon (Gus) Gonsolus, Hymie Smith, Stuart Laing, Gordon Johnston, Bill (Spud) Turner and Adolphe (Spark) LeClair.

ATHLETES FROLIC

A dance sponsored by the Boys' Athletic Association and the Girls' Athletic Association followed the games in the gymnasium. Bill Wheeler and his "Collegiate Swingcopators" provided the music. This aggregation, of wide fame through the school, have lately been advertising themselves as the "Doctors of Your Musical Troubles."

Hockey is also one of the school activities which have been set in motion since commencement of the Spring term. The boys have entered a juvenile team in the South End City League. The score so far for P.C.V.S. is two games played and two wins. Jack Patterson of Special Commercial is the coach, business manager and trainer. The squad includes Bud Driscoll. Bill King, Ernest Ward, Steve Scumrik, Bill Dorris, Harold Morrow, Don Morrow, Al King, Bob Parnall and Ralph Parnall.

SNAP-SHOTTERS

The Camera Club resumed activities for the new year last Wednesday afternoon. The president, Bill Donaldson, has been on the sick list so Jean Fiett has taken charge of the meetings. V. R. Henry gave instruction on bordering snapshots artistically.

Money for the purchase of uniforms for the girls' basketball team was granted by the Students' Council last Monday. The plea was made by Isabel Wray, president of the G.A.A. She stated that the present uniforms were not to be trusted in active movements.

The president of the combined glee clubs announced from the auditorium stage Friday morning that an operetta has been selected and approved for the annual school dramatic offering. It will be staged in the latter part of February. Rehearsals commenced yesterday afternoon when the instructor, Martin B. Chenhall, outlined the plot and played musical extracts. Last year's operetta had its setting in the south. This year the production has a far different setting as may be gathered from the title: "In Old Vienna."

The orchestra practiced Tuesday and Thursday in preparation for the Literary Society meeting to be held next Friday. These musicians have been working diligently under the direction of A. J. Weames.

HIGH SCHOOL HOWLER

All but the "freshies" have received the results of their Christmas examinations. Some of the teachers have discussed the papers in class and many interesting answers have come to light. For instance, a question on a first form British History examination requested that the student give the location of Agincourt, scene of the battle between the British and French during the Hundred Years' War. The scholar, however, evidently unnerved by his first Collegiate examination, wrote that Agincourt was located on No. 7 highway near Toronto. The marker didn't seem to think the student had the right Agincourt for some reason or other.

Subscription lists for the Echoes, annual school publication, were passed around each form this week. Although the students have had only five days to practice their salesmenship, 976 copies have already been ordered. The objective is 1,500 copies.

The school has been divided into sections of three or four classes each. Points are given for each copy ordered. First, second and third forms receive four points per copy, the upper forms, two points. At the end of each day, 10 points are awarded as a bonus to the leading group. The reward will be a dance to be tendered the winning group. Refreshments will be served by the two lowest groups in that winning section.
